Translations of the Sacred Books of the East . . . 503

INTRODUCTION.

ATTENTIVE readers of the Sacred Books of the East have had ample opportunities of becoming acquainted with the Zoroastrian scriptures, so far as these have been preserved by the Parsis. In vols. iv, xxiii, and xxxi they have translations of all the texts extant in the original language of the Avesta, excepting a few fragments which are not yet collected. And in vols. v, xviii, and xxiv they have translations of later Pahlavi texts, showing how faithfully the old doctrines and legends were handed down by the priests of Sasanian times to their immediate successors. But they will also have noticed that the translators of these texts are well aware of the fact that the texts themselves are mere fragments of the religious writings of the Zoroastrians, which owe their preservation to the circumstance that they were those portions most usually committed to memory by the priesthood, such as the liturgy, sacred myths, and ceremonial laws. The object of the present volume is to add to those fragments all the accessible information, that can be collected from Irânian sources, regarding the contents of the whole Zoroastrian literature in Sasanian times.

It has been long known that this literature was contained in twenty-one Nasks, or treatises, named either from the nature of their contents, or from their initial words, and each having one of the twenty-one words of the Ahunavair attached to it as a kind of artificial reminder of their proper order and number while enumerating them. Very brief statements of the contents of each Nask have also been accessible in manuscripts of the Persian Rivâyats, such as those translated in pp. 419-438 of this volume. And the existence of a much longer account of the Nasks in the Dinkard was ascertained by Haug, who published some extracts from it in 1870, when describing several of the Nasks in the Index to the Pahlavi-Pâzand Glossary. He was unable to do more, on account of the defective state of all modern manuscripts of the Dînkard, in which a large portion of the text of the description of the Nasks, in the eighth and ninth books, is missing in various places without any hint of the omissions. These defects were owing to the abstraction of 52 folios of this part of the Irânian manuscript of the Dînkard, after it was brought to India and before any copy of it had been written; and, even now, two of these folios are still missing, as stated in pp. 262, 270. The importance of recovering these 52 missing folios was due to the fact that they contain the text of Dk. VIII, Chaps. VII, 5–XIX, 36, XXXI, 31–XXXVIII, 19, XLIV, 34–XLVI, 5, and Dk. IX, Chaps. I, 1–XI, 11, XII, 15–XLVII, 17, or nearly half the text of the two books.

Regarding the early history of the Dînkard there exists a detailed statement in the last chapter of its third book, which can now be translated with greater precision than was possible in 1867, when Haug published its Pahlavi text, with an English translation, in his introduction to the Farhang-i Oim-aêvak, or Zand-Pahlavi Glossary. In this historical statement it is evident that §§ 1–8 refer to the traditional history of the Zoroastrian scriptures generally, considered as the original source of the information contained in the Dînkard; but §§ 9–13 may be accepted as the actual history of the compilation of the work itself, the facts of which may, very possibly, have all been within the personal knowledge of the writer of the statement. The Pahlavi text of this statement, as preserved in the manuscripts B and K (see pp. xxxv–xxxviii and 2), may be translated as follows:—

‘1. About the Dînkard scripture (nipîk), from the Exposition of the Good Religion, there is this:—The Dînkard scripture is a work which is adorned with all wisdom, and a publication of the Mazda-worshipping religion. 2. And, first, the work—which was derived from the good religion of those of the primitive faith, and which was the knowledge revealing the good religion of the prophet (vakhshvar) Spîtâmân Zaratûst, whose guardian spirit is revered, and his first disciple through asking and hearing the same revered guardian spirit—is information which is a similitude of enlightenment on every subject from the original light. 3. And those original questions and the decision of the exalted ruler Kaî-Vistâsp to have them written were its origin, and he ordered them to deliver the original to the treasury of Shapîgân¹, and to distribute copies provided. 4. And, after that, he sends a copy to the fortress of documents, to keep the information also there.

‘5. And during the ruin that happened to the country of Irân, and in the monarchy, owing to the evil-destined villain Alexander, that which was in the fortress of documents came to be burnt, and that in the treasury of Shapîgân² into the hands of the Arûmans, and was translated by him even into the Greek language, as information which was connected with the ancients (min pêsîngân padvastakö).

‘6. And that Artakhshatar, king of kings, who was son of Pâpak, came for the restoration of the monarchy of Irân, and the same scripture was brought from a scattered state to one place. 7. The righteous Tôsar of the primitive faith, who was the priest of priests³, appeared with an exposition recovered from the Avesta, and was ordered to complete the scripture from that exposition. 8. He did so accordingly (ham-gûnakö), to preserve a similitude of the splendour of the original enlightenment in the treasury of Shapîgân⁴, and was ordered to distribute copies of the information provided.

‘9. And after the ruin and devastation that came from the Arabs, even to the archives (dîvân) and treasures of the realm, the saintly⁵ Âtûr-farnbag, son of Farukhö-zâd, who became the leader of the orthodox, brought those copies, which were scattered on all sides, and new resources, back from dispersion into union with the archives of his residence; and, through observance and consideration for the Avesta and Zand of the good religion, he made the sayings of those of the primitive faith again a similitude of the illumination (fîrôkö) from that splendour.

³ So in K.

⁵ B has Âtûrpâd inserted here by mistake.

'10. Through the awful displeasure (or defect) and ruin (or injury) that happened to Zaratûst, son of Âtûr-farnbag, who became the leader of the orthodox, even those archives came to devastation, that scripture to dilapidation and dispersion, and the statements (vâkîh) also to obsolescence, perversion, and corruption.

'11. And, after that, I, Âtûrpâd, son of Hêmêd and leader of the orthodox, have likewise written, from their fragments (sûbâra-gânô), a new means of giving assistance to the Mazda-worshipping religion, with much prayer, investigation, and trouble. 12. From whatever was recovered from those dilapidated (visândakô), decayed, worn out, and dust-mingled (khâk-âmêg) archives—and these, too, brought back by taking away, carrying off, and seizing—it is selected, owing to ¹ the assistance of the counselling wisdom of the mighty spirit, for the rediffusion of the words and deeds of the ancients, and of the evidence of the Avesta, for those of the primitive faith. 13. And the increase of knowledge from the good religion, arranged and prescribed in its chapters, is a lustre from encountering that splendour from the enlightenment of the original light primarily composed for the exposition of the good religion, and this which is named is a resemblance by adoption of the thousand chapters of that great original Dînkard². 14. It is perfected by the sacred beings, and transmits the powerful effect which has come upon even that which is the perfect religion of the sufferers³ in this age, and also the coming of the assistance of the soul to the knowledge⁴ of the orthodox; and even reunion with⁵ the rest of Irân is acquaintance with the exposition of the Mazda-worshipping religion, and the reprovding of more resources of a like origin, which will be also due to those whom the Supreme has provided, the disciples of Aîshêdar⁶, son of Zaratûst, for asking again a declaration of⁷ the good religion from Aîshêdar.'

From this statement it appears that the compilation of the Dînkard was commenced by Âtûr-farnbag, son of Farukhō-zâd, one of the leaders or supreme high-priests of the Mazda-worshippers, and was revised and completed by Âtûrpâd, son of Hêmêd, one of his successors. From the Mâdâgân-i gugastak Abâlis we learn that Âtûr-farnbag had a religious disputation with Abâlis in the presence of the Khalîfah Al-Mâmûn, who reigned A.D. 813-833; he must therefore have been compiling the Dînkard during the first half of the ninth century. In the Sikand-gûm-ânîk Vigâr, IV, 107, IX, 3, X, 55, he is also mentioned as a compiler of the Dînkard, but the details there quoted must have been taken from its first two books which are still missing. It is likewise stated at the beginning of both its fourth and fifth books that their contents are derived from his statements, and a similar acknowledgement is made with regard to some of the contents of Chap. CXLII of the third book; so that the evidence of his authorship is very complete. With regard to Âtûrpâd, the completer of the Dînkard, we may safely identify him with the Âtûrpâd, son of Hâmêd, mentioned in Bd. XXXIII, 11 as a contemporary of Zâd-spâram, who flourished at the latter end of the ninth century (see S. B. E., vol. xviii, p. xiv). We have, therefore, every reason to be satisfied that the whole of the Dînkard was compiled during the ninth century.

The history of the transmission of the text of its last seven books, through the last thousand years, down to the present manuscripts, is equally satisfactory, owing to the preservation of a series of colophons appended to the text, of which the first and most important may be translated as follows:—

‘Completed in great joy and full of gratification this last portion of the manuscript of the incomparable, priceless, and unequalled Dînkard, at the place where *it was found and happily disinterred*¹ by us in Asûristân, within the happily prosperous, odoriferous, precious, well-thriving, and glorious Bakdâd of Good Rectitude²; from a copy which, as regards the religion, is just as the leaders of the saintly and orthodox, who were of the family of the saintly Âtûrpâd, son of Mâraspend, (who re-explained knowledge, by five or six well-destined ones, from the pure revelation which is the all-embellished learning of learnings) and the successive leaders of the orthodox (who again provided at different times [ahamvâr] for its restoration, through manuscripts at various places, to maintain reading and investigation therein) had written.

‘I, Mâh-vindâd, son of Naremâhân, son of Vâhrâm, son of Mitrô-âpân, like an adopted son for his own possession, who wrote it, am letting it forth on the day Dên of the month Tîr, the victor, of the year 369 after the year 20 of that Yazdakard, king of kings, who was son of Shatrô-ayâr [2nd July, 1020]¹; in reliance on the pure good religion of the Mazda-worshippers, as regards remembrance of Zaratûst, the Spîtâman with the righteous guardian spirit, and of the genuine achievement of Âtûrpâd, son of Mâraspend; and as regards remembrance of the righteous utterance of blessings for the whole embodied existence by the desirers of righteousness, who are thinkers of good thoughts, speakers of good words, and doers of good deeds; in the worldly existence, through completely-wishful kind regard of the practices of righteousness, they shall unite with the union of the renovation of the universe, and spiritually their pure souls and guardian spirits attain to the supremely great position and eminence, and complete acquirement of recompense, which are in the light that is endless, constantly beneficial, and full of glory, which they shall obtain. This is especially for those saintly and supremely learned men, Âtûrfarnbag, son of Farukhō-zâd, and Âtûrpâd, son of Hêmêd, by whom this priceless² Dînkard scripture was selected so learnedly and (with a pure perception of the spiritual lord, in seizing the cream of the fortunate commentary of³ the good religion) so truly amicably, and fully affectionately for the good creatures and religion, with great advantage for us moderns, and concealed for me who, through eagerness for righteousness, like an adopted son, have happily disinterred this scripture; and even he who reads, and shall make use of it, is reliant and free from doubt about it; and him who shall take a copy from it, and preserves it with propriety, they shall appropriately connect with it.’

(This is followed by a long succession of aphorisms, and the colophon winds up with some threats against those who shall misuse the manuscript.)

As this colophon mentions only the 'last portion' of the Dīnkard, and is appended to the text of Dk. III-IX, it is probable that the first portion of the work, Dk. I, II, had already become separated from the rest within 150 years of its revision and completion. And if Mâh-vindâd did not copy from the original manuscript of Âtûrpâd, he must certainly have done so from a very early transcript.

The second colophon was written by Shatrô-ayâr, son of Êrâishîr, son of Âîrîk, son of Rûstâm, son of Âîrîk, son of Kubâd, son of Âîrân-shah, who completed his copy on the day Âûharmazd of the month Spendarmad in the year 865 after the 20th year of Yazdakard [3rd October, 1516], having transcribed it from a copy written by Mar'zapân, son of Spend-dâd, son of Mar'zapân, son of Mitrô-âpân, son of Spend-dâd, son of Mitrô-âpân, son of Mar'zapân, son of Dahisn-aiyyâr, son of Rôg-vêh, son of Shâh-mard. The date of Mar'zapân's copy may be approximately fixed by observing that his father's first cousin wrote a copy of AV. and Gf., mentioned in K20, in the year 690 of Yazdakard, while his great great granduncle wrote a similar copy, mentioned in MH6, in the Pârsî year 618. If this Pârsî year be reckoned from the era of the 20th year of Yazdakard, as seems probable¹, these dates give 52 years for three generations; and Mar'zapân, living one generation later than the writer of A.Y. 690, may perhaps have written his copy of the Dīnkard about A.Y. 707 [A.D. 1338]; so that there was probably another copyist, intermediate between him and Mâh-vindâd-î Naṣemâhân, of whom no record has been preserved. Shatrô-ayâr concludes his colophon by quoting a long passage from the first colophon, as already stated in p. xxxiv, n. 1, and by acknowledging his obligations to three other persons whom he names. This colophon is the last that now remains attached to the manuscript B, but it was formerly followed by a third colophon, written by the actual writer of B, and preserved in copies transcribed from B since its arrival in India.

This third colophon was written by Mâh-vindâd, son of Vâhrâm, son of Êrdîshîr of Tûrkâbâd, who completed his copy, from that of Shatrô-ayâr, on the day Âvân of the month Khûrdâd in the Pârsî year 1009 after the 20th year of Yazdâkard [21st December, 1659, N. S.]. This copy, which constitutes the manuscript B, was afterwards approved by Vâhrâm, son of Mâh-vindâd, son of Rûstâm, son of Anôshak-rûbân, son of Rûstâm of Tûrkâbâd, who blesses the writer of the second colophon, on the day Tîstar of the month Vohûman in the year 1038 of Yazdâkard [18th August, 1669, N. S.]. It was also finally seen and approved by Rûstâm, son of Gûstâsp, son of Êrdîshîr, who likewise blesses the writer of the second colophon; and the approximate date of this approval may be guessed from the fact that Rûstâm Gûstâsp is known to have copied one manuscript in A. D. 1706, and another in 1741.

Regarding this manuscript B, written in 1659, it appears from Mullâ Fîrûz's Avâgêh Dîn (Bombay, 1830) that Mullâ Bahman, son of Mullâ Behrâm, a Parsi priest of Yazd, brought this manuscript of the Dînkard from Irân to Surat in 1783, and, having shown it to Aspandîârjî Ratanjî-shâh, he lent it to Kâusjî Rustamjî, then Dastûr of Surat, and allowed him to have it copied. Mullâ Bahman had great difficulty in obtaining the return of his manuscript, and when it was returned many folios were missing. It was after this loss of folios that Aspandîârjî had several other copies transcribed from the defective manuscript, to be sent to various persons, and all these copies were therefore equally defective.

This manuscript B, thus defective, afterwards came into the possession of Mullâ Fîrûz, who was high-priest of the Kadmi Parsis in Bombay; and, after his death in 1830, it descended to his successor. In 1875 it belonged to Dastûr Sohrâbjî Rustamjî, high-priest of the Kadmis, through whose courtesy, and that of Dastûr Dr. Jâmâspjî Minochiharjî, it was then lent to me long enough to enable me to copy and collate two-thirds of Dk. III and to collate Dk. IV–IX; and Dastūr Jāmāspji, afterwards, kindly supplied me with a copy of the remainder of Dk. III.

The manuscript has been bound in its defective state, and contains 322 folios, originally fourteen inches high and ten inches wide, written 20 to 22 lines to the page. When complete it appears to have consisted of 392 folios, all numbered in Persian words, but with several blunders, including one of fifty folios, so that the last folio was really numbered 442. Of the 70 folios not bound with the rest of the manuscript, fourteen were lying loose in the volume; forty-three belonged to Dastūr Rustamji Kaikobādji of Nausāri, with a copy of which I was kindly supplied by Dastūr Dr. Peshotanji Behramji of Bombay, who also enabled me to collate it with the original folios; and seven folios were lent to me by Dastūr Dr. Hoshangji Jāmāspji of Poona, for the purpose of copying. The remaining six folios have not been discovered; they comprise the first folio of the manuscript, containing the commencement of Dk. III, which was probably lost before the manuscript arrived in India; also one folio in Dk. VII, two in Dk. IX (see pp. 262, 270 of this volume), and the last two folios of the manuscript, containing the third colophon and final approvals (see p. xxxvi).

I am likewise much indebted to the kindness of Professor Kielhorn, who gave me a modern copy of Dk. IV–IX (with the text in its defective state) which had been prepared at Poona, so that it was only necessary to collate this copy with the original text of the manuscript B. With the aid of all this liberal assistance I was enabled to obtain the whole text of the Dīnkar, known to exist, in the course of a few months; that it has since taken as much as sixteen years to find opportunities for translating and publishing rather more than one-fourth of its contents, will not surprise any one who is acquainted with the nature of the work that had to be done.

The only known manuscript, independent of B, that contains any portion of the Dīnkar, is the old codex K brought from Persia by the late Professor Westergaard in 1843, and now No. 43 of the Irânian manuscripts in the University Library at Kopenhagen. This codex contains about one-fifth of the text of the Dînkard in two detached portions, together with other Pahlavi texts. The first portion occupies fols. 177-261, and comprises Dk. VI, of which one-eighth is missing, with Dk. III, Chaps. CLX and CCLXXXIII, and a colophon, all written in the district of Tûrkâbâd by Mitrô-âpân, son of Anôshak-rûbân, son of Rûstâm, son of Shatrô-ayâr, son of Mâh-vindâd, son of Vâhrâm, son of Gûshisn-ayâr, son of Mitrô-âpân, and completed on the day Gôs of the month Mitrô in the Pârsî year 943 after the 20th year of Yazdakard [10th May, 1594, N. S.]. This copyist appears to have been a great-uncle of the writer who approved the manuscript B in 1669, ten years after it was written; and the original from which he copied was, no doubt, descended from Mâh-vindâd-î Naremhân's manuscript of 1020, as he appends to his colophon all the latter part of Mâh-vindâd's colophon (see p. xxxiv, n. 3). The second portion of the text of the Dînkard, contained in the manuscript K, is written by another hand on 42 additional folios, and comprises the last two chapters of Dk. III, the whole of Dk. V, and the first three-tenths of Dk. IX (as mentioned in p. 172, n. 1, of this volume). This manuscript supplies several short passages in the Dînkard, which are omitted by B, especially in the first portion of the text described above. It has also afforded much assistance in the translation of Dk. IX, Chaps. I, 1-XXXI, 17.

Regarding the authorship of the summary account of the Nasks, contained in Dk. VIII, IX, it may be reasonably assumed, in default of any positive information, that the compiler was Âtûrpâd, son of Hêmêd, the last editor of the Dînkard. And, as nothing is said about any previous treatise being consulted, it may be safely supposed that he had access to the Avesta texts and Pahlavi versions of all the Nasks he describes, fully three centuries after the Muhammadan conquest of Persia. The only Nask he could not obtain was the Vastag, and the Pahlavi version of the Nâzar was also missing ; under which circumstances, the fully detailed accounts of these two Nasks, given in the Persian Rivâyats, must be viewed with suspicion, until better evidence of their authenticity has been discovered than is at present available.

The survival of so much of the sacred Zoroastrian literature, during three centuries of Muhammadan rule, indicates that the final loss of nearly all this literature was not so directly attributable to the Arabs as the Parsis suppose. So long as a considerable number of the Persians adhered to their ancient religion, they were able to preserve its literature almost intact, even for centuries ; but when, through conversion and extermination, the Mazda-worshippers had become a mere remnant, and then fell under the more barbarous rule of the Tartars, they rapidly lost all their old literature that was not in daily religious use. And the loss may have been as much due to their neglecting the necessary copying of manuscripts, as to any destructiveness on the part of their conquerors ; because the durability of a manuscript written on paper seldom exceeds five or six centuries.

The statements of the Dînkard, about the classification and subdivisions of the Nasks, are corroborated and supplemented by those of Zâd-spâram (see pp. 401-405). The division of all literature into three classes of knowledge, religious, worldly, and intermediate, is one that would naturally suggest itself to any classifier¹, but the names employed (which are transcribed from the Avesta, and do not exactly correspond with these three meanings) must have originated at a period when the Avesta language was still spoken. That such a classification cannot be very strictly carried out in practice is already admitted in Dk. VIII, Chap. I, 13.

The further division of the literature into twenty-one books, seven in each of the three classes, is a much more artificial arrangement, and can, perhaps, be best explained as an attempt to make the twenty-one words of the Ahunavair serve the purpose of a reminder for enumerating the Nasks in their proper order. This arrangement was probably made at some period when the scattered Avesta literature was being collected and re-arranged, the Pahlavi versions being then supplied, and the present Pahlavi names of the Nasks appointed. This may possibly have been the work of 'composition and preservation' attributed to Âtâr-pâd, son of Mâraspend, in Dk. VIII, Chap. I, 22, when 'the Nasks were enumerated' (see Dk. IV, 27, in p. 415), which occurred in the fourth century.

Why the established sequence of the Nasks, detailed in Dk. VIII, Chap. I, 12, should differ from the successive sequences of their three classes, given in §§ 9-11, is very imperfectly explained; but some of the reasons for the difference may perhaps be guessed. If the notation proposed in p. 7, n. 3, be adopted, the established sequence is G2-4; H1-7; G5; L6; G7; L7, 1-5; G6, 1; in which the only Nasks that are out of their order in the classes are G1, 5-7 and L6, 7. The placing of G6, 1 next after L5 (that is, the Hâdôkht and Stôd-yast next after the Vendîdâd) may perhaps have been owing to the constant use of these three Nasks in the liturgy, in which either the Vendîdâd, or the Hâdôkht¹, was frequently interpolated in the recitation of the Stôd-yast which comprised by far the larger portion of the present Yasna and Vîspêrad. But this position of the Stôd-yast, at the end of the list of Nasks, was probably considered derogatory to its sacred character by most of the writers of the Persian Rivâyats, who have, therefore, restored it to its original place at the head of the Gâthic Nasks. Dk. VIII, Chap. I, 15, states that G5 was placed after H7 because the Vastag was connected with the Vistâsp-sâstô, probably by the nature of its contents. And, possibly, the sequence L6, G7, L7 of the Kitradâd, Spend, and Bakân-yast, between the Vastag and Nikâzûm, may indicate some similar resemblance of contents; especially as the contents of the Kîtradâd and Bakân-yast were so far from being strictly legal that these Nasks were placed in a sub-class by themselves, and the connection of the Spend with the Gâthas appears to have been merely historical. The Persian Rivâyats place the Spend next after the Vastag, thereby bringing the two imperfectly Gâthic Nasks together, as well as the two imperfectly legal ones; but then they also transpose the Ganabâ-sar-nigad and the Hûspâram, for which there seems to be no justification.

With regard to the names of the Nasks, it is evident that several of the Persian names, used in the Rivâyats, are more or less irreconcilable with the Pahlavi names in the Dînkard, and some others are improbable readings of the Pahlavi forms. In this translation the Pahlavi forms have been followed, as clearly more authentic than the Persian corruptions, and some few of the names have been read differently; while in other cases the most probable readings have been merely suggested in foot-notes, not on account of the Persian reading being justifiable, but because the evidence for the suggested reading is less complete than would be desirable.

In dealing with this account of the Nasks it is always necessary to remember that the compiler of the Dînkard relies entirely upon their Pahlavi versions, as he states distinctly in Dk. VIII, Chap. I, 3; he occasionally mentions the Avesta texts, as in Chaps. VI, 1, XII, 1, and it is abundantly evident, to the practised translator, that Avesta phrases often underlie the Pahlavi passages which seem to be quoted at length from the original Nasks, especially in Dk. IX; but, for some of the details mentioned, there may be no older authority than a Pahlavi commentary, and this should ever be borne in mind by the sceptical critic in search of anachronisms.

Owing to his complete reliance upon the Pahlavi versions, it is impossible to ascertain with certainty whether any particular statement, made by the compiler of the Dînkard, was contained in the Avesta text; his summary, therefore, throws little or no satisfactory light upon the origin of that text. A few of the details he mentions (such as those contained in Dk. VIII, Chaps. XIII, 17-20, XLIII, 24 and Dk. IX, Chaps. XXXII, 17, XXXIX, 13-16, LIII, 3) evidently refer to Sasanian times, and may be reasonably supposed to have originated in the Pahlavi versions of those times. But vaguer prophecies of good or evil, such as are common in all religions at all times, may have often occurred in the Avesta texts themselves.

It is evident, however, that all the Nasks have accumulated around the Gâtha centre of the Stôð-yast, and that this Gâtha centre in the earliest Sasanian times was neither more nor less extensive than it is at present. The age of Gâthic composition had so long passed away in the time of the earliest Sasanian monarchs, that the sages whom they appointed to collect and re-arrange the sacred literature, were unable to fully understand many of the stanzas they had to translate into Pahlavi, much less could they have added to their number. How far they may have been able to write ordinary Avesta text is more uncertain, but any such writing was probably confined to a few phrases for uniting the fragments of old Avesta which they discovered, or for interpolating opinions of their own. All such compositions, however, would have been hazardous, as forming no part of their duties, which seem to have been confined to the arrangement of the fragmentary Avesta texts, and their translation into Pahlavi with explanatory comments in that language. It appears from the traditional statements, mentioned in p. 415, that this work was completed, and the Nasks were fully arranged, by Âtûrpâd, son of Mârašpend, in the reign of Shahpûhar II (A. D. 309-379); but the Pahlavi versions were certainly revised, and some further commentaries added, after the suppression of the heresy of Mazdak, as late as the reign of Khûsrô I (A. D. 531-579).

That the Avesta texts themselves were not written, to any great extent, in Sasanian times, is shown by the quantity of Pahlavi commentary necessary to adapt them to the altered circumstances of those times. The Gâthic Nasks, being strictly religious, required only some explanations, with little extended commentary; because the religion had to be maintained without sensible modification. Of the Hadha-māthric Nasks we know but little. But the strictly Legal Nasks consisted chiefly of the commentary which is always necessary to adapt ancient laws to modern ideas.

With regard to the mode of describing the Nasks, adopted in the Dînkard, it is evident that the compiler intended, in the first place, to give merely a very short account of the general contents of each Nask, to be followed by a detailed statement of the particular contents of each chapter (see Dk. VIII, Chap. I, 23, 24). But, when he had fully carried out this intention with respect to the first three Nasks, his work came to a premature conclusion, which has deprived us of much valuable information regarding the rest of the Nasks. The descriptions of these other Nasks vary in extent, but may be roughly classified as follows:—Of the Nâzar and Vastag there is no description whatever. Of the Dâmdâd, Radō-dâd-aitag, Kaskîsrôbô, Vistâsp-sâstô, Bakân-yast, and Stôd-yast the description is very short, averaging 80 Pahlavi words for each. Of the Pâgag, Baris, Kitradâd, Spend, and Hâdôkht the description is rather longer, averaging 358 Pahlavi words for each; but, as such a description is still far too brief to be satisfactory, the compiler must have intended to add a detailed account of each chapter of all these Nasks. On coming to the strictly Legal Nasks, however, he adopted a different plan, by giving a much more voluminous statement of the contents of certain selected chapters; thus the very long description of the Nikâdûm, Ganabâ-sar-nigad, Hûspâram, and Sakâdûm averages 3670 Pahlavi words for each. This change of plan is somewhat modified in the case of the Vendîdâd, where the description of 1272 Pahlavi words is only moderately long. While the first three Nasks, the Sûdkar, Varstmânsar, and Bakô, after a very short description averaging 65 Pahlavi words for each, are again described in detail, as already mentioned, to the average extent of 8647 Pahlavi words for each.

From these descriptions, and their connection with certain Avesta texts and Pahlavi writings, it is now possible to form a more or less adequate conception of the contents of Nasks I-IV, X, XIII-XIX, XXI, and also some idea of those of Nasks VI, XII; but the accounts of the remaining six Nasks, most of which belonged to the Hadha-mâthric or scientific class, are very unsatisfactory.

With reference to the total extent of the Nasks, when they were all extant, it is obvious that the length of descriptions, drawn up on the same plan, ought to bear approximately some definite proportion to the lengths of text described; so that, if the extent of the text of one Nask be known, and the proportion it bears to the length of its description be ascertained, this proportion becomes a rough means of estimating the probable extent of other Nasks, from the length of their descriptions drawn up on the same plan. Three years ago an attempt was made¹ to estimate the total extent of the Nasks in this way, based upon the assumptions that the Nasks still extant were three in number, that the length of the description of the Vendîdâd was a fair average one for estimating the extent of Pahlavi version in all the lost Nasks, and that the proportion of Avesta text to Pahlavi version in the Nîrangistân was also a fair average for estimating the extent of their Avesta texts. These assumptions were carefully made, as the least liable to objection, and the total extent of the Nasks in Sasanian times, thus estimated, amounted to 133,000 words of Avesta text and 844,000 of Pahlavi version.

Since the completion of the translation of Dk. IX it has, however, become possible to estimate the probable extent of the first three Nasks from the proportion between the actual extent of the first three fargard's of the Bakö (Yas. XIX-XXI) and the length of their description. It has also been thought no longer reasonable to neglect the actual length of the Nîrangistân as a basis for estimating the extent of the Pahlavi versions of the strictly Legal Nasks XV-

XVIII; and the Bakân-yast has been identified with the Yasts still extant¹. These additional considerations have led to a new estimate of the probable extent of each Nask separately, based upon the best data available in each case, as stated in detail in the foot-notes to the names of the Nasks in the Extant Fragments (pp. 451-488 of this volume). These estimates are here collected, for the sake of convenient reference, as follows:—

Total extent of 21 Nasks .			345,700	2,094,200

This total is about $2\frac{1}{2}$ times as great as that of the former estimate, but, as nearly the whole of this increase is in the four strictly Legal Nasks, whose length is well attested by that of the extant Nîrangistân, there is little probability that further investigation will lead to any reduction of this estimate. No probable alteration of the estimate of the extent of the Hadha-māthric Nasks, which is the most uncertain, would materially affect the total.

Another matter of interest to the readers of translations from the Pahlavi, especially to those who are aware of the ambiguities of the original text, is the degree of confidence they can place in the correctness of the translation. In the case of the Dînkard it is fortunately possible to consult manuscripts written in Persia, and descended through only four or five intermediate copies from the work of the original writer, so that the text is remarkably free from copyists' errors. The eighth and ninth books also contain very few of those involved sentences, with long parenthetical clauses, which, owing to the habitual absence or misplacement of stops, are very perplexing to a translator. The chief difficulties of the text arise from its synoptical character, and the consequent want of connection between its sentences; there being often too little context to define the meaning of a doubtful word. The number of words of doubtful meaning in Pahlavi is, however, fast diminishing, in proportion to the advancing study of the texts; and the certainty of a translator, as to the correctness of his work, is increasing in a like proportion. At any rate, the reader may safely rely upon the general accuracy of these translations, even if a few errors should hereafter be discovered.

As an instance of such possible errors I will here correct one that exists in my translation of the Epistles of Mânû-šîhar, which was pointed out to me by Mōbad Tehmuras Dinshawji Ankalesaria, in a letter dated 28th October, 1887. In Ep. II, ii, 9-11, there occurs an illustration of what should be done when commentators differ, derived from the use that can be made of different observations of the stars, and containing three names that were difficult to identify. These names were doubtfully read as corruptions of the names of three of the lunar mansions, but it now appears that they were the names of three sets of astronomical tables (zîk); so that Shatro-ayârân, Hindûk, and Ptolemêôs should be read, instead of Satvâharân, Avênak, and Padramgôs; both sets of readings expressing the same

Pahlavi letters. With these alterations the passage may be translated as follows :—

Ep. II, ii, 9. 'And there may be a position of the stars, settled even by computers of the stars, when they would take that of the sun and moon from the tables of Shatro-ayâr, that of Saturn from the Hindû tables, and that of Mars from the tables of Ptolemy, and the position comes out very good, and they are able to speak of the maturity of strength undoubtedly brought on. 10. That this is to be seen as an occurrence is a conjunction which is not possible; because, if the tables of Shatro-ayâr be exact, yet, since its Saturn and Mars are not from the tables, the effect is not a good configuration; if the Hindû tables be correct, yet, since its sun, moon, and Mars are not from those tables, the effect is not good; and if the tables of Ptolemy be correct, yet, since its sun, moon, and Saturn are not from those tables, the effect is not good; on account of which the conjunction is not correct in any way; they believe it possible, however, for a firm mind to accomplish this auspicious labour. 11. But they say the just and wise are making the decision that this would be a very good position, because that which is in the tables of Shatro-ayâr is truly issuing from him, the great Shatro-ayâr; and that of Shatro-ayâr, being better through the tables of Ptolemy, remains that employed.'

In conclusion, it is desirable to make some remarks upon the transliteration of Pahlavi, because it is necessary to express not only the various sounds of the letters of a very deficient alphabet, but also the mode of writing several abbreviated compounds which are quite as essential to the correct orthography of Pahlavi as the forms of the separate letters themselves. For this purpose italics are used to indicate not only a few differences of sound from the usual English pronunciation of consonants, but also different letters having the same sound, and letters abbreviated in the writing of compounds. When the abbreviated letter is already italicised, the preceding short vowel (which is not expressed in Pahlavi writing) is also italicised to indicate the abbreviation, or an apostrophe is introduced between the two consonants when no short vowel sound intervenes. Hyphens are used both to connect the components of compound words, which are often written separately, and also to separate words that are written together in Pahlavi. The application of these rules will be best understood by reference to the following list of transliterations which have been found necessary:—

THE EIGHTH AND NINTH BOOKS

OF THE DÎNKARD.

OBSERVATIONS.

1. For all divisions into chapters and sections the translator is chiefly responsible, as the stops found in the manuscripts are not used systematically.

2. Italics are used for any English words which are not expressed, or fully understood, in the original text, but are added to complete the sense of the translation.

3. Italics occurring in Oriental words, or names, represent certain peculiar Oriental letters (see the 'Transliteration of Oriental Alphabets' at the end of this volume), or certain abbreviated modes of writing Pahlavi letters, for which see the remarks on Pahlavi transliteration near the end of the Introduction. Italic a, ā, ȃ, e, ē, ħ, i, ȳ, kḥ, l, p, r, sh, u, v, zd indicate no change of pronunciation; but g should be sounded like j, hv like wh, k like ch in 'church,' s like sh, and Avesta z like French j.

4. In the translation words in parentheses are merely explanatory of those that precede them.

5. For the meaning of the abbreviations, used in the notes, see the explanatory list after the Introduction.

6. The manuscripts used, being the only two independent authorities for the text of the Dînkard known to exist, are:—

B (written A.D. 1659), a nearly-complete MS. of Books III–IX, brought from Irân to Surat in 1783, and now divided between three, or more, owners in Bombay, Nawsârf, and Poona. Of the Books here translated two folios are missing, which contained portions of Bk. IX, Chaps. XXXIII, XXXIV, XXXVI, XXXVII.

K (written A.D. 1594 and later), No. 43 in the University Library at Kopenhagen, a miscellaneous MS. containing several fragments of Books III, V, VI, IX. Of the Books here translated it contains the text of Bk. IX, Chaps. I, 1–XXXI, 17.

CONTENTS OF THE NASKS.

DĪNKARD.—BOOK VIII.

CHAPTER I.

1. Praise for Aûharmazd, and obeisance to the Mazda-worshipping religion which is the ordinance of Aûharmazd opposed to the demons.

2. The eighth book is the present (latamman) memorandum about a summary of what is in the Nasks of the Mazda-worshipping religion, each separately. 3. That which is within the compass (shâd-aûrvân) of this book, about the account of the good religion, is a writing for the information of the many, and an announcement from the commentary (zand)—that which is in explanation of revelation (dênô)—which, for this simple (pâdram) high-priest, is in itself the writing of the voice of revelation¹.

4. But, before that, is a writing² of the usage about the divisions (bangisnô) of the reckoning of the Mazda-worshipping revelation, also the parts (bâhar) of its divisions, and the sections (burînakô) of the parts; and the exposition of the account—which, though very condensed, is in its division—is also condensed in the parts of its division, and more diffuse in the sections of the parts. 5. The divisions of the reckoning of the Mazda-worshipping revelation are three :—Gâthas which are the higher spiritual knowledge and spiritual duty; Law which is lower¹ worldly knowledge and worldly duty; and the Hadha-māthric which are mostly information and matters about what is between these two ².

The same three terms were applied to the three classes of mankind, probably the priests, philosophers, and laity; a classification analogous to that of the three professions, the priests, warriors, and husbandmen, but not quite identical with it, as may be gathered from a passage in the sixth book of the Dînkard. This book is

6. And the reason of the triple division of the reckoning of revelation is the exposition of all knowledge and duty, and the kinds of knowledge and action in the same revelation are these three that have been written. 7. Also in the Ahunavair¹, which

‘about an epitome, composed and preserved by those of the primitive faith, concerning the statements of the religion of Mazda-worship;’ and its statements are introduced by the following words:—‘Those of the primitive faith, who were the sages of the ancients, considered thus, &c.’ Near the middle of the book the following passage occurs:—‘And this, too, was considered by them thus, that these are the three species of mankind:—One is the Gâthic, one the Hadha-mâthric, and one the Dâdîk. The association (hamîh) of him who is Gâthic is with the sacred beings, and his severance (vîgî-aîtagîh) from the demons and fiends; the extent of his wealth is due to members of the community and religious feasts (dâhm va-sûr), and the punishment for the sin which he may commit is shame and is invisible. The association of him who is Hadha-mâthric is with the righteous, and his severance from the wicked; also the extent of his wealth is that which may be produced virtuously, and the punishment for the sin he shall commit is the goad, or scourge (see Chap. XLIV, 65 n); also noxious creatures for the body, and compensating the destitute. And the association of him who is Dâdîk is with Irânians, and his severance from foreigners; also the extent of his wealth is due to affairs that it is possible to accomplish lawfully, and the punishment for the sin which he shall commit is for the lifetime of a fowl (kûk), the day of a demon.’

¹ This information seems to be taken from the first fargard of the Sûdkar Nask (see Bk. IX, Chap. II, 19). The Ahunavair (Av. ahuna vairya) is the name of the most sacred formula of the Parsis, derived from its second and third words; it is also called the Yathâ-ahû-vairyô, from its first phrase, and is a declaratory statement in metre, consisting of one stanza of three lines, containing twenty-one Avesta words, as follows:—

Yathâ ahû vairyô, athâ ratus ashâd-kîd ha-kâ,
Vangheus dazdâ mananghō s̥hyaothananām anghēus mazdâi,
Khshathremkâ ahurâi â, yim drigubyô dadađ vâstârem.

The usual Pahlavi version of this formula explains it as follows:—

is the basis of the reckoning of revelation, are three metrical lines (gâs); the first chiefly indicates the Gâthic lore, the second the Hadha-mâthric lore, and the third the Law.

8. And there have been twenty-one parts¹ of its divisions, which are called Nasks :—(9) Seven are Gâthic, because they are composed for the Gâthas,

‘As is the will of the spiritual lord (as is the will of Aûharmazd) so should be the priestly master (so virtuous should he be) owing to whatsoever are the duties and good works of righteousness (the duties and good works should be as virtuous as the will of Aûharmazd). Whose is the gift of good thought (that is, the reward and recompense that good thought gives, it gives also unto him) which, among spiritual lords, is the work of Aûharmazd (that is, he would do that which Aûharmazd requires): [there are some who would say thus: Whose gift is for good thought (that is, the reward and recompense which they give for good thought, they give also unto him); and there are some who would say thus: Whose gift is through good thought (that is, the reward and recompense which they give up through good thought, they would also give even him); Âtûrpâd, son of Zaratûst, said thus: Owing to the gift of good thought, among spiritual lords, they recognise a doer of deeds]. The dominion for Aûharmazd is his (that is, his dominion exists through the advantage that Aûharmazd has maintained) who gives allotments (vâ yagânö) to the poor (that is, he would make intercession for them).’

The Avesta text may be translated, according to Haug, as follows:—‘As a spiritual lord is desirable, so is a priestly master, for the sake of every righteousness, to be a giver of good thoughts as to the actions of life towards Mazda; and the dominion is for the lord whom he (Mazda) has given as a protector for the poor.’

According to Geldner the first two lines refer to Zaratûst, and, if we assume that yim is a contraction of yô îm, the Avesta text may be translated somewhat as follows:—‘As he is the desirable spiritual lord, so is he the priestly master with every right, the producer of the actions of the good thoughts of life towards Mazda. The dominion, however, is for Ahura who has given him as a protector for the poor.’

and their names¹ are that of the ritual of the Gâthic worship, which is the Stôd-yast, with the Sûdkar, Varstmânsar, Bakö, Vastag, Hâdökht, and that which has made them Gâthic², the Spend. 10. And the names of the seven Hadha-mâthric are Dâm-dâd, Nâdar, Pâgag, Radö-dâd-aïtag, Baris, Kaskîsrôbô, and Vistâsp-sâstô. 11. And seven are Legal, because they are composed for the lawyer (dâdîk), and their names are those of the legal, and those are the Nîkâdûm, Ganabâ-sar-nigad, Hûspâram, Sakâdûm, and Vendîdâd, and those which are composed for the law with separate dedications, the Kîtradâd and Bakân-yast. 12. And the sequence is Sûdkar, Varst-mânsar, Bakö, Dâmdâd, Nâdar, Pâgag, Radö-dâd-aïtag, Baris, Kaskîsrôbô, Vistâsp-sâstô, Vastag, Kîtradâd, Spend, Bakân-yast, Nîkâdûm, Ganabâ-sar-nigad, Hûspâram, Sakâdûm, Vendîdâd, Hâdökht, and *Stôd-yast*³.

13. In all three divisions all three are found; in the Gâthic are the Hadha-mâthric and Legal, in the Hadha-mâthric are the Gâthic and Legal, and in the Legal are the Gâthic and Hadha-mâthric.

¹ For variants of these names, in the order stated in § 12, see the notes to the first sections of Chaps. II-XVI, XXI, XXVIII, XXXVIII, XLIV-XLVI, which begin the summary description of each of the twenty-one Nasks.

² Referring probably to 'the bestowal of the other Nasks' mentioned in Chap. XIV, 5.

14. In each separately that which is essentially and specially itself is included, and that which is partly another and introduced is included; and the reason of it is that in spiritual and worldly existences, and in worldly and spiritual existences, and in that which is between the two, there are both existences.

15. The occurrence of the joining of the Vastag part of the Gâthas on to the last of the Hadhamâthric¹ is because it is written in connection with the Vistâsp-sâstô, the last of the Hadhamâthric.

16. The reason of the Hâdôkht and Yast being in succession to the Vendîdâd, the last of the Law², and 'the production of the worldly creation'³ being between the Hadhamâthric and those spiritual Gâthas, is because the spiritual existence likewise, which is spiritual life (ah v ô), is the beginning; and the worldly existence is purposed and caused, and a part is preserved (n ô s i - a i t ô), important for the purpose and intended for the spiritual life, the part at the beginning. 17. And the rejoining of the end of the Law, which is about the Hôh⁴, to the Gâthas, which are the beginning,

is a symbol of the existence of the pure influence of the Gâthic lore upon the first spiritual state—that which exists likewise at last—and of the rejunction of the worldly existence to the spiritual, because it came down from the spiritual to exist at present.

18. And the reason of the twenty-one-fold partition of the three divisions of the reckoning of revelation is in the distinction which is evident from their composition; also in the three metrical lines of the Ahunavair, which is the basis of the reckoning of revelation, there are twenty-one words (mârîk). 19. As the three metrical lines of the Ahunavair, which is the basis of the reckoning of revelation, are an emblem of the triple division of the reckoning of revelation; so the twenty-one words of the three lines indicate the twenty-one-fold partition of these three divisions; as it is declared that 'He who is the omniscient creator produced a discourse from every single word.'

20. As to the sections of the parts, such as the Hâs and Fargard¹ in the Nasks, it is known there were one thousand², from the testimony and knowledge of the religion owing to the teaching of Zarâtûst—whose guardian spirit is revered—in the country of Irân. 21. And after the devastation occurred, owing to the evil-destined and raging villain Alexander, there was not so much of them recovered as would be possible for a high-priest to preserve¹. 22. And that which the saintly (hū-fravarǎǰ) Âtûr-pâd², son of Mâraspend, achieved through their composition and preservation, is known so far as the decrees (kākǰ) in the treatises (mâdî-gân) of the country of Irân are preserved as teaching and admonition (pandânǰ).

23. After writing of each separate Nask, that is, as to what it speaks about more particularly³, each Nask is accounted for separately, and what is in its various Hâs and Fargard's comes to be realized⁴; for in these particulars (mâdîgân) any ruggedness of the auspicious⁵ and desirable collection is explained. 24. But, first, the class of writing of the various Nasks—that is, about what they speak—is here written; the extent of attainment not being adapted to their peculiarity of wonderfulness.

G 5, 7; L 6, 7, 1, 3, 2, 4, 5; G 6. Like most of the names of the Nasks, Sûzkar is an adjective, meaning 'causing benefit, or acting beneficially;' it is corrupted into Stûdgar, or Istûdgar, in the Rivâyats and Dv. For a detailed account of the contents of each of its twenty-two *fargard*s see Bk. IX, Chaps. II-XXIII.

1. The Varstmânsar¹ contains particulars about the birth of Zaratûst, his attaining the religion², and whatever is on the same subject³. 2. A notice (numâd) of the priestliness, discipleship, spiritual lordship, priestly authority, and steadfastness which are in his original more concise words of the Gâthas⁴. 3. The explanation (zand) of the statements about everything and also the good arrangement (khus-radakö) are such as that which one speaks of thus : — 'It is the Varstmânsar which has given forth an exposition upon everything.' 4. So that, in the Varstmânsar, something is said about everything that is mentioned in the Gâthas.

which is thus repeated, consists of four words, it is capable of $1 \times 2 \times 3 \times 4 = 24$ permutations in the order of its words; and it appears as if the author intended that each of the four series of repetitions of the formula, contained in the two Books, should give all these permutations successively; and, with the exception of a few deviations (chiefly in the first two series, and probably due to the errors of copyists), he has maintained this fanciful peculiarity throughout. The English translations of the formula have been varied, so as to preserve this peculiarity to some extent, but it has not been found possible to differentiate the whole of the twenty-four permutations.

² See Bk. IX, Chap. XXIV.

CHAPTER IV.

1. The Bakö¹ contains particulars about the division of the recital of the first saying of revelation², the first creature³ in that saying, the first occurrence of it, the adaptation of the creature, and the greatness of that saying which is incorporating the creature, owing thereto; also, especially, the intermingling of thought (mêd)⁴ with it. 2. Very comprehensive knowledge about everything, each separately its own offspring, and many an appendage as much connected with it as that which is said concerning the Bakö⁵, that 'the Bakö of the community (dâh-mân) is heard where it is spoken for the community,' that is, whoever shall do this good work, for him this good work will be done.

3. Righteousness is perfect excellence.

according to B. P. Riv.; but it is the fifth Nask in other Rivâyats. Dâmdâd means 'the creatures produced,' and it is called Dvâzdah-hâmâst (or humâst) in the Rivâyats, which also state that it contained thirty-two kardah, or subdivisions. No further particulars of this and the subsequent Nasks are given by the Dīnkard, beyond the contents of this eighth Book.

And this, namely, from which limb of the sheep species is the

They are also called fravarđikân, or 'those devoted to the Fravarđs,' or Fravashis, the guardian spirits, or prototypes, of created beings, who are supposed to revisit their old haunts on earth during those days. The last five days of the twelfth month are also considered a part of the same festival of ten days, which would have terminated at the vernal equinox, as indicated in the text, about A. D. 1000 if the ordinary receding calendar of the Irânian Parsis were used; but it seems probable, from Bd. XXV, that the calendar in those times was fixed for the new year to begin at the vernal equinox.

Akômanô and Aeshm, the first and third, are the recognised opponents of Vohûman and Srôsh, respectively (see Bd. XXX, 29). Varenô, the second, is considered a demon (see Bd. Vistâsp-sâstô means 'the instruction of Vistâsp,' and is corrupted into Vistâsp-shâh, Vistâspâd, or Vistâsp, in the Rivâyats, which also state that it contained originally sixty kardah, or žûrat, of which only ten, or eight, were recovered after the time of Alexander. The last number refers, no doubt, to the eight far-gards still extant under the corrupt name Vistâsp Yast, which probably consist of fragments of the Avesta text of this Nask; but in comparing that text with this description it must be remembered that the author is describing the contents of the Pahlavi version which would contain much commentary.

¹ Corresponding to the eleventh word, mananghō, in the Ahunavair, according to B. P. Riv.; but it is the twelfth Nask in other Rivâyats. The name of this Nask is very uncertain; in five occurrences of the word the first letter is omitted once and may once be the conjunction 'and,' and the last syllable is also omitted once; the B. P. Riv. calls it Dâd, by omitting the first and last letters and varying the reading of the rest, and the other Rivâyats call it 'Hast or 'Hast. They also state that it contained twenty-two kardah, or fargard's, in six divisions treating of various religious and worldly duties, as detailed in the translations in the latter part of this volume.

² Corresponding to the twelfth word, s'hyaothananām, in the Ahunavair, according to B. P. Riv.; but it is the fourteenth Nask in other Rivâyats. Kitradâd means 'the races produced,' a name of the same form as Dâmdâd, but it is read Kîdrast, Kîrast, or Girast in the Rivâyats, which also state that it contained twenty-two kardah, or subdivisions.

 7. A report of the lineage of Yim, the third ruler of the seven regions; information as to his period, and the progress (sa^hisnô) of time from the original creation till the end of the reign of Yim.

8. A report of the ill-informed evil ruler of the seven regions, Dahâk⁴; his lineage back to Tâz⁵, the brother of Hôshâng and father of the Tâzîks (Arabs); information as to him and his period, the progress of time from the end of the good reign of Yim till the end of the evil reign of Dahâk, and the lineage from Yim as far as Frêdûn⁶.

³ Av. Yimō khshaêtō, the Gamshêd of the Shâhnâmah; the brother and successor of Tâkhmô-rupô (see Bd. XXXI, 3-5, XXXIV, 4).

⁶ Av. Thraêtaonō, son of Âthwyō, and, traditionally, the ninth in descent from Yim (see Bd. XXXI, 7, 8); nine generations being assumed necessary to allow for the thousand years' reign of the Dahâk dynasty which he put an end to. His rule was confined to the central region of Khvanîras.

9. A report of Frêdûn, the ruler of Khvanîras ; as to the smiting of Dahâk, the conquering of the country of Mâzendarân¹, and the allotment of Khvanîras among his three sons, Salm; Tûg, and Airîk²; their union with the daughters of Pât-srôbô³, king of the Arabs and descendant of Tâz, and the lineage and report of them, each separately. 10. The reign of Mânûskîhar of Irân, descendant (nâpô) of Airîk. 11. The expiating⁴ monarch Frâsîyâv of Tûrân, and Aûzôbô⁵ the Tûmâspian, monarch of Irân.

12. The descendant of Mânûskîhar, Kavî-Kavâd, who was progenitor of the Kayâns and ruler of Irân; and the expiating ruler Keresâsp⁶. 13. Kâi-Ûs, *grandson*⁷ of Kavâd, ruler and maintainer of royalty (kaî-dânô) in the seven regions. 14. Kâi-Khûsrôî who was son of Sîyâvakhsh⁸ and ruler of

² The last of whom was slain by his brothers, and was avenged by his descendant Mânûskîhar (see Bd. XXXI, 9-12).

⁵ Said to have been a great-grandson of Mânûskîhar (see Bd. XXXI, 23).

⁶ Probably the hero who was sixth in descent from Tûg, and third cousin of Frâsîyâv (see Bk. IX, Chap. XV; Bd. XXXI, 14, 26, 27); though placed by Firdausî as a king Garshâsp preceding Kâi-Qubâd.

⁸ The son of Kâi-Ûs, who did not become king.

Khvanîras. 15. And a special report of many particulars of the races of Irân, Tûrân, and Salmân¹, even unto the ruler Kaî-Lôharâsp² and the monarch Kaî-Vistâsp³. 16. The prophet (vakhshvar) of the Mazda-worshipping religion, Zaratûst the Spîtâmân, and the progress of time from the beginning of the reign of Frêdûn till the coming of Zaratûst to conference with Aûharmazd⁴.

17. And many races and statements, onwards from that time, are enumerated in the same Nask as having existed, and are characterized by it for existence, such as the Sasanians—whom it reckons as the well-created—and their sovereignty. 18. In the race of Mânûskîhar, Nôdar⁵, Yôskô Fryânô⁶, and

² Fifth in descent from Kavî-Kavâd, and third cousin once removed of his predecessor Kaî-Khûsrôî (see Bd. XXXI, 25, 28).

³ Son of Kaî-Lôharâsp (see Bd. XXXI, 29).

⁶ Doubtful; if the second name be a patronymic, the combination suggests the Yôistô yô Fryânânâm of Yt. V, 81, XIII, 120, regarding whom the tale of Yôst-f Fryânô is told. No son of Namûn, son of Spend-shêd¹, is included the father of Avarethrabau², Âtûr-pâd son of Mâraspend; and its existence, even then, remains for the future. 19. Also about the many qualities of capability and glory of the selfsame sovereignty, which are promoting the renovation of the universe destined for the races; and its fortune and splendour which are shed upon the race, and are not severed from it till the renovation³.

20. About the original knowledge of the professions, care, and industry of the period; the great acquaintance of mankind with the putting aside of injury from the adversary, the preservation of the body, and the deliverance of the soul; the govern-

Nôdar with a corresponding name is known, so that we are 'not dealing with a complete pedigree.

¹ Probably intended for Spend-dâd, and we should perhaps read 'Vohûmanô, son of Spend-dâd,' whose reign is celebrated as the silver age in Byt. II, 17 (see also Bd. XXXI, 29, XXXIV, 8).

About the various enquiries, the period of the sitting and rising on each occasion, the nature of the sitting of the archangels, the coming forward of Zaratūst to that domestic conclave (handēmānīh), his position in that place, what there was to say to him, and what there was to exhibit to him.

7. The conferring of the wisdom of omniscience upon Zaratūst, and what was seen by Zaratūst of the past and future, and the perpetual amount of duration therein, through that wisdom². 8. The existence of that wisdom, and what that is which, after having subsisted in it, is again well recognised; such as, owing to it, are the highest and best of places, heaven and the various grades of position and reward of the righteous, according to their worthiness through the practice of good works; the most downward and worst of places, hell and the place of punishment of the wicked, according to their sin; and, between the two, the place of the ever-stationary, those having equal good works and

Likewise, about the communication of Zaratûst's knowledge of the Mazda-worshipping religion to the world, his attracting mankind to the religion, and the ages, after Zaratûst, until the renovation of the universe. 11. And about the nature of the advancement of the people of the period, the separation of centuries and millenniums, and the signs, wonders, and perplexity which are manifested in the world at the end of each millennium in the world.

12. Also as to the birth and arrival of Aûshêdar², son of Zaratûst, at the end of the first millennium³, and a report of him and his time, and of the many destroyers of the organizers of the period between Zaratûst's millennium and the coming of Aûshêdar⁴.

⁴ The occurrence of such an interval between the first millennium and the coming of Aûshêdar seems inconsistent with the previous

The arrival of Aûshêdar-mâh¹, son of Zaratûst, at the end of the second millennium; information about him and his time, and the destroyers of the organizers who were within the millennium of Aûshêdar. 14. The coming and arrival of Sôshâns², son of Zaratûst, at the end of the third millennium, the destroyers of the organizers who were within the millennium of Aûshêdar-mâh, the arrival of Sôshâns, and information about Sôshâns and his time. 15. Also, as to the renovation of the universe and the future existence, it is declared that they arise in his time.

16. Perfect is the excellence of righteousness.

CHAPTER XV.

1. The Bakân-yast³ contains particulars, first, about the worship of Aûharmazd, the highest of divinities (bakân), and, secondly, of the worship of the angels of other invisible and visible worldly existences, out of whom are likewise the names of statement as to his arrival at the end of that millennium, but, from Byt. III, 44, it appears probable that he was expected to come in the 600th year of the next millennium (A.D. 1193-1235).

¹ Commonly written Hûshêdar-mâh, but it is a corruption of Av. Ukhshyad-nemangh. He is the second of the expected posthumous sons (see Byt. III, 52, 53).

² Av. Saôshyâs; the last of the posthumous sons, who is expected to complete the triumph of the religion, and prepare for the renovation of the universe (see Bd. XXX, 4, 7, 25, 27, Byt. III, 62).

the days¹; also their glory, power, triumph, and marvellousness. 2. Besides, also, many angels who are invoked by name in their worship, and the attention and obeisance due to them.

3. The worthiness and dispensation of favour for worshippers, and the duty of their many separate recitations unto the angels. 4. The duty of unlimited acquaintance with knowledge about the possessions and arrangements of the period, over which the creator Aûharmazd has appointed them, and they remain to cause industry.

5. Perfect is the excellence of righteousness.

CHAPTER XVI.

1. The beginning of the law is the Nikâdûm² of thirty fargard's³. 2. The section Patkâr-radistân ('magistrate code')⁴ is about this, that the ruin and misery (ayôyakîh) from the destroyer, for mankind and animals, occurring really apart from the spiritual existence, have arisen through the sinfulness even of

³ The Rivâyats say fifty-four kardah, which number may have been obtained by adding the 'twenty-four particulars,' mentioned in Chap. XX, 1, to the thirty fargard's stated here.

mankind; and the progress of ruin and misery in the world is owing to unauthorisedly assaulting one another. 3. Advice to mankind about abstaining therefrom, with an estimate of an authorised assault, and, again, for a slight assault and no assault. 4. To stand magisterially, even opposed to the unmagisterial, with freedom from hurt and loss to one-self; and to abstain altogether, likewise, from the most innocuous (anakhrûgûnôtûm) assault even upon an unmagisterial person.

5. In all magisterial investigation (patkâr-radîh)—of which, when the custom that exists is established judicially, the substance is two statements, which are verbal and demonstrable, that subsist in different combinations—there are four species: the verbal and demonstrable, the verbal which is not demonstrable, the demonstrable which is not verbal, and that which is neither verbal nor yet demonstrable. 6. In the arguments (sâmân) which are allotted as verbal are four species, the dispute having different arguments and different assertions which are for unmagisterial investigation, for one's own priestly authority (radô), for another good man—three of such being requisite¹—and also for other evidence². 7. And in those which are allotted as demonstrable are six species, and for an unmagisterial person the assertions, like the previous species which are on the same subject, are twelve³. 8. Of all unmagisterial proceedings—which, though it be a custom, is to proceed unauthorisedly—the species are five¹, which consist in having demonstrated, getting upon, striking², having caused a wound, and having slain.

² Reading hanô gôkâyîh, but hanô is an unusual form. Perhaps agôkâyîh, 'want of evidence,' would be more suitable to the context.

³ So the MS., but 'four' would suit the context better, and the two Pahlavi ciphers do not differ much in shape.

9. Of those subject to the magistrate (patkâr-radô-hômônd) the twelve species are divided into four sections of three each. 10. One section are the hearing who are seeing, they to whom a dispute which is verbal [is demonstrable; the hearing who are not seeing, they to whom a dispute which is verbal³] is not demonstrable; and the seeing who are not hearing, they to whom even a dispute which is demonstrable is not verbal. 11. And with these three, who are in one section, there is magisterial investigation; and the magistrate, unless (barâ hat)⁴ risk for the body be certain, is then irresistible; which is as though it be said that to restrain by

wounding (rêsh) is not justifiable, but the decision therein is this, that, when they do not change through lawful litigation, and they cannot hold back without wounding, it is justifiable to keep them back even by wounding. 12. One section are the not hearing who are also not seeing, the women, and the children; and with these three, who are in one section, there is no magisterial investigation; and the decision as to the bodies thereof is this, that, unless risk for the body be certain from their complete change, they are then to be completely changed (barâ vardisnô). 13. One section are the foreigner and him worthy of death, certain of thereby producing a sentence for being executed from the judges; also the highwayman, when he stays on the highway and his destruction is proclaimed, but it is not possible to effect it. 14. With these three, likewise, who are in one section, there is no magisterial investigation, but the decision about them is even this, that when one is utterly destroying their life, one is thereby possessing merit. 15. One section are they who are walking, or coming upon one, unseasonably, or retreating confused into a rugged place, and, when people ask them to speak, they are giving no answer, and they are not suspicious as foreigners. 16. With these three, likewise, who are in one section, there is no magisterial investigation, and the decision about them is this, that when one kills them outright, one does not become sinful thereby.

17. As to whatever is on the same subject it introduces many opinions, and also this, that a counter-assault (avâz-zatam) is that which becomes a blow and wound, and is to be so committed when it is possible to produce them again exactly in every single particular.

CHAPTER XVII.

Nîkâdûm Nask.

1. The second section is the Zatamistân ('assault code'), particulars about assault (zatam) and the annoyances (vêshîgânö) from assault, such as pain, blood, and unconsciousness; also the sin¹ that a man may commit in a state of unconsciousness.

2. About the seven kinds of symptoms of unconsciousness, and separate decisions about assaults that adults may commit among those who are children; also as regards an assault which proceeds to pain and blood, and as regards that in which the duration of the disposition of wrath abates the pain and blood.

3. About begging (khvahîsnö) and beneficence (hû-dahîsnö)², such as those of which one says in particular there are four species: when stinginess (pûsih) benefits pride (pîkö), when pride benefits stinginess, when stinginess benefits stinginess, and when pride benefits pride; and there are three other species that originate from these last two, in consultation together, when stinginess and pride benefit stinginess and pride, when stinginess and pride benefit stinginess, and when stinginess and pride benefit pride, all which, together, constitute the seven primary species; many others, too, are traced back to these. 4. Also about seeing the depravity (khang dīdanō) of a perverting member of the community (kastâr dâhm) and of the perverter of a member of the community, and whatever is on the same subject.

5. About a weapon seizable, and a weapon one brings, there is this, namely, what is the thing which is imperfect (anaspôrik) as a weapon, what is that which is not, and what is that which is welcome as a weapon; what is that which, when any one forces it back at any one as a weapon, is itself something annoying to him; what is his natural annoyance and what his imparted; and the penalty in property and difference of sentence on a man who is carrying a weapon, due to any weapon he has to carry away.

6. About the six modes of engaging in conflict: through assault, tumult (khvasisnō)¹, false teaching (mîtôk-sâstô)², giving no food (atapdâdō)³, speaking with wizard's spells⁴, and speaking with threats of danger⁵; and, where there is an engaging

¹ Pers. ḥasîs. Farh. Oîm, p. 34, ll. 6-8, has 'Av. vâiti=Pahl. khvasisnō is that when one runs behind any one for offensiveness.'

² Farh. Oîm, p. 35, ll. 1-4, has 'Av. mithôsâst and its explanation "false teaching" are that when one teaches a false way to any one; even when he unaccustomedly shows it rightly to any one, it is a committal of Mithôsâst by him.'

in conflict, it then occurs when one has stood up for beginning it and the assault is committed, on one by the other, and not before. 7. And this, too, that engaging in conflict occurs as regards adult with adult, childless women with*childless women, pregnant women with pregnant women, and children of seven years with children of seven years—but, as regards children of seven years in sight of their fathers, it becomes an engaging in conflict of the fathers—and the decision about it is this, that the atonement for every sin which may be committed through engaging in conflict goes to the priestly authorities.

8. About the affliction of a pure lord who sees any one who has been useless (abûn) unto his slave, though the slave is beseeching, and does not contend for his ownership. 9. About sin affecting accusers¹ not being atoned for by any other good work, except unto the accuser himself; also about the slaying of a servant together with his lord, and whatever is on the same subject.

10. About slaying by untaught children of seven years, or even of eight years in sight of their fathers; and the criminality of the fathers therein, when it is possible for them to hinder it and they do not hinder it, and when it is not possible for them to hinder it.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Nîkâdûm Nask.

1. The third section is the Rêshistân ('wound code'), particulars about cutting, tearing, cleaving, disembowelling, stabbing, gnawing¹, rupturing, hacking, mutilating, and withering²; such as are all called wounds. 2. The upheaving circular movement of a certain serpent-scourge³, the throwing down of the person, and the flow of blood from the bodies of the people.

¹ A sin which injures another person, or any good creation, who must be satisfied by compensation before the sin can be remitted.

3. How the various members are divided into seventy-six that are more particularly called principal, which are comprised in two classes; two of these, which are clothed and different, one from the other, are female, and some out of the surrounding parts (girvôgânîh), which are apart from eight of the principal, that are comprised in the members of the two classes and among those seventy-six—and which, in like manner, are different one from the other—are female, and are of different purpose and different design, one from the other.

4. These, too, namely, when any one, through an assault, produces, for any other, stupefaction, swelling, or leanness, blackness⁴, or paleness, shortness, or tallness, want of intelligence, much eating, little eating, or moderate eating, indolence, or diligence, or dulness of hearing; or he wishes to speak some words, and they strike him in return; or one altogether diminishes any one's speech, sight, or hearing,

² The last four terms are, in Pahlavi: skônîsnô, khûrdô kardânô, tâshîdanô, and khûsînîdanô.

³ The mâr-ganô (Av. khrafstraghna), we are told in Pahl. Vend. XVIII, 6, 'may be made of anything, but a leathern one is good' (see also Bd. XXVIII, 22). Intended as a snake-killer, it was misused as a scourge for human beings.

wisdom, strength, or semen, milk, or pregnancy; or when one destroys the spleen (sp̥ur) or milk of females, or, in revenge (gīfar), kills his son outright; or when they would inflict a wound upon a wound, and one's blood goes streaming forth.

5. Also about an assault with one, two, or three weapons, or more, in conjunction; or they may commit it on the spot, or in confederacy, or as a first offence¹. 6. About the measure of a wound when a two-edged sword (dôbarakō) plunges down, the area (sarâi), walls, and surroundings, and the shape which is plunged; that which is hacked, or cleft, or mutilated, or a torrent of blood streaming; the affliction (vamang) of the furious serpent-scourge (mâr-vanô)², and the length, glitter, and weight of the weapon.

7. The ritual for the departure of a wound and the departure of pain, watching over it for the duration of three nights or a year, its greater wretchedness or less wretchedness, its cure (sp̥ôrikîh) or incurableness, and whatever is on the same subject. 8. Trivial enumerations, and decisions upon each separately.

CHAPTER XIX.

Nîkâdûm Nask.

1. The fourth section, which is also called the law of the Hamêmâlistân ('accuser's code'), contains particulars about accusation, and about the false accusation by any one, regarding any other, as to witchcraft, destroying a righteous *man*¹, theft, plunder, injuring the existence, minor injury² as regards several particular things, taking up a weapon, threatening with it³, assault, tumult⁴, incarcerating⁵, false teaching, fettering, making dejected (nigûnō), giving no food, falsehood, speaking with wizard's spells, or with threats of danger, abstracting

¹ Pahl. aharûbōkîh (=Av. ashavagha) must not be confounded with aharûbōîh, 'righteousness,' for which aharâyîh is more commonly used.

² These two kinds of injury, usually written bâîôdôk-zêdō and kâîtyôk-gadō in the Dīnkard, are mentioned in Farh. Oîm, pp. 32, l. 8-34, l. 2, as follows:—'Av. baodhagad=Pahl. bôdôk-zêd and Av. baodhô-varstahê=Pahl. bôdôk-varst are as it were "observantly assaulted," and one mentions them most about the assault and injury of anything which is noticeable. Through falsehood other noticeable sin is small, and is subdued through being devoid of an injurer, as the assault and injury of anything through wear is a small sin. Kâîtyô-ged is a sin for mankind, which is a degree of Bôdôk-zêd, but less; so also the decree (das-tînak) is different from Bôdôk-varst. The principal Bôdôk-zêd, that of animals with observance, the Bôdôk-zêd through wear, and the Kâîtyôk-zêd sin towards people are sins which are hamê-mâlân ("affecting accusers"). The dissipating weapon for sin dissipates the sinfulness of the other sin, which is called rûbânîk ("affecting the soul").'

³ These two terms are âgêreptō and avôîristō (Av. âgereptem and avaoiristem) which are thus described in Farh. Oîm, p. 36, ll. 4-6: 'âgerept, "seized," is that when they shall take up a weapon for smiting an innocent person; avôîrist, "turning," is that when one turns the weapon upon an innocent person.'

⁴ See Chap. XVII, 6, for some of these terms.

⁵ Pahl. handerêtō which is thus described in Farh. Oîm, pp. 34, l. 8-35, l. 1: 'Av. handereiti, Pahl. handeretō, is that when, owing to negligence, one keeps any one exhausted; when one would make him fallen who is of the ruined, or him who is a master of arms, and has imprisoned him, the causing of much anguish thereby is the committal of incarceration.' See also § 44.

the increase of labourers' wages, wishing to cut (vurîdanö) and squeeze (pashkhâdanö) anything from any one, and seizing (magîdanö) it for fire and water, and whatever is on the same subject. 2. Also about the limitation of the accusation of sin therein, the retribution for it, and the dust, or ashes, or flour, for the eyes and the rest of the bodies of human beings, it now¹ speaks henceforth for thirty successive heads².

3. About the sin of making people eat bodily refuse³, and bringing it unlawfully to their persons or clothes; and of going to a menstruous woman, or a wizard. 4. About a juvenile and well-behaved woman who comes out from a house of those of the good religion, and is considered as well taught. 5. About falsehood and slander, small and great, and whatever is on the same subject. 6. About the care of a pregnant woman in lawful reclining (khapâk), feasting (gashnö), and work.

7. About a householder who does not teach his own household, in order to teach the household of another; and whatever is on the same subject. 8. About a quiet and an unquiet person with equal opinionativeness, and the opinion which they have to form before beginning. 9. About the expediency or in expediency of the opinion which is announced, and the reason of both. 10. About the man who, for fear of a counter-assault, runs away.

11. Also about not renouncing sin, neglecting complaints, and whatever is on the same subject.

³ Pahl. hîkhar (Av. hikhra) is any refuse or dirt from the living body, or any liquid exudation from a corpse.

12. The difference of sin in priests from that in any one else, as regards its renunciation. 13. About the expediency of retribution, and the measure of the expediency. 14. About and to what extent is the authority of one's own priestly master, for allowing the sin which any other person may commit as regards a disciple of that same, and that, too, of his disciple affecting the soul.

15. About the chastisement of a judge who is releasing sinners, and whatever is on the same subject. 16. About the justifiableness of a plaintiff in committing illegality. 17. About seizing the purity produced for foreigners, and whatever is on the same subject. 18. About one worthy of death making supplication (lâvakö), co-operation with one worthy of death, and whatever is on the same subject. 19. About confession as regards anything, the object of confession, and whatever is on the same subject. 20. About exhibiting a liking for sin worthy of death.

21. About a blow with a weapon, which is incomplete or not incomplete, when adults or children shall inflict it, or when children with mutual assistance. 22. About a wounded person whose anguish was allayed by medicine, the arising of the anguish again from disease, when he died, and whatever is on the same subject.

23. About taking security (garôbö) from the defendant after the decree of the judges. 24. About the legal proceedings as to an offence when, owing to the incapability of the plaintiff, adjournment has always occurred, and a man would occasion an acceleration of the statement of law (dâdö vâk) and of the procedure of the plaintiff. 25. About appointing a mediator (dâđak-gôbô), and the object of mediation.

26. About an assault (zatam) which is altogether of furious (pûr-tâk) origin. 27. And about a harmless (âzađ) assault and striking back fairly to test a weapon, and, when it is not possible fairly, turning it into execution of duty, or giving of scars (pisang-das), or punishment; a statement of the change, and whatever is on the same subject. 28. About the limit of the punishment of a child for the sin it may commit. 29. About seeking an interpretation (pâđô-khân), the limit of interpreting, and whatever is on the same subject. 30. As regards a signal of approving the words of any one, on passing away, are these:—About giving up anything, making a will about it, and renunciation of sin.

31. About committing an assault upon an unknown person at an indefinite time, and whatever is on the same subject. 32. About giving a weapon and telling some one to kill a foreigner who is taken for judicial investigation, and whatever is on the same subject. 33. About the great hinderers¹ who are slain by a righteous man, who the great hinderers are, and unto whom it occurs; when one has to command it as assistance for one or many, or they shall commit the assault in advance or afterwards, and whatever is on the same subject. 34. About the weapon they shall seize it is stated thus: 'I see a man and a sheep, I strike upon this and upon that, and it is gone:' and whatever is upon the same subject.

¹ Doubtful: the word can be read freh-gasîgân on its first occurrence, and freh-gasîgânô on its last; but both reading and meaning are very uncertain.

35. About petitioning, and the going of a frontier governor (mar'zpan) to the feet of tyrants (sâstârânô) to speak of regulations, and whatever is on the same subject. 36. Where and when one strikes a living person he vexes him, and the living person he strikes vexes him when dead; but he who strikes a dead person is vexed alive, and the dead person he strikes vexes him when dead; and whatever is on the same subject.

37. As to wood and useless pith (dîl), that which is for keeping is as far as a dimension that is mentioned, and one, therefore, passes it by not to burn; concerning also that wood which is only for the blast of a furnace (gûrîh zîgâ) as firewood, the burning and dimensions and blast of the furnace are stated, and whatever is on the same subject. 38. About the sin through which a man attains from atonement to the sacred-twig ordeal (baresmôk-varîh), and from the sacred-twig ordeal to the heat ordeal (garemôk-varîh) which has maintained the worthiness of an assault that is an actual inexcusability (akârîh)¹ to reasoning thought; and whatever is on the same subject.

39. About the excellence of physicians, their merit from doing good, and sin from not doing good; the quality that exists as regards medicines, seeking a physician for animals also, and whatever is on the same subject. 40. About a horse, which is new to the saddle (kôfak), being made tailless (kapê) and not feeding (akhavânô), how it is done, the sin owing to doing it unlawfully and heedlessly, the wound and damage that arise from it, and whatever is on the same subject.

41. About several persons, when anything that is imperfect, or even not imperfect, as a weapon is convenient to them, and a wound occurs, and it is not evident which, or who, threw the weapon, it is not necessary to know its imperfection or lack of imperfection¹; and whatever is on the same subject. 42. About the three modes for thrusting a weapon are these details, that is, so much of it when one thrusts it on ground that is hard, or soft, or full of ruggednesses (âkârîgânakö); when one shall bear it up aloft, and the amount of the height; and when one impels it again with a sweep, or has to draw up its centre at the time of a sweep; and whatever is on the same subject. 43. About an assault and the most hurtful occasion when, for the same reason, they would celebrate a religious rite; the retribution on the spot, and the sentence upon the fourth occasion².

44. About incarcerating (handerêtö) in a frightful and inaccessible (avidarg) place, and among noxious creatures; the quantity of noxious creatures, and whatever is on the same subject. 45. About grasping the tail of an ox, or a horse, on which another sits, to hold it back, and whatever is on the same subject. 46. About threatening danger,

² According to Vend. IV, 35, if a man wounds another so that the blood comes, and does this for the fourth time, he becomes an outcast and receives the maximum punishment. Also, when a person walks without the sacred girdle or shirt (Vend. XVIII, 59), it is at the fourth step that the demons possess him.

wizard's spells¹, and whatever is on the same subject.

47. About complaints as to the value of a lamb², or a sheep³, or a beast of burden (stôr), or a human being (vîrôk)⁴; either when the plaintiffs are one, or two, or three, or four, or many; how one has to summon the defendant, and how much time there is.

48. About when the controversy (han-bêshinîh) is as to theft (dûgǝ), and the confession as to plunder (avor); or the controversy is as to plunder, and the confession as to theft; and when the controversy is as to injuring the existence⁵, and the confession as to minor injury; or the controversy is as to minor injury, and the confession as to injuring the existence; and when the controversy is as to theft and plunder, and the confession as to injuring the existence and minor injury; or the controversy is as to injuring the existence and minor injury, and the confession as to theft and plunder. 49. And when the controversy is about so much, and the confession about so much of a different kind; when the controversy is about so much, and the confession about more of a different kind; when the controversy is about so much, and the confession about less of a different kind; when the controversy is about so much, and the confession as to more of the same kind; and whatever is on the same subject.

50. About the sin of unfriendliness of a master towards a disciple, and whatever is on the same subject. 51. About taking a thief of any one's goods (aîsigânō), conducting him to the judges, and whatever is on the same subject. 52. This, too, that when affliction has come upon a good man, the effort of every one, for removing that affliction, should continue just as though it happened to himself. 53. And when a good man is beaten through malice, the effort of every one, in demanding compensation for him from the smiter, should continue just as though it happened to himself. 54. And this, too, that, when there is no danger for one, the power of affording assistance is thus assistance of the innocent; and, as to the property which may be carried away from him, and of which they shall make no restitution, after as much as a Hâsar¹ the carrier off becomes guilty and liable to penalty.

55. About the distinction of indigenous and foreign (aîr va-an-aîr) thieves as to cold and the clothing given, and as to sickness and undergoing remedies. 56. About the hands of a foreigner being unfettered for no other reason but care of water and fire, to preserve them from blood, filth, and injury (âsipō). 57. About the sin of not restraining him who is the first assailant of two combatants, as soon as his attack is seen. 58. About teaching the peace of renunciation of sin, the bond of worthiness of him of great power even when proffering union in renunciation with him of little power, and whatever is on the same subject.

59. On the nature of responding about the keeping away from one worthy of death which arises through great judiciousness, the reason of keeping, how to keep, and whatever is on the same subject. 60. And on the nature of responding when they ask in malice about a righteous man, when one knows his whereabouts, and when one does not know. 61. About how one is to give a weapon to generals (hên-gô-padânō) and august frontier governors.

62. About authorisedly shooting an arrow at one worthy of death, which is given again for killing him to any one unto whom the person worthy of death is consigned and becomes supplicating (lânakō) and goes to the middle of the distance, and they shall afford him assistance and enervate him for it, when, through the three words¹ which he utters, they do not deliver him up again. 63. About one worthy of death who is preserved with great judiciousness when the evidence, which they give before that about him, is through another one worthy of death, and whatever is on the same subject. 64. About evidence as to witchcraft and destroying a righteous man, that is, in what proper-

CHAPTER XX.

Nikâdûm Nask.

1. In the fifth section are twenty-four particulars¹ about the standing up and going forth of a man with a weapon and angry thoughts towards another man; and also when he takes a beast of burden, saddles it, and sits upon it, takes the rein² (ayôkham) in hand and walks away; this, too, that, when he arrives there, he smites that man, or some one else; and whatever is on the same subject. 2. About what one has to do when the conversation of two men is of the destruction of a righteous man, of highway robbery, and of the cursing owing thereto; and whatever is on the same subject. 3. About what one has to do when, of two men who are on the same road, one slays a righteous man; and about the other when he is fearless, and when he is fearful. 4. About preserving one worthy of death when it is requisite for medical purposes (bezashkîh), though the plaintiff is of a different opinion; and whatever is on the same subject.

5. About the needlessness of plaintiffs and defendants speaking as to the substance (min tanû) of the law, when the witness and judge is the supreme priest; the confidence which they may place in the decision of the supreme priest, due to his own knowledge and evidence, when, moreover, they have not to atone in the body; and the want of confidence in another judge when, moreover, they have to atone in the body, and the needfulness of plaintiffs and defendants speaking on the substance (val tanû) of the law, even when the judge is aware of the law. 6. About unauthorised combatants, become mutually sinful, when, to dissipate (sikh tanô) a wound of the one, he would make the other one worthy of death. 7. About supplies (pishôn)¹ in travelling together, and their renewal; and whatever is on the same subject.

8. About inflicting penalties by magistrates, the assistance of the unmagisterial given to magistrates, the assistance of the magistrates, and the exemption of these latter from atonement to those former; likewise about conversation as to an assault, and whatever is on the same subject. 9. About the evasion of penalty by men at the time when a sin may be committed, and the arrest of their nearest relations being important, in whatever measure implicated therein and impossible to consider innocent; how to confine and make them really coerced to seek a remedy, and whatever is on the same subject. 10. About the powerfulness which comforts in sin where there is any special worthiness, and the reason of any worthiness ; the want of power where there is special unworthiness, and the reason of any unworthiness ; the production of the good works of one towards another of the powerful, and of the sin of one of those lacking power ; and whatever is on the same subject.

- 11. About the plaint which one has to argue, and for the defendant to dispute ; the time for making the statement (gôbô) when the defendant does not come, or comes not to conduct the business ; the several peculiarities of plaintiff and defendant, the time for conducting being on the day before yesterday, the firm one and the powerless, the incrimination therein, the death-blow on the exhaustion of the possessions of the plaintiff, and provisions for conducting the legal proceedings ; a privileged wife¹ shall be capable of making a plaint for her husband, and of informing the husband of the plaint ; when her property is anything whatever, and nothing is manifest as to that wealth, she is to be admitted for evidence ; and whatever is on the same subject.

12. About the ordeal of those who have atoned, of those undergoing the sacredtwig ordeal, and of those undergoing the heat ordeal, who are pure ; the freedom from falsehood of which, each separately, which they, every one of them, request when the ordeal is not that for their own station, but that for the station of others ; and whatever is on the same subject. 13. About the object of any evidence, and, on account of the reason of its propriety, the impropriety of any one being without evidence ; and whatever is on the same subject. 14. About the reality of a statement due to an ordeal, and so many having gone to the ordeal place for the sake of watching the first-comer and after-comer; the time of performance, the statement, the ceremonial and the invulnerableness due to it; the kinds of incrimination, how to protect the limbs by which the ordeal is accomplished, and each one of the formulas (nīrang) of protection; the superintendence for observing the ceremonial, and the decision about the acquitted or convicted one. 15. This, too, that is, whose going to the ordeal place is first, second, third, fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh, eighth, ninth, and tenth; and by whom is the command to be given. 16. About the business of the ordeal attendants (var aûstīgânō). 17. About incrimination through confession, or some other reason, the reliance restored thereby, and whatever is on the same subject. 18. About a thief destroying life and escaping, the suspicion owing thereto, about any one, as to assisting the thief, and whatever is on the same subject. 19. About there being no ordeal for those confessing, and so also as regards those of good repute; accusation as to the existence of a limit to the good repute, even that which is for the extent of a Yûgyâst, a Dashmest, an Agoyôst, a Taḥar, and a Hâsar¹ at the least.

¹ The relative lengths of these five measures of distance are stated in Farh. Oîm, p. 41, ll. 9-11, as follows:—‘So much as two Dashmêst (Av. dakhshmaiti) is as much as a Yûgyast (Av. yugyasti); so much as two Agoyôst is as much as a Dashmêst; so much as two Taḥar is as much as an Agoyôst; and so much as two Hâsar (Av. hâthra) is as much as a Taḥar (Av. taḥara).’ As the average Hâsar is a Roman mile (see Chap. XIX, 54 n), the Taḥar (‘run?’) is two, the Agoyôst or Agoyôst (‘cattle-run?’

20. About litigation as to a costly article, when a witness of its possession by the one party is combined with non-possession by the other one with no witness, or with its possession by the other one with a single witness; or the witness of one is with the sacred beings, and its possession by the other one is likewise not manifest; when both parties are related (khidyahik), or both are unrelated (anazdihik); and what kind of possession they say is most real.

21. About annulling the decision of a judge, and the time it is done at the court of a chief judge, and also owing to an ordeal for certainty; and whatever is on the same subject.

22. About the litigation of three persons as to property it is declared, so much is given to one on the day Aûharmazd to the day Vohûman¹, to another one on the day Ardavahist, and possession is not made over to the third one at all.

23. About selling property which is not one's own, and whatever is on the same subject.

24. About controversy as to anything which ought not to occur.

25. About any essential dispute that any one has, when agreeing thus: 'I do not have it as my own, but owing to the other person;' and whatever is on the same subject.

26. About the litigation of an Irânian with a foreigner, or with foreigners, of a Av. gaoyaoiti?) is four, the Dashmêst ('distance-mark?') is eight, and the Yûgyâst ('stage?') is sixteen miles. This series of distances is analogous to the Sanskrit series, but more elaborate; the Hâsar is best compared with the Krośa as the commonest unit of moderate distance, though less than half its usual length; the Agoyôst is nearly the same as the Gavyûta; and the Yûgyâst is analogous to the Yogana, though nearly double its length.

foreigner with an Irânian, or a slave with a man of the country, as to a costly article; and whatever is on the same subject. 27. About a much-clamouring plaintiff having summoned defendants to the judges regarding a decision, and about the perverted wordiness and mixed verbiage in the legal proceedings; and whatever is on the same subject.

28. About the time for a high-priest of property and possessions, what is the specific necessity for a high-priest, and whatever is on the same subject.

29. About the fitness of a woman for evidence and judgeship when guardian over herself, and the unfitness of a privileged *wife*¹ who is a foreigner and worthy of death for only a single offence, even with the authority of her husband; and whatever is on the same subject. 30. About the owner of a pledge not depositing the pledge beforehand, and whatever is on the same subject. 31. About giving up the property of partners, and whatever is on the same subject. 32. About the property that any one possesses, and is without any witness as to his ownership and possession of it. 33. About the ordeal of excessive eating (pâûrû-khûrânö) for escaping distress (mûst-kar zîh) by plaintiffs and defendants before driving each other into legal proceedings, and whatever is on the same subject.

34. About the legal proceedings as to a female² they steal from some one, and she becomes a suppliant of a thief; some one takes her by sequestration (hakîdakh)³, and they steal her also from him; the original possessor (bûn) sees his own, not knowing she is back alive, when they become disputing about her; and whatever is on the same subject.

² A slave no doubt.

³ This is the technical term for legal seizure, or sequestration (see Chap. XXXIX).

35. About property which is in the possession of any one, when some one gives it up to some one else in his sight, and he does not dispute it. 36. About a master teaching a disciple not to go back to legal proceedings, and whatever is on the same subject. 37. About controversy, with any one, as to special property in righteous gifts, and whatever is on the same subject.

38. About legal proceedings in which one accomplishes an ordeal three times, and it comes off in one way; and whatever is on the same subject. 39. About the existence of the many kinds of speaking with wizard's spells¹, and those with threats of danger; and about the usage in witchcraft as to the moderate and justifiable production of mutual afflictiveness thereby. 40. About which is the ordeal for one worthy of death, the greatness and littleness of an ordeal, and also this, that is, which are the blessed among twenty of those undergoing ordeals. 41. About the proportion of firewood, and from which tree it ought to be good; and again, too, the several appliances and formulas that are necessary in accomplishing the ordeal. 42. And this, too, that when the man is aware of his own truth, even though he be aware of it, the fire speaks in the words of men thus: 'Walk not on to me! for I chastise during one's progress.' 43. About one still mediating in legal proceedings as to a thief who has acted faithfully about quitting confinement and fetters to cause a ceremonial¹, and whatever is on the same subject.

44. About the wealth of a priest who is not keeping his property in edifices (a ūzdesīkīh) or domains (matâ), but goes on with his occupation; and when he passes away, to whom and how it has to come.

45. About litigation as to property from the residuary wealth of fathers, about keeping it together (vâham-dâr), and whatever is on the same subject.

46. About the amount of retribution, in confinement, fettering, and punishment, for a lamb², a sheep, or a beast of burden, which is stolen; and whatever is on the same subject. 47. About a defendant regarding whom three plaintiffs complain, all three as comrades, one as to a lamb, one as to a sheep, and one as to a beast of burden; and whose answer is first given. 48. About the litigation of three persons as to a costly article which remains apart from them, he who deposited it being a strong person, and the ownership of not even one of them being certain. 49. About the coming of retribution to three persons who, all three as comrades, have stolen a lamb from one, a sheep from another one, and a beast of burden from a third one.

50. About the reason of the justifiableness, and that also of the unjustifiableness, of confining a fellow-countryman for his own theft, and whatever is on the same subject. 51. About the extent of continuance in hearing a defendant, and this, too, as to a plaintiff; also about the time appointed for speaking, and its extent. 52. And about this, namely, when any one has made an accusation about any other, and goes back at the time appointed, and, before a reply is given, he shall make out another accusation about the same man, to which of the two accusations a reply is to be first given. 53. About the reason of the hardship of legal proceedings; about what man it is whose statement is second, third, fourth, and last in conducting legal proceedings; and about the twenty-two stratagems in conducting legal proceedings.

- 54. About the cancelling (pâdyârânîh) of an ordeal, even that which is accomplished with three selected witnesses. 55. About the season of the hot ordeal, and also that of the cold; and whatever is on the same subject. 56. About one, in a procedure, demanding an ordeal, the other one having appointed the time for the supreme priest, and whatever is on the same subject. 57. About the benediction of the supreme priest on making, or changing, a decision; also this, namely, which are the blessings for changing, through their nature, a decision which is made.

58. About evidence of walking upon a water-skin (khik) and putting something inside it, of assault and wounds, of wealth which they squander (nikizend) and a righteous gift, of a damaged and sequestered thing; and of rubbing up (pâdō-mâlisnō) and buying it strengthened¹, and at a price. 59. On litigation about the ownership of a wife, cattle, trees, and land; and whatever is on the same subject. 60. About the certainty of the statement of several leaders of an affair, as to that on which their affair depends, and of the supreme priest, or three witnesses, in every legal proceeding. 61. About incrimination (aīrikhtakih) of several kinds as to statements in legal proceedings, and whatever is on the same subject. 62. About the modes of action for eradicating the deceptions (frēvōânō-fitâr) of apostates, and whatever is on the same subject.

63. About cases where the virtuousness of the thoughts, words, and deeds of mankind is all derived from the virtuousness of the beneficent spirit, and mankind themselves shall render it their own, and, in that way, its reward reaches them; and their viciousness is all derived from the viciousness of the evil spirit, and mankind themselves shall render it their own, and, in that way, its bridge *penalty*¹ reaches them.

64. About the injuriousness due to unrenounced sinfulness, that is, what is injured by the first, second, third, fourth, or fifth unrenounced Aredûs *sin*². 65. About where and which is the speaking with threats of danger³, and which is the taking up of a weapon (âgêreptō), not the turning it down, that becomes a Tanâpûhar *sin*⁴; also the sin which is owing to such sin.

⁴ Whereby a person becomes an outcast and worthy of death. According to Vend. IV, 67-72, 75-78, 81-84, this occurs on the eighth committal of an Âgêreptō, on the seventh of an Avôîristō, and on the sixth of an Aredûs; or on the first committal of any of the three, if the criminal refuses to atone for it.

66. About the case where one has to atone, and who does it; he who undergoes the sacred-twig ordeal has atoned best; and which is the least heat ordeal. 67. About two men having seized property together, and having together, at the time, demanded a judge and ordeal about it; and when one seizes the property some time earlier, and the other one demands the judge and ordeal earlier; and whatever is on the same subject. 68. About some one carrying off the property of a person from the custody of another person in sight of the same, and he who kept it before is, within a Hâsar¹, a witness before the judge as to its custody or possession; and also when the witness of it has not come within the Hâsar; and whatever is on the same subject.

69. About cases where the decision of the judge is to be made from the Avesta and Zand², or from the common consent of the good³, and whatever is on the same subject. 70. About the justifiable selling of a man, a sheep, or a beast of burden, as free from defect when its defect is not obvious; also about the symptoms of their defects. 71. About the case where and how far a decision, about which one is in dispute, is a solitary statement, or more.

72. About the object of the appointment of a judge, the eminence of an appointed judge, and whatever is on the same subject. 73. About the reasonableness of the severity and want of severity of judges. 74. And this, too, that the judgeship is to be given to him who is acquainted with the law (âkâs-dâd)¹; and the object of acquaintance with the law. 75. About the case where there are a supreme judge of the law, a plaintiff, a defence, an arrangement of legal proceedings, and an award; and through what sin it becomes injustice. 76. And this, too, that the justice of him who may therein commit falsehood, as regards so many essential decisions, is injustice.

77. About the many who may seize wealth, which is the property of some one, with their own hands; and, when they litigate about it, he says it is his own property, whereby they are convicted. 78. About incrimination of five kinds as to whatever property is on the spot, or at a distance (pavan hâsar); and whatever is on the same subject. 79. About putting apart, keeping apart², and two apart before being put away; also about litigation as to keeping apart, and whatever is on the same subject. 80. And when some one has to deliver property which is a person's own to some one else, in the

81. About disputing the debts of fathers when one of their associates is confessing them, and the rest have come, and it is possible for them to dispute them, but they do not dispute. 82. And about the progress of a dispute of one of the associates as to the whole debt of one's fathers. 83. About the possibility of children being worthy of death, for wizard's spells, when with their guardian; and of a woman being so when guardian of herself. 84. About a case where the amount of a lamb (mîdat-î asperenô) is the lowest, and the amount of a human being (virôk mozd) is the highest¹. 85. About theft and plunder as regards one's own property, when one brings it away from the possession of some one without dispute. 86. About the triumph of him who, falsely investigating, may act judicially by illegally-issued incentives, when he institutes legal proceedings for the sake of appearances²; as distinguished from him who is truly seeking and truly investigating.

87. About the statements of a litigation of man and wife, which is justifiably brought *on*³. 88. And also this, namely, when she sees herself injured, or defence is possible by means of that which

About the person who has become privileged to give away a daughter to a husband, her father having passed away. 90. About the sin of making a damsel (kanik) weary of her husband. 91. About the sin as regards property in this action, either produced where the action for this purpose is really devoid of illiberality (adahisnīh), or to commit in order that they shall give me a wife even when they do not give her on that account. 92. About the sin of giving a girl (kanik) for a girl, or other living thing, or of speaking thus : ' Do thou go in unto my sister, or daughter, while I, too, will go in unto thine.' 93. And the sin as regards the person of my wife, too, which is owing to that sin. 94. About one obtaining back the value which he gives away for a girl, when the girl is not that value in wedlock. 95. About a girl who, after fifteen years of age, is not given to a husband ; and her father, to satisfy her menstrual excitement (dashtân-mêyah vigârdanō), and to sustain it, becomes sinful and harbours a paramour ; and whatever is on the same subject.

96. About having given food, and anything except a wife, to any one who praises the Mazda-worshippers' religion of another, even though it be through fear ; also this, that it is only he, when he has thereby become quite of the same tenets with the religion of the Mazda-worshippers, to whom the gift of a wife worthy of a man (vîr masâî) is then to be pre-

99. About the day and night which are longest, medium, and shortest; that is, how many Hâsars⁴ they are, each separately; and, as to their occurrence, in what control is the appointed time which is really theirs, each one, as to period. 100. About the Parasang⁵ which is the longest, medium, and shortest; and whatever is owing to their subdivision.

101. About the work and fodder (vâsân)⁶ of an injured beast of burden, by day and night. 102. About a sheep which kills a person, and whether its owner be innocent, or sinful, through not putting a tether (band) upon it; and the reason of the sinfulness and innocence therein. 103. About the period that extends from certainty to dubiousness, even though it be for the supreme priest, or one provides three witnesses; and how long it is. 104. About the multitude of witnesses who give no evidence, together with the judge who is unjustly deciding.

105. About the injuriousness (âzârikîh), for the priestly authorities, of anything that is given to the unworthy. 106. About what kind of gift, that is given, was accepted; that is, how, when given by one when another claims it, it returns to him; how, and in what proportion, when the other does not claim it, its expediency does not arise; and whatever is on the same subject. 107. About a case where there is property of several kinds which a man has given away as a righteous gift, and it is allowable. 108. About the case where whatever is given and reaches some one, when he gives it and does not say how it was given, it becomes a righteous gift. 109. And about its not having become a gift, through fear of whatever is its danger.

110. About the theft and extortion of him who does not maintain the wives and children of persons in his control, to preserve and nourish them, through fear. 111. About the allotment of punishment for the limbs of sinners, and upon which limbs is the allotment. 112. About the atonement for sin where it is most irksome. 113. About the amount of retribution for an assault (zatam) which may be committed upon one worthy of death who is preserved through great judiciousness.

114. About Aûharmazd having given all prosperity to Zaratûst and the disciples of Zaratûst; the theft and extortion which have arisen in a man when he has not given to a worthy person any of the prosperity that has befallen him; and whatever is on the same subject. 115. About how an animate being is situated who is in a place apart (aham), and when he dies in innocence and keeping apart¹, his

About the advantage and pleasure of keeping a promise (mitro-dârîh), and the gravity, harm, and vexation owing to various degrees of promise-breaking (mitrôk-drûgîh); also how a promise is kept. 117. About the grievous sinfulness of strife, insincerity (avâkhîh), and slander, and the harm that proceeds therefrom; also the frost (pazd) and punishment provided for them¹, and whatever is on the same subject.

118. About having given frontier people² as hostages (garôbô) to foreigners who have demanded a ransom (navisnô). 119. About taking up (lâlâ gêrefstanô) anything whatever that is precious to a foreigner, and has become of exceeding value, when they give it up as a ransom³ to Irân; the extreme value of a youth (tigil) when they shall carry him off as a hostage from the foreigners, in place of ransom; and how they are to keep both. 120. About the grievous sinfulness of a man stealing back his ransom from foreigners, though it be his own son. 121. About the sinfulness of the governor (sardâr) of a province through any harm that occurs in the province owing to his elevation and evil commands.

122. About the existence of so many thieves assisting a thief with special ransom, and what kind of reward (navisnô) one is to use with thieves, to

About the non-atonement of thieves, by any amount of anything whatever, without confession as regards their own sin. 125. About the assistance to possession which is claimed by any one from the authorities (padân), when his property is stolen or extorted.

126. About the grievous sinfulness and deceitfulness of many kinds which occur when a woman who is given away with her concurrence, and her acceptance is announced, is given to another man; and whatever is on the same subject. 127. About the unjustifiableness of the wisdom of a man, through which he took away property in dispute, from him who was ignorant, before there was certainty about it. 128. About making intercession in a dispute, for him who is ignorant, with the judge and other authorities and chiefs, even including the king of kings¹, when there is no intercessor for him. 129. About the reason of the fitness of a man for sovereignty, and the lodgment of Aûharmazd upon the limited (tang) person of him who is a good ruler.

130. About the five special ordinances (dâdîstân) that are certain; these are without ordeal, because they are to be considered as certain, and the penalties thereof are to be fully inflicted. 131. About investigation after confession. 132. About squandering (nikizand) wealth of which the custom (dastôbar) of maintaining is begging for it. 133. About the progress (sakîsnô) of legal proceedings not having

135. About bringing a written statement into judicial proceedings, and whatever is on the same subject. 136. About the sin of frightening any one from his place, when he shall move on account of that fright, and the amount of movement and harm which will come upon him therefrom. 137. The delivery back of that which is extorted from one's hands or keeping; that is, how it is to be considered as delivered.

138. About the obviousness of a minor adjudication from that which is greater. 139. About the extreme benefit and peace, even in this world, through a wife and children and grandchildren, and also the prosperity, as regards produce and even wealth thereby, taking away the disputes that arise. 140. About the grievous sinfulness of wealth acquired through unnatural intercourse¹, the annihilation of the spiritual faculties (maînôgânö). 141. About a decree in which the decision is of three descriptions, about three persons. 142. About a tree which, when stolen away, is the death-blow (mât) of a hundred pure birds (vâê), and a thousand birds arise.

143. About a sin which, owing to deceiving previously, has to increase (frâz mastanö) its extent, and to fully taste the extremest crime of a dagger

145. About keeping back one of the combatants from fighting, and whatever is on the same subject.

146. About counter-assaults of eight kinds, assault when an infidel shall commit it upon one of the good religion, and whatever is on the same subject. 147.

About a counter-assault of a heretic (dūs-dênō) when an arch-heretic (sarītar-dênō) is slain.

148. About not leaving any property in the keeping of one worthy of death. 149. About such numbers of abettors of sin being with the sinner, and whatever is on the same subjects. 150. About the injury of a plaint and defence, and the dwelling, property, and feast of the good, by that person who extols the presidentship which is given him, but who is not fit for the presidentship. 151. About the sinfulness of a judge when he shall make a decision for any one according to his origin. 152. About the grievous sinfulness of delivering the person of an Irānian to a foreigner, and whatever is on the same subject.

153. About the greatness of the gift of a righteous man, as compared with (min) the gift of another, for Rashnū¹, the just, to proclaim among the creatures and to accept. 154. This, too, that, when they encounter an apostate and it is necessary to hold a controversy, though there be danger for the hands or feet, or though even for the head, there is to be no refraining from asserting that which is true.

155. This, too, that he who does not assert, on account of fondness for wealth, or dislike for his own people, vexes water and fire and the righteous man, and disturbs even the reposing archangels from their thrones.

156. About the grievous sinfulness of making the righteous dissevered (aûskâftakö). 157. About the bad properties produced by the evil spirit, adjudication attentive to lying evidence and false, in opposition to Rashnû, the just, and through discontent at the advantage due to Rashnû, owing to the impossibility of the occurrence of those mischiefs being produced at Rashnû's judgment seat, there where they do not give decisions for the wretched for the sake of the aristocratic multitude (âzâd hâvandîh râî). 158. And about the aristocratic multitude which comes to Rashnû owing to taking bribes, and went with a complaint to Aûharmazd, and whatever is on the same subject. 159. About a just judge who is appointed one of an assembly for the opposition of thieves, oppressors, and destroyers of the righteous.

160. About the possibility of the coming of every one, through diligence, to the best existence. 161. About the superiority (masîh) of true justice over (min) other good works, and the grievous sinfulness owing to false justice, and when they shall not deliver a sentence with a full understanding of the true from the false.

162. About solemnizing and learning by heart (narm kardânö) the Gâthas, the Hâdokht¹, and the Vastag¹, through knowing the foundations (pâyakân) thereof; the sin owing to not knowing them, and whatever proceeds therefrom. 163. About the greatness of the law through decrees and judgments from other discourses (srôbân).

164. About property of seven kinds, of which one says that it is not allowable to take it as security for other property. 165. About ten friends with different assertions on the same subject.

166. And about the apportionment of this discourse there are complete decisions of several other kinds, and into those, too, it advances and thereby introduces much adjudication, which takes heed, in every one, of words and deeds of many kinds, and is specifically and also intelligibly apportioned.

167. Perfect excellence is righteousness.

CHAPTER XXI.

1. The first of eighteen sections of the Ganabâsar-nigad² contains particulars about the thief, with his arrest as the special thief of that which is seized (tereftö) by him; the premeditated sin, the imprisonment and fettering, the punishment appointed for atonement of the sin, the execution of the duty, ¹ The name of the eleventh Nask (see Chap. XII).

² Corresponding to the sixteenth word, ahurâi, in the Ahunavair, according to B. P. Riv.; but it is the eighteenth Nask in other Rivâyats. Ganabâ-sar-nigad means 'the thief's head downstricken;' but it is misread Dvâsrûgad, Dvâsrûngad, Dvâsrûgîd, or Dvâsrôb, in the Rivâyats, which also state that it contained sixty-five kardah, or subdivisions, which agree with the numbers of sections mentioned in Chaps. XXI, XXIII, XXIV. This Nask is evidently named from the contents of its first section, and possibly from its initial words.

and the amount of the reward (naviśn); the amount of speciality in the ransom (navâk) of every one, each separately; the act and place of punishment, what is the person who is strangling and the mode, how those who are therein strangling are drawn forth (naṣī-aitō) successively, and which is set to work first.

2. About a person whose offending limbs are bound, the degree of tightness of the binding and fettering, and the formula (nīrang) of being bound for the sin of theft. 3. About imprisonment, and the imprisonment which accusers have to provide, at their own expense, if they are those who are privileged; and whatever is on the same subject. 4. The number of places for fetters, and those which the thief, whoever he is, possesses, each separately. 5. How far, how, and for what putting on of fetters (garov-dahisñih) those accusers have to provide a thief's fetters, too, at their own expense, if they are those who are privileged; the place for the requisite privileged putting on of fetters, the sin owing to putting on more fetters of a different kind, and that which is owing to neglecting the putting on of the fetters which they have to provide; the limit as regards the deserving of more fettering, the number of grades of theft beyond the limit of deserving fettering, and those which are below the limit of deserving fettering.

6. About the kinds of theft, and the excessive sinfulness of a thief through cutting¹ and wounding the body; the undiscoverableness which is specially as regards a thief at a distance (pavan hâsar), he who is on the spot being he who is within one step ; theft, with plunder, injuring the existence¹, minor injury, and other sins, may be in confederacy² beforehand or afterwards. 7. About the thievish design of a theft which is not abetted (lâ ham), a theft with equal shares, and a theft with different shares.

8. About the sin of assisting a thief (dûg aīyyâ-rak), of making investigation and releasing, of a sentence of acquittal, and of a listener to a thief ; he who is a giver of assistance to a thief is carried off for theft ; also decisions about theft by a child, by a childless woman, and by her who is pregnant ; likewise their maintenance and earnings (vîndisnô) in retributive work, and the work of a pregnant thief.

9. About the accumulated property of the innumerable which they would keep away from thieves, both the thief by means of his hands, and him who is a thief not by means of his hands. 10. About the testimony of a thief, that is, for what it is admissible when³ he advances as a thief ; how at the time when it is necessary to seize and bind him, and how at the time when it is necessary to flatter (nîvâkhtanô) and deceive him until one attains to absolute power (kâm-kârîh) thereby. 11. About rewards (navisnô) with thieves. 12. About the difference of theft from plunder.

13. About property which any one, carrying it off,

CHAPTER XXII.

. Ganabâ-sar-nigad Nask.

1. The second section is miscellaneous (ham-dâdakō): about the authority for the enquiry (khvâst-radakîh) of a father into the sin of a grown-up son, when unaware of the sin of his son at the time it is committed; that of a son into that of a father, and of others grown-up, as to one another, when they are not abettors of the sin; and that of a husband into the sin of a wife, when not and when² co-operating and unrestraining. 2. About arrival at the period for the teaching of children by a guardian or father, and the mode of his teaching; the period at which the sin of a child has reached a beginning, the extent of the sin of childhood, the retribution in childhood, and that also at maturity; the sin due to not teaching a child who is to be taught, and whatever is on the same subject.

3. About the freedom from slaughter which is to keep away the destruction of the world; and what is the mode of distributing the property of a man of the valiant after his slaughter. 4. About the sin of having given implements of slaughter to a woman, a child, or a foreigner. 5. About a woman who, as regards two men worthy of death, demands the head of the one, and is seeking a son in the other one.

6. About a warrior, without provisions (atûsakō), who, on the march, has come upon pasture, corn, and sheep whose shepherd¹ is a stranger to him, and whatever is on the same subject. 7. About considering property inexpedient, and the decision thereon.

8. About the amount of delay of a judge on becoming aware that the plaintiff is falsely petitioning and the defendant is falsely confessing. 9. About the amount of delay of the judge, and in the court of justice (dâd gâs); and whatever is on the same

¹ The Pahlavi word is written 𐬔𐬀𐬎 twenty-four times, and 𐬔𐬀𐬎 once, in this Book, but its reading is not quite certain. It means 'shepherd' throughout Chaps. XXIII, XXXIX, and in XXXI, 17, 31, XL, 3; but is used for 'herdsman' in XXXIX, 3, and for 'follower' in XXXI, 2. This last meaning is strongly in favour of the reading pasîg, for pasîk, 'following,' an adjectival form derived from pas, 'after,' which, when used as a noun, would imply 'one who follows,' as drovers and shepherds are accustomed to do, with a few local exceptions. The Pahlavi spelling of the word is uniformly inconsistent with the reading pâs, 'guard, protector;' and it seems hazardous to trace it to a possible Avesta adjective pasvya, from pasu, 'a sheep,' because the latter word becomes pâh in Pahlavi. The word also occurs in Pahl. Vend. XV, 116; it is a transcript of Av. fshenghî and fshenghyô in Yas. XXXI, 10 b, XLIX, 9 a, and of fshê in Vend. XIII, 10, 11; so that it may perhaps be read fsheg, or fshê, as a mere transcript from the Avesta.

About a decision regarding a judge who explained a doubtful opinion as a certainty, and that which is certain as a doubtful decision, and would make an undecided matter decided. 11. About the opinion as to certainty and that as to doubtfulness, making a decision, and whatever is on the same subject.

12. About the business of commissioned judges, from him who is lowest to him who is highest, one above the other one. 13. Decisions about adjudication; that which is legal when two judges are together, that which is legal with either one judge or two judges together, and whatever is on the same subject. 14. About the statements of a decision regarding interpretations (pâdō-khânânō)¹, and whatever is on the same subject. 15. About the proportion of the time of judges for decision, that for summoning witnesses to the judges, and that for the proceedings (sakisnō). 16. About the judge who is doubly satisfied², and him who is not doubly satisfied; also the time from a judge's not being doubly satisfied till his being doubly satisfied. 17. About a judge of four customs, and his decision thereon; one who knows the decree and would act to effect it, and one who knows it and would not act. 18. About the supremacy of a judge as to adjudication so far as there is a false decision therein; how it is when he is at a distance (pavan hâsar), and how it is when he is on the spot; he who is at a distance becomes a superior therein, when he comes back to the place of justice before the end of a Hâsar¹. 19. About other false teaching of a judge which is manifest therefrom, and the retribution for the false teaching; the false summoning, false investigation, and false evidence of the complainant (mûst-hômônd) having been his own, and a separate atonement unto the afflicted one has to atone for the affair; it having been mitigated by no good work. 20. About the trouble of adjudication to the priestly authorities (radân). 21. About the proficiency of a woman or child who is acquainted with the law², for a judgeship, being above that of a full-grown man unacquainted with the law.

22. About assisting the want of one's own disciple for a master for the recited law, and the sin due to not assisting, such as that when, wanting assistance, it is allowable for the afflicted one to beg an assistant from foreigners, and according to his petition is the bringing of a foreigner for assistance; and whatever is on the same subject. 23. About the supremacy of Rashnû³ the righteous.

24. About several persons who are engaged in legal proceedings about the keeping and non-division of property not their own, and the decision as regards for whom one has in keeping that property which is not his own. 25. About actions which are not inconsistent and those which are inconsistent. 26. About the decision of a judge of congregational actions.

27. About the offence which accusers would commit, as regards the law, by means of the law, it being

Ganabâ-sar-nigad Nask.

1. One section of the next twelve is the Pasûs-haûrvastân ('shepherd's-dog code'), about the shepherd who is selecting a shepherd's dog for the sheep, and the shepherd with various shepherd's dogs; about the shepherd's comprehension of their serviceableness, one with the other, and whatever is on the same subject. 2. The extent of authorised efficiency (sañt-gârîkîh) accomplished by the shepherd's-dog nature of a shepherd's dog, after his being appointed by the shepherd.

3. About the shepherd's preparing the means of bedding¹ for the shepherd's dog, giving the amount of the price of the daily food of a shepherd's dog, provisions for the dog in the winter, and the preparation of a fire beforehand which it is necessary to make in the sheepfold (pâh-hastö). 4. About the mode of preparing the appointed fireplace of the sheepfold, the position of the shepherd's dog and the dog's fire, the means of lodging and provisioning the shepherd's dog in the sheepfold, the sin owing to the occasions when one proceeds to provide another mode, and whatever is on the same subject.

in flocks¹ dreading distress; the dog, their protection, is not provided with bedding, nor with pillow, and they are happy; every night he has to come out, through the whole flock, three times, besides when one of the guards (paḍānō), who is apprehensive, counts them, who, every day at dawn, has to walk out among the sheep, with good words, to inspect them, to apply remedies properly to the sheep that are sick, wounded, bruised, or defective, and to be their guardian; also the sin owing to worrying them, and whatever is on the same subject. 6. About that which is to be done by him as regards the breeding of the sheep, and likewise for the sake of the young ones; and the sin when he does not do it, or shall act otherwise. 7. About his fully understanding where and which is the sheep for each young one. 8. About his habit and means of keeping away the thief and the wolf from the sheep, and the preservation of the sheep thereby when an awful cloud and wind and rain arise, or when the position of those distressed ones, at the fords of rivers, comes opposite a locality (nisisno) of bad footing; when it is not possible for him to save all, he has to save the greater in value, or the more in number.

9. About his having guarded a sheep from the pasture of others and the retribution for the sin of not having guarded as to the eating and damaging of the corn and pasture of others by the sheep. 10. About the extent of preservation by the shepherd's dog's driving the sheep from the corn and pasture of others of various species, such as that which one calls the very stupid (gôltar) pig; there is, more-

11. About the indication of an assembly place (garang) for the sheep, in a warm or cool locality, by the shepherd's dog. 12. About the characteristics of sheep from one to four years of age. 13. About the village (vîs) of the shepherd, where the shepherd's dog is known when he arrives; how it is when a sheep has to be kept out of the sheepfold by the shepherd's dog, and how it is when it has to be driven by him to the village of the heedful shepherd. 14. About the coming of the shepherd unto a sheep, and the path from the village which the shepherd has provided for ¹ the flock.

15. About a shepherd when he withholds the daily food of a shepherd's dog, and the exhaustion of life thereby; after the fourth deprivation of food (atapak-dâdö) ² it is allowable for the shepherd's dog to kill a sheep for nourishment. 16. About a sheep, which comes astray into the flock to be slaughtered, being the perquisite of the butcher (bâhar-i kûstâr), and that of the shepherd's dog being its dog ³ and the appointed number of one sheep. 17. About their extent of movement, and their pregnancy and growing old (bâr va-khasân). 18. About the sin of the shepherd, as regards the shepherd's dog, through injustice as to work, reward, and chastisement; and of the shepherd's dog, as regards the shepherd, through improperly tending a sheep, or worrying it by exertion; also his chastisement, and the payment that occurs for the incompetence and unworthiness therein; besides adjudications between the shepherd and shepherd's dog.

19. About the instruction which the shepherd gives to the shepherd's dog, through reminders (pavan ayâdîhâ), to control a sheep, when, the shepherd's dog having heard some musical notes (srûdô gâsânô), the instruction took place in the form of words; and, when the notes were not heard, even by a blow (zatham), the means of that instructor being a blow. 20. About the peculiarity of the shepherd's dog as regards its employment (rôgkâr), at the periods of satisfying menstrual excitement, solemnizing the season-festivals, and other important good works.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Ganabâ-sar-nigad Nask.

1. The first section of the last thirty-five is the Stôristân ('beast-of-burden code'), particulars about the sin, affecting the soul, due to unlawfully striking and wounding as regards beasts of burden and cattle; and the retribution and compensation for it to one's own cattle, that in case of a beast of burden and that in case of a sheep (anûmâê), during life.
2. That which arises when one smites them with a brand (dakhshak); that when one smites them on the flank, and that when it is in front of them; that when their flanks are so smitten is complete smiting.

3. Of the smiting, too, of other members, the smiting in front, though the smiting be such as when one so smites for smiting on the flank, is not complete smiting. 4. And that which amounts to as much as a complete smiting, when one so smites as for smiting on the flank, is such as that when one casts off the skin, and that when one casts off the flesh, thereby, that when one is cutting it, or that when wounds (khîmân) or serpent-scourging (mâr-vanô)¹ are upon it.

5. It is also about making the dog which drives the sheep (pasûs-haûrvô) dumb. 6. About bruising the limbs and plucking the feathers of birds, such as the case when it is complete smiting, and such as that when it is not complete smiting. 7. And unlawfully destroying as regards fish, such as when it would make their flesh uneatable. 8. An account as to noticeably and worryingly beating cattle, about decrees of whatever kinds as to each separate beating worryingly that is to be considered as noticeable beating, and many decrees as to whatever is on the same subject. 9. About the retribution for making clothing of skins and woven wool (tadakô), and the sin of any one owing to kindling a fire therewith, or roasting flesh which is stolen or plundered.

10. About the good work of all that is wise activity, and the reward of the happy place²; the sin of everything that is ignorant activity, and the bridge penalty of the evil place¹; connected therewith, to make him who is righteous develope in wisdom, and to make him who is wicked diminish in ignorance, is the world.

CHAPTER XXV.

Ganabâ-sar-nigad Nask.

1. The second section is the Ar'gistân ('value code'), particulars about the value of small consumption of animate, and also that of inanimate, property; with the desirableness of information thereon, each separately. 2. The value of not destroying a righteous man even for a decree and justice, and of atonement for injuring the existence² of the fire of Varahrân³.

CHAPTER XXVI.

Ganabâ-sar-nigad Nask.

1. The third section is the Aratêstâristân ('warrior code'), particulars about the worthiness of destroying a wolf; and, among wolves, the greater need of destroying (zanisntarîh) those with two legs than those with four legs.

2. About selecting the daily supplies of warriors, the beasts of burden, clothing, and equipment of warriors, and other appurtenances (avârîgânakîh) which are to be given to them; also selecting a horse and accoutrements (zênö-afzâr) for each one.

³ The sacred Bahîrâm fire.

3. About having a man's horse trained before one sends him to smite enemies. 4. About the efficacy of the resources and care of a warrior in the destruction which enemies occasion ; also the army and the slaughter of war. 5. About the sin of the village and abode of the warriors on the occurrence of a battle, and what is the retribution for wounds and damage ; what is that which is disfiguring (apîrâyak) therein, and what is that which is worthy of death therein.

6. About the characteristics of the wearing of armour (zênâvandîh) and not wearing of armour by warriors. 7. About the rank of the general (sipâh-padô), and other officers (padân) over the troops, as to daily supplies, pay, and dignity ; also their subordinates (azîrag), and the number of troopers (gûrd) to each one of the officers. 8. About the anxieties of a trooper for the protection of person and family. 9. About the number of troopers when the king of kings goes to battle. 10. About the proportion of daily provision for two warriors, the meat and milk and bread thereof, which are for the sake of providing guidance and causing contests of the warriors in that good eating ; also the reason of certifying (gôvâik) its distribution and weighing, the beast of burden of the original village (bûn kôkîh)¹, and its means of being sent unto the troops. 11. About cutting the herbs for the veterinary surgeon (stôr bezashkö), the store of accoutrements, and other things which are necessary with an army. 12. About the feeding of warriors on the day of battle, the meat and whatsoever are their eatables ; even so the food of the horses.

13. About the wealth which foreigners bring away, and this which is declared thereof, that is, 'I, too, am assisting even the wolf.' 14. About the display of esteem by warriors together, the union of friendship one with the other, obedient unto their commander of the troops, and mindfully resigning themselves to death, there being seen a spiritual reward, without doubt, in the future existence.

15. About the choice of a commander over the troops; also as to his coming and understanding the habits of his troops, each separately, through the capability of skill which is theirs. 16. About estimating the strength and resources of the troops, with those of their enemies; that is, how the battle is to be engaged in, or how the case is when it is to be avoided. 17. About the provision of anything requisite¹ which warriors shall leave for safety when there is danger in the neighbourhood from a distant stronghold, or danger to a neighbouring stronghold from afar. 18. About the case where, when it is necessary to engage in battle, the horse of a warrior has not arrived, and it is allowable to seize upon several horses from a herd of horses. 19. About the watchful sentinel (nigâhakô pâspânô), and of what kind is the information from which this is manifest, to the army and commander of the troops, that the enemy is well dead, or fled.

20. About a demonstration whereby they produce terror and apprehension in the enemy. 21. About an altercation of the commander of the troops with foreigners before a battle; altercation also through an envoy, and calling them into subjection to the king of kings and the religion of the sacred beings.

22. About admonition to the troops, and declaring the share and arrangement of special duty of each one in the fight; announcing to the troops the recompense of the active, telling and informing the troops of the reason of being worthy of death, of the worthiness of destroying foreigners, of the command of the sacred beings as to their destruction when they shall not accept the Irânian nationality (Aîrîh), and the equally great reward and recompense for their destruction announced by revelation, the legal code (dâdistânîkîh) of Irân.

23. About not uttering words of irritation on the day of battle, and not mentioning, among the troops, any intelligence which gives the troops apprehension, but only that which is agreeable and pleasing, through giving heartiness and increasing the strength. 24. About the sacred ceremonial on the day of battle and evil deeds of war;—a twig of the sacred twigs of that ceremonial, and the Avesta as regards fighting, being the first arrow well delivered into the mark shot at;—the consecration of the water which is nearest to the place of battle, even by bringing holy-water; and the sequence of the fight, that is, with which arms and appliances it is first to be fought, and successively unto those which are the last.

25. About the proportion of those who keep the arms (zâê) for the combatants, and, after a victory over foreigners, are taking away the hostages and captives, out of the foreigners, from the combatants; also their return from them. 26. At what degree of distance from them they have to carry the arms and appliances and the restoratives for the unfatigued and the fatigued; and, the accoutrements. being deposited, a warm bath prepared, and relaxation of the body effected, the reward of merit is given. 27. One has to search offenders, to bring restoratives for the unfatigued and the fatigued, to deliver the accoutrements back to the arsenal (gangö), to allot the share of the hostage brought back to his own people, and also much else on the same subject.

CHAPTER XXVII.

Ganabâ-sar-nigad Nask.

1. The fourth section is miscellaneous: about a warm bath being in a house of what kind, the position of security of the fireplace, the watchfulness to be upheld there, and whatever is on the same subject. 2. About the strength that a horse has to exert for the sake of the earth, and that which is to be exerted in that mode for the sake of fire. 3. About food and other matters which may be prepared with fire, and the security of the fire in like manner. 4. About fire which, even on the road, is free from throwing away, bodily refuse¹, and dead matter², and from the injury and harm owing thereto; the various safeguards of fire from being given to an infidel (ag-dênô) or a child; the distance of the fire from a rivulet³; the penalty for throwing it away, or other sin as regards it; and the proportion of nourishment and preparation for the fire in summer, and also in winter.

5. About picketing (barâ nisâstanö) a horse, that is, how it is justifiable when it is in water and dust, how it is so when really in very distressing bodily refuse, and how it is so when even in bodily refuse that is tolerable. 6. About the proportion of nourishment for mankind, fire, and cattle. 7. About receiving a guest, the praise of liberality, and the grandeur of the liberal, the contempt for stinginess, and the want of the wanderer.

8. About the mode of wearing garments in a dwelling of Mazda-worshippers, even so far as a bandage of four rags for protection¹; the care of them each separately, the wages of the makers and ornamenterers of each one, and whatever is on the same subject. 9. About having procured a street-keeper (kûgpânö) for the Mazda-worshippers, the business of the street-keeper thereof, and whatever is on the same subject.

10. About preparing in the summer a store for the winter. 11. About reaping a field of corn, the Avesta² for the first reaping, and having consecrated the first sheaf with the dedication (shnûman) to Aûharmazd the lord. 12. About the union of those of the good religion together, both in removing want and in union even with infidels in that which

And superiority is a furtherance of living beings, and pervades the natural extent thereof.

4. About him who would sell property not his own, and him who would buy it. 5. About selling a sheep frequenting the house, and one not frequenting the house. 6. About various precautions as to samples of various things. 7. About selling beasts of burden, cattle, slaves, servants, and other property, of the nature of whose species one is aware through speaking about the nature of different species; and the retribution for the sin of whatever is on the same subject. 8. That which is an obvious agreement for selling with defects¹, when it is declared of beasts of burden; and that which is ever defective on selling. .

9. About a house in which a person, or dog, has passed away through contagious sickness, and the clothing which the man wore owing to that sickness; that is, how it is when spoiled for selling for three years, how it is when it is so for two years, and how it is when it is so for one year. 10. About a house in which a person, or dog, has reposed in a contagious sickness, and not passed away after his descent therefrom; and the clothing which the man wore in that sickness; that is, how it is when spoiled for selling for two years, how it is when it is so for one year, and how it is when it is so for thirty nights; and whatever is on the same subject.

11. About forming a family (gôharik kardano) with foreigners, that is, how it is when allowable.
 12. About a sheep of good breed for the three nights¹, and its slaughter after the three nights; likewise many other decisions as regards superiority and sheep of a good breed.

CHAPTER XXXI.

Hûspâram Nask.

1. A miscellaneous section is about taking anything which is not one's own at the time when he does not think that they see him and they do see him, at the time when he thinks that they see him and they do not see him, and at the time when he thinks that they see him and they do see him. 2. About giving righteous instruction, that is, what happens, and how, at the time when the follower² asks again. 3. About the sin of imprisoning the needy, exalting falsehood, and approving deceit.
 4. About the action and command which diminish, or alter, a liberal gift to any one. 5. About the limit of the open-handedness of a wife who should be privileged, and who is reverent towards her husband, out of anything that has not reached the husband; how it is when the husband is foolish, how it is when it is legally, how when derived from what is legally property, and how about that which is unspent savings (anyûrûzd kabun); also the limit of the reverence of a wife for a husband, and whatever is on the same subject.

² See Chap. XXII, 6 n.

6. About causing the conveyance of a maiden from the house of her fathers, or guardians, to the village of her husband, to hold the position of house-mistress of the husband; of the wife when she becomes reverent and propitiatory towards him, and admonishing her when she speaks thus: 'I am thy wife, but I will not perform a wife's duties for thee;' also the quarrelling of a husband with his wife, and carrying it on to the bridge of judgment.

7. About the blood on a woman who wants washing, and the bridge penalty upon him who has sexual intercourse with a woman who wants washing, with her who is a foreigner, or any other of those not authorisedly for intercourse; the confusion of germs by the woman who grants intercourse to foreigners, and other sin which they may commit about like matters. 8. About a wife claimed from foreigners; that is, how it is when allowable.

9. About the preparation of a wife for the control of a son, the period for it and for suckling, and the wish for a son which is present with a husband. 10.

About the sin of a man owing to rejecting the controlling of his son by a sister or grown-up daughter.

11. About three things through which mankind become sinful and injuring their own property, and the possession of them is not to be taken away.

12. About those who may not inflict lawful chastisement with oppressive demeanour.

13. About that which a man is to be made to provide in feasting and gifts, for his store of good works, on his wife bringing forth. 14. How it is when he is a man of wisdom, and how it is when he is a disciple; how it is when it is a male birth, and how it is when it is a female. 15. The advantage and benefit therefrom; the religious announcement of a name for the new-born, should it be a male, or should it be a female; the good work owing to the decision of a religious appointment of a name for the progeny, [and the sin]¹ owing to giving again to it a name of the idolators (dêviyastân).

16. About the ritual and usage in admitting the male to a sheep, owing to which the male is a gratifier of the impregnated female nature, and a protection of the female nature; and the want of training and freedom from defect of the progeny; a proper condition of the flock, too, arises likewise through worshipping the sacred beings and providing the sacred feast; also about the shepherd's dog and the blessing for him. 17. About the regard of the shepherd for the breeding of the sheep. 18. About the work of the ceremonial and of providing the sacred feast, and the advantage for the sheep from the same cause. 19. About the Mazda-worshipping district-breeding of the dogs in a district, through providing careful nurture for the dogs, which is a good work owing to the same cause.

20. About the object of payment for teaching the Zôti duty, for the guardianship of the fire, for the publication and watching of worship, and for other labour, and whatever is on the same subject.

21. About the lawful guardianship of a child, the child who is lamp-light and the father who is the fire, and whatever is on the same subject. 22. About sickness owing to the look of an evil eye, or the vicinity of a menstruous woman, because those with an evil eye, or menstuous, are thereby harmful. 23. About what is the kind of watching for the admitters of fear; the fearful and whatever is on the same subject. 24. And that in case of descending from a house on the outside.

25. About lawful arrangements for supplies, in union and assistance one towards the other; about payment for the labour in the lawful arrangement; and whatever is on the same subject. 26. About the produce of property for the multitude, and that also for one's own association; that is, how it is when taking it authorisedly, and how it is when not doing so; and whatever is on the same subject.

27. The special generosity of judges in conveying property back to its owners; the advantage from just judges, and the harm from unjust sentencing and false decisions. 28. So, also, the advantage from truly demanding, truly answering, and assisting the just; the enmity and harm from falsely demanding, falsely investigating, and assisting a false demander and false investigation; but not the enmity and secret harm of a complaint of the wretched. 29. Advice to judges about just decision and abstinence from false decision; and, secondly, the reward of their just decision, and the awful bridge judgment of false decision; the accountability in the spiritual existence in the case of judges, the praise of truth and contempt of falsity, the gratification of the sacred beings and vexation of the demons from just judgment and turning away from false decision; and whatever is on the same subject.

which arrived for use in the nourishment and assistance of mankind and animals; the sowing of corn from the bodies of Mashya and Mashyôî¹; and whatever is on the same subject. 31. About the labour in sowing and cultivating corn, and whatever is in the business of agriculturists; perseverance in agriculture, and the limit of its allotment, owing to suitable participation and inevitable participation in agriculture; whatever is about the shepherd and whatever is about the agriculturist, and the adjudication between them. 32. About the corn which is sown, that which is reaped, that which is for an increase (pavan nad-aê), and that which is for other things.

33. About the excitement of any one, owing to his blood. 34. About those kinds of ownership of land and other things that are best. 35. About him who sees some one conducting water for cultivation, when the person unauthorisedly sows the land of the observer who does not dispute about it with fearlessness and effectual resistance. 36. About the selling of supplies granted, which may be done in hunger, nakedness, and fear; and whatever is on the same subject.

37. About the supremacy of sin, both that which arises on the spot, and that at a distance (pavan hâsar); and whatever is on the same subject. 38. About the atonableness of every sin, and the bridge judgment for destroying a righteous man, for witchcraft, and for carrying evil (agîh) to fire and water. 39. About atonement for the sin of Yât, Bâzâî, Khôr, Aredûs, Avôtrist, Âgêrept¹, and giving no food, through giving of scars (pisang-das)², labour, and punishment; the kinds of horse-whip and scourge, and how the penitential effect of both arises. 40. When a sinner dies outright on account of the penalty of giving of scars, or the performance of the labour, or the exertion of effecting the penance of punishment, and when a man has died penitent, but incapable of a desire³ for the retribution of sin, and has not atoned in the worldly existence, what the nature of his soul's helplessness is, owing to sin. 41. About those for whom there is no retribution for sin.

¹ These six names are applied to the various grades of assault and wounding, for which a special scale of punishment is appointed (see Sls. I, 1, 2, XI, 1, 2, XVI, 1, 5). Here the list begins at the most heinous end of the scale, and the last three names, which refer to the lightest offences, have been already explained in Chaps. XIX, 1 n, XX, 64 n. The first three names are explained in Farh. Oîm, pp. 36, l. 7-37, l. 2, as follows:—'For whatever reaches the source of life the name is Khôr; one explains Bâzât as "smiting," and Yât as "going to," though it be possible for the soul of man to be withstanding; and a counterstroke is the penalty for a Yât when it has been so much away from the abode of life.' These six gradations of crime, therefore, range from the infliction of the nearest possible approximation to a fatal wound, down to the merely constructive assault of seizing a weapon. All authorities agree in estimating the relative heinousness of the first four crimes by the following numbers: 180, 90, 60, and 30; but regarding the amounts for the two lighter offences there is much difference of statement. In the old law of the Vendîdâd there are seven gradations of such crime, the lowest four corresponding in name with the lowest four here, and all punishable by lashes, with a horse-whip, or scourge, varying from five to two hundred in number, according to the heinousness of the offence and the number of times it has been committed.

³ Owing to sickness, or any other disabling cause.

42. About what is the kind of contest of a poor man, plundered of his property; first, as regards the oppressor who was the plunderer, and, afterwards, having petitioned for criminal proceedings, through the judges, as regards his oppressor, until their repayment of the property. 43. About being delivered into distress and disaster¹, and the decision thereon. 44. About the oppressiveness of the much pollution of greediness (âzö) which is owing to all its fiendishness, and the arrangement of the creator about it for restraining the same fiend² from destroying the whole worldly creation. 45. About the great judiciousness of a man in want of power being good, for preserving his own life and making it nurturable.

CHAPTER XXXII.

Hûspâram Nask.

1. One section of the next twenty contains particulars about the rite of an ordeal accomplished, also the modes of one's preservation or incrimination therein, and whatever is on the same subject.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

Hûspâram Nask.

1. One section is about the mode and object of confinement as regards a beast of burden, sheep, and dog that are mad (dêvânakö), and the operation of the affliction (vakhsisnö); also to what extent is their restoration; and when not restored, but come for slaughter, the care of them even in confinement, and whatever is on the same subject. 2. About the harm (vinâs) which the beast of burden, sheep, and dog shall commit. 3. About the sin which killed one who is no offender¹. 4. About the care and remedy for a sick dog, and whatever is on the same subject.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

Hûspâram Nask.

1. One section is miscellaneous: about the object of amassing property lawfully produced, or derived from (frôdô min) what is legally property; the production authorisedly of what is derived from that which is legally property, and the production unauthorisedly of that which is legally property thereby become one, at first, as regards the very virtuous or vicious legal proceedings therein.

2. About the lawful time for giving up a maiden to her husband, the completion of her possessions, and whatever is on the same subject. 3. About the impoverishment owing to the completion of the possessions given, and whatever is on the same subject. 4. About a father who has sons, and for which of them a wife is to be earlier sought. 5. Also about which of his daughters is to be given away to a husband, and whatever is on the same subject.

6. About the progressive meritoriousness of a righteous gift for a woman, and the grievous sinfulness owing to its being dissipated. 7. About wealth through a righteous gift, the announcement of its manifest acceptance, and the acknowledgment of its acceptance in words, as a completed act that is so far exhausted.

8. About a foreigner when an Irânian asks him for a reward for assistance in battle with his fellow-tribesmen, and the foreigner does not become generous, though the recompense is for the generosity of the Irânians.

9. About the offering up (madam dahisnō) of water; that which is an appointed indicator (numû-dâr), and that which is no indicator; that which is an indicator of complete presentation, and that of partial presentation; that water which is continually producing the offering up (ûzdahînâk), in like manner, of something of the things of a righteous gift, through the moistened peculiarity and distinction¹ of an offering-producing gift of a male from that of a female; and that which is an indicator both male and female, and a voice producing offerings, is animate, or inanimate, or derived from the inanimate; that which is an indicator is a germ (tôkhmakō-1), that which is in a germ is of one species, that which is in a species is of one form, and the proportion that is appointed is completed, though the purpose for which it is appointed has not arisen; and whatever is on the same subject.

10. About the five best and five worst actions, the seven² heinous sins, and the three sins that are very ill-atoned for. 11. About the sin of staining with bodily refuse, injuring the existence³, and of a

About a decision as to the justifiableness of clothing, arms, equipments, and other things being given to foreigners, besides promoting their service and business, and giving them any assistance whatever, or listening to that which relates to assistance; likewise listening to drunkards. 14. About unlawfully destroying and cutting plants, with a decision about it.

15. About the sin of digging a grave¹ for burying a corpse, whether of the idolators (dēviyastân) or non-idolators, and of supplying clothing for the corpse of a dead one of the idolators. 16. About him who threw bodily refuse² on to fire or water, or any place or garment on which it is not authorisedly cast, to make Mazda-worshippers polluted; and whatever is on the same subject.

17. An account of water as regards the description and extent of moisture of the land. 18. About the sin owing to rendering anything useless through water or fire. 19. About carrying off two-thirds of the misery from the world, by eradicating it from the creatures through all the illumination of fires; and carrying off all adversity from the period of the creatures, through the freedom from malice of mankind, one as regards the other, and through their perfect sympathy together.

CHAPTER XXXV.

Hûspâram Nask.

1. One section contains particulars about the science (dânisnô) of seeking a son, advice about it from revelation (dênô), the advantage of offspring for the admonitory explanation of revelation within one's self, and the harm owing to neglecting the advice of the same.

2. About what happens in the begetting of a son ; the first sexual excitement it should produce for the female, the second, third, fourth, and fifth ; the arising of a son in the world, and also the milk, owing to her impregnation. 3. And, when it is so that it amounts to a son, which of the two, male or female, is sooner emitting the germs at the time of occurrence ; and how and how long both have remained, at the time, in semination, how long in connection, and how long in bleeding. 4. When and wherefrom various expectations are produced to contend about, and when and by what signs the male sex, or female sex, of the offspring has become manifest.

5. When the localization¹ regarding it is arranged, and, as to the members, which is the first member therein, and their being produced, each consecutively, till the bodily form is complete ; which, and in what position, is the localization of the members after the complete production of the form of the body, and the purpose as regards the position and localization of the members after the complete production of the

The effect upon the offspring which is furnished with subjection to the male, so far as the complete effecting of it is within the limit for its authorisation¹; the time (vidanâânag²) of the offspring with the female, the period of its turning downwards for birth, and the occurrence of birth at the same time.

7. About the growth of life, too, with the bodily organs (tanûgân); and which is the first bone become possessed of marrow, apart from the other bones, as it is reported. 8. About the admissibility of the elaboration of the male sex, or female sex, within it, by the guardian spirit of the righteous, at the fifth month; and the ceremony for the guardian spirit of the righteous for the sake of the arrival of a male child.

9. About the act of childbirth by a pregnant woman before recourse to midwifery (dâigânîh), except that relating to the navel string of the child; also its first and second food, and when the midwifery is that of her mother; what is the kind of milk, and the care of the child at the time, its bandaging, sleeping, nourishment, and protection; and the sin owing to acting unlawfully in such matters. 10. About how many months is the bearing of the offspring in the womb of the camel, horse, ass, cow, and woman ; and whatever is on the same subject. 11. About the spiritual perception of a newborn child, and its coming into the boundaries of worldly comprehension on the same subjects.

12. About the habits through which multitudes of mankind attain to the acme of beautiful form : that of desire for women, that of swiftness which is owing to the strength of the leg, and that of powerfulness which is owing to the vigour of the body, that of desire for wealth, that of speaking in an assembly, and that of speaking at a distance, that through which any one uncontrolled comes to a downfall, that through which there is more knowledge of obedience, and that through which a counteraction of the affliction of the race arises.

13. About the vicious desire of the performer and permitter of unnatural intercourse ; also their violent lustfulness, heinous practice, and corrupt, polluted bodies, blighted in destiny ; great through their destruction of life in the things which they see, and every greatness inevitably provides them a merited death ; as great in sinfulness as *Az-i Dahâk*¹ in oppression, as the serpent *Srôbar*² in witchcraft, as *Tûr-i Brâdrô-rêsh*³, the *Karap*⁴, in destroying the righteous, and as a deceiving apostate in falsehood.

14. About the grievous sinfulness of a woman, just delivered and giving milk, whose progeny is the offspring from intercourse with divers males, and whatever is on the same subject.

15. About the increasing vigour of the female from the mounting of the male, and the diminished vigour of the male from mounting on to the female.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

Hūspâram Nask.

1. Six¹ Fargards of one section of the last fourteen contain particulars about the enumeration of species of ownership, their precedence one over the other, and their good report in conducting legal proceedings. 2. About property that is brought up to the judges, which, owing to an accuser, becomes a source of litigation for a judge. 3. About a decree as to restoring possession, or as to keeping possession, of whatever is among such matters. 4. About property tioned as enemies of Zaratûst, both before and after his birth. Some are named, such as Dûrâsrôb, Brâdrôk-rêsh, Vaêdvôist, and Gêshmak. The Karap of the district where the mother of Zaratûst was born banishes her for witchcraft, and must, therefore, have been the official head of the district. Dûrâsrôb, the Karap, travels sometimes with a disciple (hâvist), so his title was probably a priestly one. The Karap is also often mentioned with the Kaî, or Kîk (Av. kavan or kavi), the title of an equally obnoxious class; both Kîks and Karaps being termed 'demon-worshippers,' or idolators; and the Pahlavi translators of the Avesta speak of them, metaphorically, as 'blind and deaf' to the sacred beings.

which is, or is brought, out of the possession of a defendant, and property which is extorted from a man by worrying, or by a noticeable crime upon him; with a statement about it.

5. About the earnings (vindisnǝ) of fellow-combatants and fellow-subordinates, with a statement about them. 6. About the coming of land, property, or anything, held by foreigners, into the princely possession of one from Irân.

7. About the guardianship of a family (dûḍakǝ); likewise the varieties of it, and the fitness of a man for it. 8. About one's own family, and whatever is on the same subject. 9. About the income (vin-disnǝ) of wife and child.

10. About the trouble of the business of obtaining (vindisnǝ) a wife, and also her marriage, owing to the urgency of the husband, after the trouble. 11. About her guardian and paramour, and whatever is on the same subject. 12. About the proportion who have to keep a wife to seek for offspring, and the proportion who have to satisfy menstrual excitement.

13. About adoption; likewise the varieties of it, and fitness for it; the violation of adoption, the sin of the son who is accepted, and whatever is on the same subject. 14. About the partnership of brothers that has existed, is formed, or is designed; its abandonment (a-bûkhtikîh), the surplus property, the wealth that becomes quite sacrificed (zaḍakǝ), and whatever is on the same subject. 15. About property that comes to next of kin through relationship, and that through adoption. 16. About the residue that lapses into ways of righteousness.

17. About where and in whom, after the father, is the prerogative as to a daughter being given away to a husband.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

Hūspāram Nask.

1. One section of the seven¹ at the end contains particulars about the daily food of a grown-up man, a pregnant woman, her who is childless, and a child, as provided by law ; also that of a shepherd's dog, a village dog, and a blood-hound ; and the characteristics of these three kinds of dog.

2. About the sign of a person's conversion to the religion. 3. About association of several kinds, and one of them is that of the keepers (paḍân) with the flocks (raṁân), and the flocks in connection with the keepers ; and of what kind is the meritoriousness of the keepers of those flocks, as to guardianship of every description ; the happy effects of the flock, and those of the keeper, of every description ; the advantage from this association, and whatever is on the same subject. 4. One is the association of priestly instructor (raḍḍ) and pupil², and their meritoriousness together ; the fame of the priestly instructor for priestly instruction, and that of the disciple (hâvistô) for every kind of learning derived from the priestly instructor, and every kind that the priestly instructor imparts to the pupil ; and the happy effects of the priestly instructor, of every kind, in similar matters. 5. One is the association of ceremonial priests (rad-pîsakânö), the worthiness of a man for the sacerdotal leadership, supplies for the whole of the ceremonial priests, and whatever is on the same subject. 6. About the highest of all associations¹, and about the lawful and virtuous existence of this same association, when there are two men in a case where he who is opulent is always necessary for him who is in innocence, and has given him the wealth that he asks for ; or where, when the one shall commit sin, wealth is an affliction to the other ; or the ownership, as to that which the one obtains, is as much even that of the other ; or, on the passing away of the one, it is mingled with the wealth of the other ; and whatever is on the same subject.

7. About the punishment of the sin of him for whom one lies² to him by whom provision is made, by thought or by word, and given to him who is worthy. 8. About a father's making a child aware of the sin at the time of the sin. 9. About the sin of taking the course of a false guide and exalting falsehood, and whatever is on the same subject. 10. The sin of extorting supplies for a beast of burden from a lonely labouring person.

11. About important gifts to the worthy, atonement for deprival of food (atapdâdö-vigârisnîh)³, and disbursements (aûrûzdân) of that which is legally, and also of that which is derived from what is legally, property among impoverished (nyûrûzd) supplicants. 12. The depriver of food is he who is for early atonement, and they who severally exist, through grazing¹ and bringing forth, are they who severally are also in loss of vitality, through deprival of the food of strength and intellect; even a powerful man is prostrated thereby; the food which is suitable as atonement for deprival of food, and that which is not suitable.

13. About that through which the indispensable creation of a debt arises, and whatever is on the same subject. 14. Where it is the healing of the sick, the spiritual debt is unto the archangel Ashavahist², and that which is worldly unto the physician's anteroom (dālânakō).

15. About the worthiness of a good physician for every benefit, and the unworthiness of a bad physician for any benefit. 16. About each one of the plants being produced by Aûharmazd for the subjugation of one disease at least. 17. About the protectiveness and preciousness of the profession of medicine; the advantage and reasoning thought of a physician due to the carrying on of his medical practice; the pleasant food, the handsome clothing, and the swift steed for a physician; and his wealth being as much as that of an average man in a house, village, community, or province. 18. About the diligently

19. About the sin of a physician through handling (sûdakîh) and having spread a disease by walking up to the sick, because that is when he would have been innocent through not having gone. 20. About a great pestilence (sêgô), and that which is trivial.

21. About the fee¹ of a physician for curing a sick person of disease of the whole body, and of each one of the members; even of him who has cured chieftains, both those of the lower grades and him who is the supreme king of kings, and so also various destitute people. 22. About the mode and extent of delivering up fees to a physician, after the declaration of the sick person being well; that is, from whom comes the physician's fee which is announced for the cure, and also that which is not announced; from whom that only which is announced for it, from whom a meal (pishôn-1), and from whom nothing whatever of worldly reward comes.

23. About the physician whom one hears² and asks for medical treatment. 24. About a test as to the competency of a physician; that is, how it is to be made, how it is when it is possible to test it, and how it is when it is not possible to test it. 25.

About the sin of a physician who is not tested, and also of him whom it is not possible to test, when he shall undertake the medical treatment of others, and, as regards a limb of any one, there is not anything which is another's test of him, nor even that which is not another's test of him, nor that which is a trial of him.

26. About how long is the duration of having sought a physician in Irân whereafter it is allowable, through not obtaining one, to seek him even from foreigners. 27. The sin of having sought one from foreigners, when one can obtain a physician in Irân. 28. About the fee for a foreign physician, and much else on the same subject. 29. The medical treatment of mankind, and also about the medical treatment of beasts of burden and cattle.

30. About the sin owing to intrusting him who is unfit for a duty. 31. About the greater suitability of a priest than of a disciple for duty and position; a trusty person is also obtaining the important rather than obtaining a desire for the important, and even so far as being a potter rather than an astrologer, and being careful rather than a potter; and the reason of it.

32. About preparing an unauthorised (a-dastôbar) dwelling in the locality of other persons, and whatever is on the same subject. 33. About boundaries where there is a place of residence for people, and whatever is on the same subject. 34. About what description of testimony of one of the good religion is received as evidence regarding an infidel, and of an infidel as regards one of the good religion.

35. About the greatness of eminence of the abode of priestly authorities (radânô), both for procedure and for petitions¹; the openness of the doors of a priestly authority; the want of eminence of any one through every kind of offence to others, which is owing to his closed doors and evil eminence in every mode; and whatever is on the same subject. 36. About the extent of splendour (lîyânö) and pomp-diffusing (vafsh-afgânö) tokens from the abode of fires, and the arrangement as regards him who casts the allotted twigs and charcoal (khâr akhgar) into them. 37. About conveying prosperity (padîkh ûîh)² to the abode of fires appropriately to the capability of every one.

38. About the quality (sâmân) of water oozing out (aîrîdö) and that which is flowing in a channel (nâêv-tâk). 39. About the characteristics of specified works which are contiguous in a place between two frontiers (mar'zö).

40. About a decision as to a sheep free from unlawful influence—and so also as to one under unlawful influence—which goes to the pasture of others with thievish intention, neglecting its own; and as to that which does so not with thievish intention. 41. About the quantity which one has to provide, in the duration of a day and night, on admitting to pasture and corn, in the case of an ox without defect (anâ-gânö), or of another kind, or a horse, or a sheep, or a goat, or a pig, or an animal of any other kind.

42. About the distance of a residence of mankind from a river flowing in a channel. 43. About the period for letting a sheep graze at pleasure in a pasture, and that for restraining it; the time for not cutting trees, and that for little slaughter of sheep.

 44. About an article of clothing which is associated with defence, for fear of enemies, and becomes quite a good omen (sukûn) among mankind, being imperceptible and appropriate. 45. About a tree with stem uprooted, where and how it is allowable.

46. About a leader's causing a march of whatever kind, the people being in motion through fear, and they drive the sheep which are with the army on account of molestation; also making the sheep decide as to the pasture near to the road within reach, the pasturing of the first of the species of sheep, and letting them forth to pasture in succession unto the last, and the reason of it.

47. About a person who is of note¹ on account of wealth, and whatever is on the same subject.

48. About this intermixture of with-the-stream and against-the-stream, with banks and without banks, and waters running and down-pouring (nīyâpân), on the road; that is, which of the waters, running or down-pouring, is to be earlier revered by him who is returning from the road, and the reason of it.

49. About the subordination of the disciple unto the priest, as to eating, drinking, and plenty, goodness and preciousness; and whatever is on the same subject.

50. About that which occurs when foreigners come to the frontier of Irân, and shall do damage to Irân; and the frontier governors and fellow-champions have to repel the foreigners by fighting, to save the Irânian people and property which were to be made foreign; and whatever is on the same subject.

51. About the advantage of punishing a violent thief by the members of the assembly, that owing to reliance upon the actions and convictions of the ancients, that owing to forming many priestly assemblies, that owing to providing a disciple for a priest, that through passing away after being high-priest, that through doing so without being high-priest, and that of much information on similar statements prior to any other resources.

52. Perfect is the excellence of righteousness.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

1. One section of the first thirty of the Sakâdûm¹ contains particulars about reward by command of the religion, the bridge judgment of the destroyers of the well-commanding, and the provision for their destruction. 2. About the importance of a man, after fifteen years of age and when he has heard that there is a law² which is good, having sought that law² by having enquired about it. 3. About a man's scrutinizing an action before doing it, when he does not know whether it be a sin or a good work, and when it is possible for him to set it aside and not to do it.

¹ Corresponding to the eighteenth word, yim, in the Ahunavair, according to B. P. Riv.; but it is the nineteenth Nask in other Rivâyats. This name, which is here written like Zakî-hat-min, should probably be Zîk-ait-tûm, meaning 'the most intimate concerns,' as the Nask refers chiefly to personal and family law; but it is called Askâram, or Sakadâm, in the Rivâyats, which also state that it contained fifty-two kardah, fargard's, or vēcast; thus agreeing with the total of the sections mentioned in Chaps. XXXVIII, XLI.

² It is possible to read yêdatô, 'sacred being,' instead of dâdô, 'law.'

4. About advice as to having entered into a house in the night by the light of a fire, or when one has noticed it in this place, though he goes elsewhere; also the watchful destruction of an injured person, or animal, or garment, and the retribution for the injury. 5. About the extent of any glitter of the sparks (zakhsh-1-î parkân), and the width and height of the doors of the constructed work of that appointed place of the fire.

6. About a new-born child, as to how one has to provide its place, connected lawfully with illumination¹, more particularly for the first three nights. 7. About bringing a fire to drive away the overpowering fiend, and making the child taste first the Hô-m-juice, so far as collected within its precincts (varân), and, secondly, the butter of Maidôk-zarem² which is to be brought forward for it; also the watchfulness of the father and mother over the child, and the extent of their retiring (navistanô) from the two sides of the new-born. 8. About lawfully-made places of several kinds for the child, the limits and manner of the mother's giving milk to the child, and whatever is on the same subject.

9. About carrying forth holy-water, or even a cooking-pot, to a fire, where the hands are purified and thoroughly washed; and the sin owing to an un-purified hand, not thoroughly washed, carrying them forth. 10. About the preservation of the cooking-pot, and the rest of one's operations with the fire, from defilement; but when, through want of care, defilement occurs, by the inexperience of any one bringing it to the fire, he who is careless is thereby contaminated, and the cooking-pot is properly placed in its position.

11. Arranging about properly-made bed-places (gâsvârakö) in a house, those for children and those for adults; also a decision about a case when a carpenter (dûrgar) shall make a bed-place properly which one's own judgment considers improperly made, and when both consider it improperly, or when both consider it properly made; and more of whatever is on the same subject.

12. About what is the mode of producing seeing properly; and, when not seeing properly, the oculist (dîḍpân) to intrust with it is he who informs people, who wish for it, how to extract the defect of sight; if not, the people go on and hurt; also the penalty for hurting, and whatever is on the same subject.

13. About the insubordination of those accustomed to work (kâr-khûgarân) to women and children; also that of a grown-up man who has been giving no food¹ three times in succession; he, too, it is who advanced the fourth *time*², because, owing to giving no food a fourth time, the man is he who has to accomplish work unrestrictedly; and whatever is on the same subject.

² This passage appears to refer to that quoted in Farh. Ôîm, p. 38, ll. 8, 9; though the latter part of Chap. XLI, 19 is more applicable to ll. 4-8 of the same page.

14. About the care of a pointed thing, that is, how it is to be carried to a dwelling in the world, how it is to be deposited, and the sin owing to keeping and depositing it otherwise. 15. And about every garment¹ and utensil, even including such as a scum-pot, an hour-glass, and a dining-tray; that is, how they are to be deposited in the dwelling, and the sin owing to variously² placing and taking care of them. 16. About a door which is properly made; how it is when it falls down, and a wound arises from it, the carpenter being innocent regarding it; and how it is when he is guilty.

17. About washing the head, the care of the water and the religious ritual therein, and whatever is on the same subject. 18. About the period for arranging the hair, in which they shave the hair. 19. About the shaving of a child the first time, and the ritual which is taught for it; the performance of shaving by an instructed barber and with a sharp razor, which is the appointed practice as regards the razor of adults, and that also for children with the children's razor, because it is settled healthfulness; his whetstone (sôn), and also the care of the razor. 20. About the number of the positions of a man, in which a barber can perform shaving, and that of the positions of the barber; and whatever is on the same subject.

21. About each one of those who are custodians (kîrûk-kârânö), and the rules of the market; also their abstaining from wounding each other with a pike (têkh), or other implement, with which they shall perform their duty; likewise the sin owing to heedlessness. 22. About giving forth a pointed thing lawfully, and a wound owing to not giving it forth lawfully; lawfully taking and giving away a plate of broken victuals (paḍkhûr), and a wound owing to doing it unlawfully; and whatever is on the same subject. 23. About the appointed place (dâḍ-gâh) of a horse-course and its distance from the middle of a town, the nature of the horse-course, the training (farhâng) and masters of manœuvres (paḍân-î farhângânô) when in it, the shooting of arrows on the horse-course, and the wound which occurs to man or animal, how it is when culpable, and how it is when not culpable. 24. About admitting a listener; where, why, and how he is to be admitted; and the guilt or innocence as regards a wound owing to him.

25. About the mode of making a *sacred thread-girdle*¹, and the harm from an unusual formation of it. 26. About lawfully tying it, without the culpability (vazagîh) of unauthorised action; also when they do not tie it lawfully, but the girdling is knotted (viragî-aîtô) and twisted owing to culpability (vazagânîh); and whatever is on the same subject.

27. About lawfully scratching with the nails, and the harm from unlawfully scratching. 28. About lawfully attending to a fire on the road; and, when one arrives at a ford through water, the sin which arises, as to fire, from not lawfully caring about the fire.

29. About warriors who mingle together in panic (mazangîh) and darkness; injury happens to one

CHAPTER XXXIX.

Sakâdâm Nask.

1. One section is the Hakîdakânistân ('code of sequestrations'), particulars about a statement of seized property, the retention thereof, and how was the confinement of that which was animate; how it is when one keeps it in a shepherd's-dog's care, and how it is when in the sequestrator's care (hakîdak-ô-dârîh). 2. And when it is a seized horse of the warriors, how to keep it when it is not possible to retain it in confinement of any kind, and the damage which has arisen therefrom; what is the danger to occasion by it, how it is when the shelter (srâyisnô)¹ is on all sides, and how it is when on one side; while the trust, when there is shelter, is in the extent of the shelter, how much and of what kind is the shelter. 3. When it is a seized beast of burden, after its coming into the possession of the sequestrator (hakîdak-dâr), for how long he has to order work for the reasoning thought of the herdsman, and how is that of the sequestrator, in like manner, before he quite attains to his share; even through his own reasoning thought the work is authorisedly ordered, and how and in what manner is the ordering of his work. 4. And when the seized animal has offspring, in what mode he has to milk it, as well as the nourishment of the young, and whatever is on the same subject; also the sin owing to doing it unlawfully. 5. About the sequestrator when the beast of burden seized comes into his possession, how it is when its special reputation is altered, and how it is when it comes with utility and advantage for him. 6. About the seizer's keeping a sheep, which is seized, in his flock; that is, how the custom is produced, owing to its milk being for the sacred feast, and the notification of the feasts is owing to the seized¹ sheep; when, too, it is not possible to keep it in the flock, what is the mode of confining it; and when it is not possible to keep it in confinement, what he has to do with it. 7. About the wool of a sheep which is seized; that is, how it is when the shearing is even before the various times specified, and the sin of shearing when it is before the time specified, or one shears when there is no reason for shearing. 8. About the lambing (gurûsidô) of the sheep seized, and the sin owing to its not lambing.

9. About sheltering (srudanô)² the seized animal in the most public place in a house, village, community, or province. 10. About the sin of the shepherd when, without saving it for the sequestrator, and through the guilelessness of the sequestrator, he shall carry away a female; and the sin which is owing to the offence as regards unlawfully beating and wounding it, before it is seized for the buyers of meat (khûr-kharânô), and other offences regarding it. 11. About the time appointed, between the shepherd and the sequestrator, for leading and bringing the female, belonging to the sequestrator, to the place for which the time is appointed; in the case when the shepherd arrives and the sequestrator does not, how that which belongs to the sequestrator is to come into the possession of the sequestrator, and when; when it is the sheep or beast of burden of a sequestrator¹, how it is to come into the possession of that sequestrator; when the sheep or beast of burden which is seized dies in the possession of the sequestrator, how and how long he has to shelter (srûdan) the young ones (gurûs) and wool of the same several sheep; and the sin when he does not shelter them, or does it otherwise.

12. About a sheep² which is mingled among the flock of any one that is in sequestration, how it is when the shepherd, and how it is when the shepherd's dog, is its own; and when it is mingled among any flock owing to sequestration, how it is when the shepherd, and how it is when the shepherd's dog, [who is its own]³ goes to another flock; how it is when the first flock-owner, and how it is when the second, is its own. 13. About the killing of a seized sheep by a shepherd's dog for necessary provisions; that is, how it is allowable, and in what mode it is to be done.

14. About him unto whom the sheep or beast of burden which is seized is delivered when it comes into a district; and the sequestrator's informing the governor of the district, in whose herd the sheep or beast of burden which is seized remains, as to the species, colour, and form of it⁴. 15. Watching over a man with sheep, who is in a disabled state of illness owing to a wound received in his duty as regards slaughtering; the case when he is concealed from a passer-by (amat nîhân min vidâr) and there is protection, when he is an eater and there is no protection, when he is not eating and there is protection, and when he is not eating and there is no protection.

16. About the distraction¹ of a sequestrator as regards a sheep or beast of burden which is seized, when it is one out of four varieties², and when one out of three; when he nourishes it for half a year, and when for the duration of a year; when that which he obtains is a young one, and when that which he obtains is large, where and what is a shelter for it, and, as to the care of it, how it is when in a grain vault (kîgârakö-1), and when it is under a tree; how it is when in a damaged cellar (varkhö-1-î kûstakö), and how it is when in a cage (pangar-1) which is not incomplete, but is broken, or is not incomplete and is sound, or is complete and sound.

17. About treasure which they find in the surroundings of a dwelling, and that which they find within the limits of the dwelling of any one. 18. About buried treasure when it is found by the side of a

² If it were allowable to omit this word, âyûfnakö, 'variety,' and to substitute 'gain' for 'distraction,' the sentence would stand as follows:—'About the gain of a sequestrator as regards a sheep or beast of burden which is seized, when he nourishes it for one-fourth, when for one-third, when for half a year, and when for the duration of a whole year.' This seems more intelligible than the text as it stands in the MS.

When it is found within the road, and the ground is hard, how it is when it is two finger-breadths below, and how it is when it is three finger-breadths; and when the ground is soft, how it is when it is three finger-breadths below, and how it is when it is four finger-breadths. 20. When it is in an ascent or descent, there where one turns out from the road, and the ground is hard, how it is when it is below up to the instep¹, and how it is when it is up to the middle of the leg (patîstân)²; and if soft, how it is when it is below up to the middle of the leg, and how it is when it is up to the knee. 21. When it is in a stream of water, and the ground is hard, how it is when it is below up to the knee, and how it is when it is up to mid-thigh; and when the ground is soft, how it is when it is below up to mid-thigh, and how it is when it is up to the testicles. 22. When it is in a ford through the water, and the ground is hard, how it is when it is below up to the testicles, and how it is when it is up to the navel; and when the ground is soft, how it is when it is below up to the navel, and how it is when it is up to the mouth. 23. And when it is in a kitchen (âs-khânö), the middle of a garden (van), or a sheep-fold (pâh-hastö); that is, how it is when it is not a permanent residence (afraz-mânîsnö) of any- body, and how it is when it is a permanent residence¹.

24. About him who nourishes a sheep which is seized; that is, how it is when it is out of his store, and how it is when he nourishes it as it arrives.

25. About a dispute as regards a sheep that is seized, when one person says it was born of the colour of the mother, and another one says it was of her form², both being true; or one person mentions a single characteristic truly, and another one mentions many characteristics of it untruly; the cases when they mention its peculiarities otherwise, and in what manner; and whatever is on the same subject.

26. About a sheep³ seized, which has to pass on through the loftiest places in which there is lawfully shelter; and how there are three years, three existences (ahvôn), three places, nine occasions, and also many other regulations on the same subject.

1. One section is the Zîyânakistân ('code of the injured'), about anything which is animate—and that which is inanimate—injured through lawfully living, giving, receiving, or delivering back; the duty of protection and care for both kinds; the nourishment, extension, sustentation, stimulation, establishment, consolation, and also gratification of an animate being; and the retribution for sin due to unlawfulness as regards the same matters.

2. About an example of a damaged gift, in the case when one gives the thing to a poor (gadâk) person at an appointed time, and when at one unappointed; and in the case when one gives him an increase, where and what is the increase. 3. A decision about a shepherd when they shall bring him back *an animal*¹, when damaged, before its subdivision; what he obtains for the damaged animal when not delivered back at the time of subdivision; when the duty about it is dictated by a religious man, and when he keeps it in his own possession.

4. About property which is inanimate, whose subdivisions, each separately, when one keeps them in use², and when in reserve (armêstô), are greater and less in value; that is, through so much effecting of penance (avâkangisnô) worthily, or through so much bringing of interest; and the capital is the same in value, the increase being the growth of dividends.

5. About the reason why the sin of an injured person becomes innocent through not delivering back a damaged *article*³; and many opinions, on the same subject, are provided for our benefit.

CHAPTER XLI.

Sakâdûm Nash.

1. One section of the last twenty-two is the Vakhshistân ('increase code'), particulars about the progress of increase. 2. About atonement, surrender, and compensation for anything, through dispelling it by compensating, atoning, and surrendering to him whose own it is; the period thereof not being appointed. 3. When he, whose origination of compensation, atonement, and surrender is his own, has appointed the period thereof, the growing of the sin actively, after the appointed time, is increase.

4. About increase¹ which is active (karđakō), and that which is existent (zîstakō); how it is when the existent becomes quite active, and how it is when both are suppressed (armêstî-aît). 5. About the extraction of increase upon increases which they may occasion up to an equality; where and which it is. 6. About a righteous gift; that is, how it is when overwhelmed by impoverishment, and how it is when its increase still proceeds.

7. About the progress of interest (vakhsh) upon effective wealth, when there is interest for it, and the interest thereon accumulates; also that which does not progress; how it is when the debtor (âvâm-hômônd), even on bringing back the wealth, is opulent, and the lender (âvâm nafsman) is opulent on asking for it; how it is when each is not opulent, and the debtor was not opulent on asking for it; and how it is when the lender (âvâm khvêš) is opulent on asking for it, and the debtor is not opulent through the wealth.

8. About where and when the life (zîstanö) of the lender has once passed away, how it is when the loan is to be issued anew at the end of the issue (zihîsnö), and how it is when it has existed in force, through the one issue by the deceased, and the interest accrues. 9. When the debtor passes away, how it is when he puts the interest into the property of any one through adoption, and how it is when it is the interest of the possessor of the wealth in both worlds.

10. About the peculiarity of retribution, the self-retribution of one liable to retribution for others, and the limit of one's own retribution. 11. About the penalty (tâvân) of him who, purchasing animals for impregnation, gives each a bad male; when they are not pregnant, and when they may produce; and whatever is on the same subject. 12. About the time of allowing the admission of the male to the beast of burden, sheep, and camel, and the time of consignment to each separate male for whom reception remains; the case when it is the time for admission of the male (gûsn-hilîh), and the case when it is such a consignment as when the period, which is really originating with the admission of the male, has continued. 13. When, on account of no consignment to the male at the proper time, the female goes on unimpregnated, and there is no pregnancy of the cow, mare, camel, sheep, goat, or pig, each separately, how much the penalty is; also the sin they commit.

14. About the camel, mare, cow, or sheep, unto whom there is damaged milk, void of butter (akarag), owing to the appointed time one postpones; also the average and least milk of the mare, cow, goat, and sheep, that is, the measure of their one milking, each separately. 15. About the camel, that is, how much is its production of hair in a year, and the extent that the camel is surpassing therein among cattle; of them is also the ass that they allow to be seized upon for as much value as that of the oxen, and the mode of beating them up. 16. Where and how it is when the females of the camel and horse are a multiplying (afzûnō) tending to dissatisfaction; the increase even of increases of the ox, sheep, and goat progresses, and of them how much less is the multiplying of the female—which is an increase of increases tending to dissatisfaction, where it is extending over them—to be produced than that of the male.

17. The camel which is injured on the road, beyond the end of the appointed time, when they keep it at work unlawfully and the road is bad, when at work unlawfully and the road is good, and when comfortable at pasture, where seizing upon it becomes tending to dissatisfaction in several ways, and they are severally buying it when really invigorated¹, or at a price.

18. For how much increase of increases he stands up who is buying also an invigorated dog, or pig, at a price; and when it is that the increase and increase of increases remain undeveloped in them, as it does whenever property, on which the interest of the residue and income accumulates, is still for the children of the well-destined.

¹ Pâz. aôsanghen, both here and in § 18, no doubt for Av. aoganghem, as in Chap. XX, 58, the Av. a g and a s being much alike.

19. About him whose supplies some one is silently (agôpö) buying up, and the seller and important holder is quite bereaved, so that the bereaver has plenty for one deprived of food on a summer's day, and plenty for him who is so also on a winter's day (dim-ikik); also the supplying of mankind and fire lawfully, in the beginning, for a summer's day and night, and that for a winter's one¹. 20. About clothing when it is that which one strips off for donation. 21. About the penalty for a first deprivation of food, and the sin of it; also the penalty of the second and third, up to the tenth.

22. About a plaint and defence as regards a debt and its interest, and the decision thereon; also how it is when, for keeping up the repayment, debts upon debts are cancelled so far as the continuance of interest; and whatever is on the same subject. 23. About the uselessness of supplies which are not authorised by the religion. 24. About buying a slaughtered² sheep when the seller is bereaved by the delivery; also to how many sheep, in the two previous years, the increase and increase of increases thereof had specially to attain. 25. About where and what is that which would not conduce to increase, and what is that which would. 26. About the special sin and offence, the use of the milk, heart³, and wool, the spreading about which tends to dissatisfaction, the increase of increases, and the good

27. About how the debtor has to announce the nature of the loan, which the lender, through irritation, does not approve; and, when the debtor has provided for a triple issue, when for a double issue, and even when he has for a single issue, the first year is free from begging his own time. 28. About the debtor and what ¹ he repays, when each year is announced and he does not assent; and how it happens, as regards the debtor, through many repayments, and all the postponements of the lender ².

29. About causing the confiscation (pâḍīrāṅgarīh) of a human being (gērpih)³, and its cessation ⁴ owing to worldly work, where it is for one month, or, thence onwards, for a second, a third, a sixth, a ninth, or a year at worldly work, and where it is regarding several human beings; the production of gain which accrues upon that single human being; and whatever is on the same subject. 30. About the confiscation of a cloak (gudād) in the winter, and of a skin-bag for holding water (maskō-ī āv dānō) in the summer; about whom they are appertaining to, on the passing by of the first ten nights, where it is after the bringing out of the cloak at the beginning of winter, and of the water-skin at the beginning of summer; or prior to the length of a month previous, severally, to the end of the winter as regards the cloak, and to the end of the summer as regards the water-skin; that is, for how much gain upon that one cloak, or water-skin, is the retribution of the confiscator to whom it is appertaining¹; and whatever is on the same subject.

31. About the increase of grains, and that of sheep with the progeny, milk, and wool that they may severally produce. 32. About the confiscation of clothes and implements by delivering them back to him who specially reckons many as his own²; that is, how the produce (vakhsh) increases when he orders their use imperfectly, how it does when he does so not imperfectly, and how it does when he keeps them in inactivity. 33. About the produce of land on which grain is cast, and of that on which it is not cast (va-zak-î an-madam ramîtuntô)³, when by delivery thereof it is self-exhausted. 34. And so also the produce of ornaments of gold and silver, and of red-coloured things, with many regulations on the same subject and what is connected therewith.

¹ This seems the more probable meaning if we are to understand that the confiscation has been actually carried out at an improper season; but, if we suppose that it is avoided on account of the season, it would be better to translate as follows:—‘For how much gain upon that one cloak, or water-skin, is the confiscator, to whom it is appertaining, to be compensated.’

CHAPTER XLII.

Sakāddām Nask.

1. One section, the Varistân ('ordeal code'), contains particulars of that which, when it becomes manifest in any one, is indicative as to witchcraft; the bringing of remedies for the person who is rendered sickly by a wizard; the execution of the wizard, what the religious rite is in the legal proceedings, and the case when there is a religious rite in the legal proceedings. 2. About the case when, for want of legal proceedings, he is executed without the religious rite; and what it is when¹ he dies through his own destruction of some one.

3. About the accomplishment of an ordeal by which, through the power of the spirit, there arises a manifestation of acquittal or incrimination of those maintaining inconsistencies as to witchcraft, destroying a righteous man, or other concealed instigations of sin²; the time of its performance, and the place of hurtfulness of its continuance. 4. About the place of accomplishment; in what manner is the selection (fragârdanō), limitation, and preparation of the abode in which the ordeal is performed; that which is to be carried forth to that abode, and that of which the carrying thereto is to be avoided; who is to be admitted to that abode, and who is not to be admitted; and that which, when it occurs there, is a disturbance of the work, they separate (vangend) therefrom.

5. About those belonging to the place of ordeal (varistânîkân) and other officials there, the rites and customs therein, the ceremonial to be celebrated in the abode, and the invocation of the sacred beings for assistance. 6. What is the mode of performing the hot and cold ordeal; how is the leading forth of the accomplisshers thereto, and of what Avesta is their uplifted recitation; how is the accomplishment of the hot and cold ordeal, and the manifestation of the acquitted and incriminated thereby; and many statements (gôkân) on the same subject.

CHAPTER XLIII.

Sakâdûm Nask.

1. One section is miscellaneous: about having sought an assistant who is brought, that is, in what mode it is proper; and the payment of an assistant who is a member of the community (dâhm)¹, and also that of a foreigner (an-Aîr), in the same affair. 2. About how the coming of a man to confinement and fettering is through his own wealth, and whatever is on the same subject. 3. About confession through one, two, and three statements; and whatever is about it. 4. About the contempt of a disciple for a priestly master, which is an annoyance to him; the property belonging to the master, and the squandering that occurs in it.

5. The sin that is its own penalty through being liable to penalty, and the transgressor whose penalty is owing thereto; when they would unlawfully bring a penalty upon one liable to penalty, or one thereby inflicts a penalty upon him, of which one is aware that he is not capable (patûkō); and the time which one liable to penalty has for the payment of that penalty of his is until his attaining to opulence, when, after the appointment about the penalty, he becomes capable of an atonement. 6. About the accumulation (gangîh) of sin through the expedients of the wrathful (garmakân), which are connected with much destruction of the righteous. 7. About the sin owing to which, among those that are wrathful, he who has drunk from a well on a road, or path, conceals the water for the sake of concealment.

8. About the sin of a judge who pronounces the sinner to be in innocence, and the innocent to be in some sinfulness. 9. About a judge acquainted with the law¹ for ten years, him who is for eleven, him who is for twelve, him who is for thirteen, him who is for fourteen, and him who is for fifteen; that is, their decisions, each separately, on several specially prominent objects of acquaintance with the law, as regards decision and judgment.

10. About a daughter whose religious control, during the life of her father, resides in her mother for the joint life of the mother, but for ² the authorised giving her away there is the father. 11. About a daughter who is unprovided with a husband, and who has no father and no mother, nor yet any of the brothers of the departed parents, and it is not even allowable to give herself away into guardianship by a husband.

² Reading râî instead of lâ, 'not.'

12. About property which is bequeathed by will on passing away; that is, how it is when given, and how it is when it does not exist. 13. About the privilege of a father in giving property to his children according to his wish, and a son who is irreverent towards his father, so that ¹ some of the property of the father goes to the worthy mother; also when they would make irreverence towards the father the imputed characteristic (bâkht nîsânö), where a decree about the property of the father is decided upon; and whatever is on the same subject, as regards the extent of irreverence of the son towards the father, and the sin of it.

14. About the sin of a son ² who is accepted, when he recoils from that acceptance; the acceptor of a living, or even a departed, father is so because it is the will of the people, and also for the worldly fame of a soul of the departed; and the ceremonial and obeisance are, moreover, for those of them within their own dwelling, owing to letting forth their generosity, and they shall provide them.

15. About the production and arising of even that property which a liberal person has not seen, if there be any one who ³ has not lived liberally.

³ Supposing that mîn stands for mîn.

16. About the production and arising of something of the property of a damsel, even when she gives it by design only to him who is worthy.

17. About a damsel whom an idolator (dêviyast) carries off from her own master, and would give to a Mazda-worshipper; that is, how it is justifiable for the Mazda-worshipper, having had that damsel in his possession, to seek a son by her, so long as the guardianship of the woman is with that man. 18. About a mother being guardian over a living father, owing to their having a son. 19. About the proper completion of a provision—that was for the decision of the supreme judge, on various statements, and was never otherwise—which is the provision of him who is a high-priest of the religion.

20. About the sin of a father through not satisfying the menstrual excitement of a daughter who has attained the capability of having a son (berman radîh); what it is when, through not satisfying the menstrual excitement of the daughter, he is sinful; and how it is when the daughter herself is sinful; also the symptoms of attaining the capability of having a son.

21. About where and which is that sin on the committal of which inadvertently one attains to deliverance thus, when it comes to his knowledge it is through a determined renunciation it goes away from its source; also which is that committal inadvertently which does not occur through him who is intelligent. 22. About the four more heinous forms of demon-service (sêdâ-yazakîh), and the three worst sins wherein they shall perform them; the ten existences that are furtherances, and the nine that are destroyers, of the world.

23. About a true statement through which, when one utters it, he is wicked and worthy of death. 24. About driving the bestowable benefit of the spiritual existence away from the world, when he who is destroying a righteous man walks openly in the world; how one section of the spirit's earth is that of a people¹ destroying the righteous man, and the complaint of the spirits of fire, water, and plants, owing thereto; also how the bestowal of the allotment of a leading man is upon his inferiors. 25. About the three kinds of righteous men; one that is greater than water and earth, animals and plants, one that is equal to them, and one that is less; and what is the arrangement of—as it were—the conjoined formation of those who are somewhat outside of the three kinds.

26. About the grievous bridge-judgment for carrying forth dead matter to water, or to fire, with which there is evidence; and the heaviness of the spirit due to dead matter in the water. 27. The good work of him who brings the dead matter² of man or dog,

¹ Some neighbouring nation of unbelievers is probably meant, such as the Byzantines; as we must always recollect that the compiler is summarizing the contents of the Pahlavi commentary written in Sasanian times (see Chap. I, 3).

² See Chap. XXVII, 4. It appears from this section that the dead matter of an evil creature, such as a snake or frog, was considered to pollute the water as much as that of a good creature. § 28, however, admits the expediency of killing noxious creatures in the water when it is impossible to take them out beforehand; and this is in accordance with Vend. V, 35-38 (W.) which teaches that an apostate defiles no one when dead (any more than a dried-up frog that has been dead a year), because he defiles while living. This rule was evidently intended to remove all scruples as to killing such creatures, but it applies to them only when recently killed; hence the necessity of removing them, from any place liable to or that of the serpent or frog, out of the water. 28. About the destruction of the serpent and frog, and other aquatic noxious creatures, in the water when it is only thus possible, and carrying them out from it when it is possible. 29. About the gratification of the spirit of the world, and the vexation of the demons, owing to the destruction of them.

30. Where and what are the tokens of the good¹ management and well-operating drinking-party (tôstih) of a neighbour not of the same district (ahamshatrô nazd). 31. About the sin of him who, after joining a drinking-party from sunset (hû-frâshmôkdâdö), pulverizes the road (râh tekhnunêdö), keeps the door opened, and would unlawfully make an uproar.

32. About Aûharmazd having produced the bodies and members of animals—through having created the body of the sole-created ox with satisfaction, as assistance for mankind—because they are repeated for protection, and also for the ceremonial for sacred beings specially declared. 33. About the reason of making offerings (aûstôfrîdö) to the sacred beings, for the increase of power of the allotters of destiny in the allotment of destiny; the connection of that acknowledgement (padîrisnö) and of the benefit and advantage of the recompense thereof; the proper maintenance of that acknowledgement, through the means and efficacy of the spiritual bridge-judgment of sin, and the fear of worldly disaster and harm from not properly maintaining the perpetual acknowledgement in force pollution, as soon as possible after death, common sense being preferable to logical consistency.

(dên patûkîh), and from the setting up even of ruin thereby; the reasonable control of the offering to each one of the sacred beings therein is for the skilful member of the community (hûnarîk dâhm) of whatever kind, and is not produced by intrusting the consecration to the violent, more particularly to those whom one specially enumerates; the sin and retribution owing to having given it to those who are of that class; and more upon the same subject.

34. About the damage and injury of the world owing to greed (âzö) and its fellow-miscreations, and him who is their supporter and abettor, the idolator (dêviyastö), also the wolf of many kinds and noxious creatures of various species; because the occurrence of their fiendishness is due to the original fiend, and the means for strengthening their fiendishness are derived from the destruction of all mankind and the other primary worldly creations which are aiding mankind. 35. Advice to mankind about smiting and destroying the evil domination (dûs-khshasarîniðanö) of the world by those injurers, and the merit manifest for themselves therein; the object and spiritual reward for smiting and killing each one of the wolves and noxious creatures, and, as regards the same reward, the perfection of that for destroying a two-legged wolf¹; and whatever is on the same subject.

36. About advice as to not reverencing the evil spirit and demons, whereby the observing (var'zö) of the several ceremonies and gratifications of the sacred beings would be more particularly irregular in any manner whatever, and the damage and harm owing to those who are irregular and ill-observant, through being inclined for that irregularity and ill-observance, would become an oppressive presidency (padgahih) of the demons over the creatures; also the vice of clamorous talking (drâyân gôgîh)¹ and the damage owing thereto, and the pleasure of the demons due to the same and other things which are irregular. 37. Advice about the reason, habit, and primitive practice of not chattering, and other good customs, during eating and drinking; the gratification of the sacred beings owing to that primitive practice of good customs by mankind, and the unself-devoting (a-khvês-dâk) is he who is not maintaining it.

38. Through the ceremonial of which sacred being is the greater welcome (mâhmânörtarîh) of a high-priest and of any good work of each one of the five periods of the day and night; the reward and advantage owing to celebrating the ceremony of each of them separately in its own period, and also other means and regulations in the same statement.

39. It is righteousness that is perfect excellence.

CHAPTER XLIV.

I. The Vendîdâd² contains particulars of Aûhar-mazd having produced the pleasure of mankind by ¹ Whereby the devotions are disturbed, or rendered ineffectual.

that place where they specially make a residence, and the advantage from the same production¹. 2. About the formation of sixteen perfect places specially enumerated, and also the adversity which has happened to each separately².

3. About Aûharmazd's disclosing the religion first among mankind to Yim³; its non-acceptance by Yim owing to attachment (asrûnôih) to the religion of the ancients; and the acceptance of other things to develope, extend, and improve the world thereby⁴. 4. About the reason of the needfulness of making the enclosure that Yim made (var-î Yim kard), the command and instruction by Aûharmazd to Yim, the making by Yim just as Aûharmazd commanded and instructed, and whatever is on the same subject⁵.

5. About what the comfort of the spirit of the earth is most owing to, what its discomfort is more particularly owing to, and from what its greatest gratification has arisen⁶.

ments, but it is evident, from the close correspondence between the author's description and the present contents, that this fragmentary state of the text existed in his time; and there is every probability that any mutilation that exists in the text occurred before Sasanian times. The author, however, sometimes omits to mention subjects that are repeated, so it is just possible that some of these repetitions are of later date. He also makes no allusion to the twelfth fargard (see § 51 n).

³ Pahl. tanand va-mâk (=mêg), evidently equivalent to the Av. sînô madhakhayauska of Vend. VII, 26, which are rendered by tûn mêgō-k in the Pahlavi version. The identity of Av. madhakha with Pahl. madag, or mêg, Pers. maîg, mala'h 'a locust,' has long been recognised (see Darmesteter's Études Iranniennes, II, p. 199). But the meaning of Av. sîn = Pâz. tûn has been merely guessed to be 'a mosquito;' the Avesta word having been transcribed as sîn, or sin, in the prose Sad-dar, LXXII, 2, and explained by the Persian gloss pasah, 'a gnat or fly,' by some copyists, while others have read san (for sin) and have substituted its synonym sâl, 'a year,' or have read bîs, 'a poisonous herb,' instead of pasah. With regard to the word 𐭥𐭭𐭮 tanand, 'spider,' in our text, it may be observed that it has descended from a much older copy of the Pahlavi Vendîdâd than any that could have been consulted by the author of the Sad-dar, and it is easy to see how an original Pahl. 𐭥𐭭𐭮 could have been read 𐭥𐭭𐭮 in Pâzand by later copyists of the Vendîdâd.

that the same fargard is omitted in all very old copies of the Vendîdâd with Pahlavi version, in which, although the fargards are numbered, the thirteenth immediately follows the eleventh. The Copenhagen MS. No. 2, in which the twelfth fargard occurs with a Pahlavi version, is said to be a revision of the Vendîdâd text compiled in the last century, and other copies of the Pahlavi twelfth fargard have been derived from this revised text. The omission of this fargard in all the old MSS. cannot be satisfactorily attributed to the loss of some folios in an older copy, because no fargard is likely to fill exactly a certain number of folios; the loss must also have occurred very shortly after the last revision of the Pahlavi text, to account for the author of the Dînkard not finding the Pahlavi of this fargard in the ninth century.

³ Corresponding to the twentieth word, dadađ, in the Ahunavair, according to B. P. Riv.; but it is the twenty-first, and last, Nask in other Rivâyats. Its name occurs in the Avesta, in the form hadha okhta, and it is called Hâdukht in the Rivâyats, which also state that it contained thirty kardah, or fargard's, which differs considerably from the number stated in this chapter. Yts. XXI, XXII are traditionally supposed to belong to the Hâdôkht, but there is hardly a trace of either of them in this chapter. Yt. XI is also distinguished by the same title.

⁴ As the total of the 13 + 102 + 19 sections (mentioned in §§ 1, 11, 13) is 134, instead of 133, there must be an error in one of the four numbers given in the MS. This clerical error can hardly have been made in writing 19, and is unlikely in 102; but 133 may possibly stand for an original 134, though the writing of 13 instead of 12 is more probable. The Rivâyats give no assistance in settling this question, as they all divide this Nask into 30 kardah. On the whole, it will be safest to read 'twelve,' instead of 'thirteen,' until some better authority becomes available.

CHAPTER XLVI.

1. The Gâthas of the Yast¹, as the first offspring of the Ahunavair, are a recitation of the source of sources of the religion, and in the compass (parvastârîh)² of the Gâthas, every word (mârîk)

¹ Corresponding to the twenty-first word, vâstârem, in the Ahunavair, according to B. P. Riv.; but it is the first Nask in other Rivâyats. In Chap. I, 9, 12 it is called Stôd-yast, ‘praise-ritual,’ (Av. staota yêsnya); and Stûd-yast, or Yast, in the Rivâyats, which also state that it contains thirty-three kardah, or jûrat. In Sls. XIII, 1 we are told that Visâi-ve-ameshâ-spenâ (Yas. XIV, 1) is the beginning of the Stôtân-yasnô; and, if we look for its end, we find Yas. LVIII, LIX both ending with special reverence of ‘the whole collection of the Stôtân-yašnân.’ We may therefore conclude that Yas. XIV–LIX, with its supplementary passages in Visp. V–XXIV, contains the whole of the Stôd-yast. But from this we must deduct Yas. XIX–XXI which are the first three fargardâs of the Bakô Nask, Yas. LII which is an interpolation, and Yas. LVI, LVII which are the Srôsh Yasts, lesser and greater; we must also consider the Yasna Haptanghâiti as a single section, in accordance with its treatment in Bk. IX, Chaps. XII, XXXV, LVII; and much of the Vîspêrad may not belong to the primitive text mentioned in § 3. Making these necessary deductions we have exactly thirty-three hâs of the Yasna left for the Stôd-yast, as stated in the Rivâyats.

² This word can also be read fravistârîh (Av. fra+vid), ‘interpretation,’ or frôstârîh, ‘handing down.’

in it is the origin of a word. 2. The word ahû¹ of the beginning² is of a like kind with ahyâ³, the beginning of the Gâthas; the end word, which is vâstârem⁴, is of a like kind with vahyô⁵, the end of the Gâthas; and the whole—which, though its nature is of one kind, is distributed (vakhtô) in what is selected therefrom—is stored up (avar-gûdô) in this compendium⁶ of all parts of the Mazda-worshipping religion.

3. Likewise the purport (avori-hastân)⁷ of its verse (gâh), and the particulars of the primitive Vîspêrad⁸ are to procure homage and praise, oblation and invocation; and the blessing⁹, which is regulated by the sagacity of the creator, is adapted for the spiritual illustration of the lodgment of the ceremonial of the sacred beings therein. 4. ¹ The Ahunavair begins with the words yathâ ahû vairyô. The word ahû, in the MS., is written ahî as usual in Irân.

² Assuming that barâ stands for bûn.

³ The first Gâtha, or sacred hymn, begins with the words ahyâ yâsâ nemanghâ (Yas. XXVIII, 1 a). There is, of course, no connection but that of sound between ahû, 'a spiritual lord,' and ahyâ, 'of this;' nor is there any other between the concluding words vâstârem, 'a protector,' and vahyô, 'better,' though the phrases in which these latter occur are of a very similar character, which fully justifies the comparison made in the text.

⁵ The last Gâtha ends with the words yâ erezhegyôî dâhî drigaovê vahyô (Yas. LIII, 9 d).

⁷ Or avar-gâstân, 'disseminations.'

CHAPTER I¹.

1. Satisfaction (shnôkhar) to the creator Aûhar-mazd, and obeisance to the Mazda-worshipping religion.

2. The ninth book (babâ) is about the Hâs and Fargards² of the various Nasks; the object of procuring the division of those portions which exist being owing to the quantity of what is in each one of the Nasks; also an explanation of a suitable selection³ therefrom, such as is an epitome (nisangag-1) of the abundant detail therein.

CHAPTER II.

Sûdkar Nask.

1. Glorification for the Mazda-worshipping religion which is the ordinance of Aûhar-mazd opposed to the demons.

2. Of the Sûdkar⁴ there are twenty-two fargards,

¹ From this point to Chap. XXXI, 17 the text is also found in a second MS. (K) which is independent of the MS. B brought to Surat in A.D. 1783, the original of all the Bombay copies.

² See Bk. VIII, Chap. I, 20, 23. The contents of these are detailed below, in Chaps. II–LXVIII, so far as the first three Nasks are concerned.

³ Referring to Chap. LXIX.

⁴ The first of the Nasks and second of the Gâthic division (see Bk. VIII, Chap. I, 9, 12). As the Stôd-yast (the first of the Gâthic and the first fargard is the Yathâ-ahû-vairyô¹, just as the Yathâ-ahû-vairyô formula is as it were the beginning (bûnîh) of the religion, and from it is the formation of the Nasks which, though about the first six sciences (dânisnô), have also demonstrated the existence of the highest of other sciences in its own place.

3. And here it speaks about the power and success owing to uttering the Yathâ-ahû-vairyô formula² at the beginning of actions. 4. One utterance when one wishes to say anything to any one; one when he wishes to beg of any one; and one when he goes to work. 5. Two when he wishes to confer his blessing. 6. Four when it is for the homage of the chiefs of creation (radô-franâmisnîh), or the ceremony of a season-festival. 7. Five when it is for carrying off the fiend. 8. Six when it is for power; and six when it is for the success of a battle. 9. Seven when it is for the ceremonial of division, but the last of the general list of Nasks) contained the text of the Gâthas, so the next three of the Gâthic division contained commentaries, or homilies, upon that text, written with different objects in view. The purpose of the Sûzkar was apparently (as its name imports) to extract useful instruction from the text, and to illustrate it with legends and remarks. A separate fargard is devoted to each hâ of the Gâthas, beginning with the three sacred formulas, and including the united Yasna Haptang-hâiti and the Aîryaman. The connection between the commentary and text, though usually traceable, is not always very clear; but that is a common characteristic of homilies in general.

¹ The Ahunavair (see Bk. VIII, Chap. I, 7). This fargard explains the use made of this formula, and the benefits derived from it.

² As a spell, or appeal for success. The text of §§ 4-15 has been independently handed down by tradition, with a few variations, in Sls. XIX and the Persian Rivâyat of Bahman Pûngyah.

the archangels, or when one wishes to perform the ceremonial of the archangels. 10. Eight when it is for the ceremonial of a guardian spirit of the righteous. 11. Nine when one wishes to cast seed into his land. 12. Ten when one wishes to allow procreation. 13. Eleven when one goes to ask for a wife. 14. Twelve when one expects to go up on a mountain. 15. Thirteen when one wishes to go to an inhabited district (rûdastâk-1); twelve¹ when he goes out pathless; and one² when he wishes to proceed by a ford through the water.

16. About the place where one has to utter the first Yathâ-ahû-vairyô for smiting the demons. 17. About the good results (dahisnân) of a suitable recital of the words of the Ahunavair, the summary of everything for Zaratûst to utter. 18. And about the fact that, through chanting forth every single word of the Ahunavair with a virtuous intention, a demon is disabled, and there is protection of person and property from the adversary.

19. About the division of the twenty-one Nasks, likewise, according to the first, second, and third lines (gâs) of the Ahunavair³. 20. About the increase of the creatures owing to the liberal thought, word, and deed of a righteous person; owing to the priests having become numerous, and the reverence of him who is making them numerous; and owing to the perpetual meditation of righteousness and the existence of its recompense.

21. Righteousness is perfect excellence.

¹ Sls. XIX, 14 has 'thirteen.'

CHAPTER III¹.Sûdkar Nash.

1. The second fargard, Ashem-vohû², is about the praise of righteousness which is the reward of the religion, and the want of praise at the bridge of judgment owing to enmity (patyânîh) to righteousness.

2. Of righteousness perfect is the excellence.

CHAPTER IV.

Sûdkar Nash.

1. The third fargard, Yênhê-hâtâm³, is about

Ashem vohû vahistem astî, ustâ astî; ustâ ahmâi
hyad ashâi vahistâi ashem.

This may be translated as follows:—‘Righteousness is the best good, a blessing it is; a blessing be to that which is righteousness to perfect rectitude.’

But the Pahlavi version explains it as follows:—‘Righteousness is perfect excellence [righteousness of any excellence is good]. Happy is that righteousness and happy also that virtuous man who is a causer of righteousness, the righteousness that is perfect [that is, he shall accomplish duty and good works].’

Yênhê hâtâm âad, yêsnê paitî, vanghō
mazdau ahurō vaêthâ, ashâd haêâ, yaunghâmêâ, tâsêâ tausêâ yazamaidê.

This may be translated as follows:—‘Of whatever male of the the formation of mankind by slow increase, and, when they live on for fifty¹ years, their slowly becoming dust; the coming of death even to him who is very pleasantly living, as regards mankind, at the climax (barīnō) of his life; and the happiness of the worldly existence is given only to the worthy, on account of their love of righteousness; the rest are passed by². 2. And also this, that he who is produced by the demons, or is proceeding to the existences, therefore, Ahuramazda was better cognizant, through righteousness in worship, and of whatever females, both those males and those females we reverence.'

The Pahlavi version explains it as follows:—'Whoever of those existing is thus in worship as regards a good being [that is, shall celebrate a ceremonial for that good being who is Aθharmazd the lord], Aθharmazd is aware of it, owing to the accompaniment of righteousness [and being acquainted with the reward and recompense of whatever are, severally, the duty and good works that any one has performed, he grants them]. I reverence those of the assembly, males and females [the archangels; because the male of them are good, and the female of them].'

The Pahlavi translator evidently read vanghō in the first line of the text, as printed above, and not in the second, as in the present MSS.

demons, or has committed falsehood, is the opulent person who gives nothing to a worthy supplicant.

3. Righteousness is perfect excellence.

CHAPTER V.

Sûdkar Nask.

1. The fourth fargard, Yânim-manô¹, is about where a gradual development (dêr-zahîsnih) of that which is for the future existence is best; and, secondly, that which occurs now when the wisdom, instructed eloquence, diligence, and energetic effort, which are the utilizers of life, are with one, and these five misusers of it—greediness, want of energy, indolence, defilement, and illicit intercourse—are not with one. 2. This, too, that these five defects existed in Dahâk², and owing to that, moreover, Frêdûn² is irritated with him, and smites him in revenge for Yim³.

3. About the heinousness of these four vices, which are drunkenness, knavish companionship, apostasy, and selfishness, and the grievous results therefrom. 4. And this, too, that Yim drove away these four vices from the world, and then was able to prepare immortality. 5. About avoidance of him who, through any statement, is producing a thief as an orator (âkhûn), and of acquiescence with a hasty unoratorical statement of a companion. 6. And this, too, that he who propagates very evil commands in the world gives stout-heartedness to the fiend.

7. About the clamour of a poor distressed one for a perfect remedy, and the repelling derangement (lakhvâr-pafshîrisnîh), unacceptableness, unbles-sedness, and want of Gâtha lore of the distresser arisen from the clamour of the distressed one. 8. About the connection of satisfying distress on true and reasonable complaint, and the reasonable complaining of true complainers, by him who has been an inferior judge, and gradually up to the highest adjudicator who is Aûharmazd.

9. The excellence of righteousness is perfect.

CHAPTER VI.

Sûdkar Nask.

1. The fifth fargard, Khshmaibyâ¹, is about the forgetfulness of a father for a son, a son for a father, a brother for a brother, a friend for a friend, a husband (mânpatō) for a wife (nârîk), and a wife for a husband in a measurable time, through excess and festivity (khang); and the unforgetfulness of the spirit of the Gâthas for so many reciters and chanters of the Gâthas. 2. About the complaint of the spirit of the Gâthas when a high-priest, although priest of the country-folk (dehîgânō), passes away in an out-district², and the body of that man does not come back to his own land; whatever is relating to that, and, besides that, what is to be born in that

1. The sixth fargard, *Ad-tâ-vakhshyâ*¹, is about the perfection of the five excellences: the first through righteousness, the second through virtuous offspring, the third through land producing vegetation, the fourth through flocks of sheep, and the fifth through training in industry. 2. About the distribution of fortune to the diligent; and of destitution to the indolent. 3. About the acquirement of fortune singly sitting, two-fold even walking, three-fold hastening, four-fold even running, five-fold even carrying on a horse, six-fold even driving on a road, seven-fold by understanding legal proceedings, eight-fold by good protection even of wealth, nine-fold by intelligence and diligence in the cultivation of land, and ten-fold by providing the teaching of the bounteous texts².

About the five store-holders¹ of perfect excellence: industry, diligence, contentment, guileless understanding (nîrikht-hûshih), and provision of means.

7. About abstaining from sitting with drunkards.

8. And this, too, that he does not drink varieties of wine (mâê-gunagânö) with the approval of the sacred beings, who becomes a viciously-disposed assailant and annoyer of others, and a disturber (kêpînîdâr) of duties, through drinking varieties of wine. 9. And this, too, that thou shouldst eat that which is your food where there is a suitable place. 10. And where it is eaten by thee it should be lightly, it should not be heavily, so that, when it is eaten by thee, a good work is performed, and there is abstinence from sin. 11. And, so that what thou eatest shall be immortally joyful to thee, where there are poor, provide them a share, and the poor will bless thee; and, as to a poor man who is righteous, the opinion is that his blessing is best.

the exhibition to Zaratûst of the nature of the four periods in the millennium of Zaratûst¹. 2. First, the golden, that in which Aûharmazd displayed the religion to Zaratûst. 3. Second, the silver, that in which Vistâsp² received the religion from Zaratûst. 4. Third, the steel, the period within which the organizer of righteousness, Âtûrpâd³ son of Mâraspend, was born. 5. Fourth, the period mingled with iron is this, in which is much propagation of the authority of the apostate and other villains, as regards the destruction of the reign of religion, the weakening of every kind of goodness and virtue, and the disappearance of honour and wisdom from the countries of Irân. 6. In the same period is an account of the many perplexities and torments (zakhamî-hastanö) of the period for that desire of the life of the good which subsists in seemliness.

³ Probably equivalent to 'walking in stockings,' though some think it means 'walking barefoot.' It is sinful on account of the risk of pollution from stepping on impurities.

11. Righteousness is perfect excellence.

CHAPTER X.

Sûdkar Nask.

1. The ninth fargard, Yathâis¹, is about the devilry, the blighted destiny, the complete pollution, the grievous stench, the heinous sinfulness, and the annoyance to all spiritual and worldly virtue of the sodomite. 2. The atonement for grievous sinfulness and the appropriation of great good works by him who is a molester, and the awful sinfulness of him who is a propitiator, of that sinner. 3. Of the seven one mentions as evil, who are accounted equal to the evil spirit in vileness—such as *Az-i Dahâk*² in witchcraft, the serpent Srôbar in violence, *Vadâk*³ in producing evil progeny⁴, Tûr-i Brâdar-vakhsh in destroying a righteous man, and an apostate⁵ in grievous sinfulness—the permitter and performer of

4. Perfect is the excellence of righteousness.

CHAPTER XI.

Sūdkar Nask.

1. The tenth fargard, *Yâ-shyaothanâ*¹, is about the complaint of the spirit of fires to Aûharmazd owing to seven descriptions of people. 2. First, owing to domestics considering it as contemptible and in an unresisting state (agangih), molesting it immoderately, and making use of it with unwashed hands; also the damsel who has introduced fire into the sole of her foot, and the bursting of the blister (âvilag); and a weapon brought out into its splendour. 3. Second, the complaint owing to the carriers of fire from that abode [where the provision of care for fire is as a law to them, to that abode]² where the provision of care for fire is not as a law to them. 4. And there, owing to the arrival and preparation of the demons, it lay stupefied, like a powerful youth who is feverish and in a languid state; and its cure from that sickness (ayôyakih) was by bringing forward to it their pure sandal-wood, or benzoin, or aloe-wood, or pomegranate³, or whatever there was of the most odoriferous of plants. 5. Third, the complaint owing to the hussy¹ unto whom it happens, through menstruation, that the stench and filth owing to the menstruation is brought to it (the fire); and its sickness and stupefaction owing thereto are as written above. 6. Fourth, the complaint owing to the hussy who, dropping her knee on to the fire-stand, arranged her curls; the falling of damp and moisture from her head, with the hair and filth therefrom, into the fire; the consumption of it discontentedly, and the sickness and stupefaction owing thereto. 7. Fifth, the complaint owing to the father, or guardian, of a child for not keeping the child away from the fire; and the bodily refuse and other unlawfulness that come upon it from such children. 8. Sixth, the complaint owing to the adversity which the unpurified infidel (agdênô) may bring upon it, by blowing the breath of his mouth upon it in directing its use, and it becomes incalculable. 9. Seventh, the complaint—which, one says, is more awful and more grievous—owing to those who use it as an ordeal for a falsehood, and, when it is made evident thereby as to the acquitted and convicted, they become of a different opinion about it.

10. At the place of complaint that which is polluted is put forward together with that which is pure, and the increase of it (the fire) is through lawful and unlawful operation; its burning alone and increasing are such as when both would be as a necessity for it, and undesired and rapid burning and increasing¹ are those which are polluted by burning and insatiably consuming; and in that which is an operation unlawfully—the burning alone and increasing being [such as when]² both would be as a necessity [for it]—the increase is troubled.

11. This, too, he³ says: 'I am not of the world here, and from here I will extricate myself, from the earth up to the sky; I am also thy son⁴, more to thee⁵ than any of the other creatures.' 12. And Aûharmazd spoke to him thus: 'So thou shouldst stand over the fire, in thy proper duty as [a spirit⁶], carrying that club; [it is a substantial means, because I produce it, through which] thou turnest off [the whole bodily existence], some to the endless light, and some to the endless darkness.'

13. This, too, that he who shall provide care for fire has paid the greatest reverence unto Aûharmazd. 14. The propitiation of the righteous is the best thing, and their vexation is the worst; when pleased they favour one, and it is the law of the sacred beings that they promote; [when vexed they wound, and it is the demon that they restrict.

15. It is righteousness that is perfect excellence.]⁶

CHAPTER XII.

Sûdkar Nask.

1. The eleventh fargard, the Yasna¹, is about the assembly of the angels of the spiritual existences on account of the complaint of fire; and the complaint of fire in the assembly, with its statement of this, too²: ‘I am not of the world here, and from here I will extricate myself, from the earth up to the sky, and there I will shine on to the earth of seven regions, like the moon and sun and even the divinely-produced stars when they shine with their own light.’ 2. The words of Aûharmazd about the just complaining of fire as regards the contamination³ of the creatures, the impossibility of keeping the fire undisturbed, and satisfying the fire concerning the creation of the creatures for the worldly existence, along with the disturbed condition of fire, too, owing to the impossibility of maintaining⁴ the uncreated state which, with the freedom from disturbance of fire also, was better; likewise proclaiming the care of it. 3. And the speech of the fire was thus: ‘If there be not that one mode whereby I may thus shine, owing to those that have acted according to my request⁵, thou art aware, O Aûharmazd! there are some among the creatures that I cannot grant so much to; therefore carry me away, O Aûharmazd! then give me away there! and be thou carrying me away into the midst of Aîrân-vêg¹!

4. The propitious² fire is from the creator Aûharmazd, and it is produced by him in a dwelling, without being handled (barâ sûdakö)³, by aid of bringing together⁴. 5. And so he spoke in words thus: 'Such is thine own growth, thou who art my fire! in every dwelling where thou comest, and in every village, every community, and every province; and as exalted as thou are the water and plants, and he, too, who is a guardian spirit of the righteous, when they shall bring forward holy-water for delivering up to thee⁵; and, when they shall bring forward to thee firewood which is dry, a person—through the light which he observes—has spoken of it thus: "This is the Gûsn-asþ⁶ fire."'

About the character and reward of the washer (âsnôtâr) and the producer of the purity and cleansing of that which the fire has dropped¹, of the introducer of the firewood and the washer upwards², of the stirrer of the fire and the carrier-away of the firewood, who are strictly directed; the lawful work done with a cooking-pot and such-like, and the sin of him who is a disturber of it. 8. About the destroyer of that which the fire has dropped, and the introducer of damp firewood into it. 9. About the blessing of fire for people by whom it is satisfied.

10. About advice as regards not bringing to the fire that which is due to theft, or the power of extortion, and the grievous bridge-judgment³ of him who is bringing it; also the defilement (âlûdan) and hurting of the fire from that which occurs when he likewise consecrates his hoard (hanbarisnô), owing to the corruption by the demons⁴ thus arisen. 11. for a son (pûs radîh), that the progeny is a son.

12. And about the penalty for¹ the progress of other impropriety which occurs to fire; also about the person who has attained to the guardianship of fire and does not lawfully control it.

13. About an admonition to Zaratûst as to consecrating to the sacred beings anything whatever which one eats, and not eating what is unconsecrated. 14.

About the wish of the evil spirit that no one shall be performing (vadîdûnâñ-âdô) worship and obeisance to the sacred beings, and that the people shall possess no ruler and high-priest, so that no desire of theirs shall arise for any virtuousness. 15. About an admonition as to indispensably worshipping the sacred beings with the best ceremonial, that of a priest (âsrûkô) without sin; or with an average one, that of a priest whose sin is not more than one Aredûs² without a basis (a-bûn); or with the lowest one, that of a priest whose sin is not more than one Khôr³ on a basis (pavan bûn). 16. Whoever, in a village of Mazda-worshippers, has not chanted the sacred hymns after fifteen years of age, through sinfulness, is as a dog they have thrown provisions to, and it has occurred for a basis of the sin of unseasonable chattering⁴; also the inadmissibility of his soul by Mânsarspend⁵.

17. About the coming of Ast-vidâd¹, at all times, to mortals whom death has reached², and also whom it has not. 18. About the ideas of the wicked, that the best existence does not exist, that the production of the renovation of the universe does not occur, that there are no dead whom they raise up thereby, and it is not that change one attains. 19. This, too, that is false, for the same reason they observe, being wicked; because the best existence exists, there occurs a production of the renovation which is good, they raise up the dead thereby, and thus one attains that change.

20. About an admonition as to not making lamentation and weeping over those passed away; and, after the passing away of every righteous one of the religion to the spirits, one is not to augment the distress of the very spirit of life by making lamentation and weeping over the departed. 21. And this, too, that the guardian spirits of the righteous claim no lamentation and weeping after their own ceremonial and the blessing of righteous men. 22. This, too, that the body of every one is not of like will with the soul; food is the desire of the body, and also a store of wealth; righteous action is the desire of the soul, and also the gifts which they give away.

23. About an enquiry of the righteous Zaratûst as to who it is who has banished (âpârînîdö) all goodness and perfection from his own self, but thinks them not banished, and does not complain of that loss¹. 24. And the reply of Aûharmazd, that it is he who is deceived² by his own tongue through the utterance of words, so that, through speaking falsely, he has become worthy of death. 25. This, too, that for him it is the weapon of the evil spirit; even so complete mindfulness is the reign of Spendar-mad³, and thus a liar is more a power for the religion when a man, on account of dulness of thought, gives no reply, so that he may not speak falsely through dulness of thought.

26. This, too, that he worships the demons with thousand-fold holy-water, who establishes him who is not a member of the community⁴ in the Zôti duty⁵, sooner than him who is a wise Zôti. 27. And this, too, that thou shouldst fetch him who is a member of the community for the Zôti duty, not him who is not a member of the community, for thus thy advance is to the supreme heaven (garôdmânö). 28. Also this, that a bad Zôti is worse from the Zôti duty.

29. This, too, that that which is the earliest controller (ayûkhtâr) of sin is thought which is subdued⁶, then forgiveness, then shame, and then listening; and, afterwards, through the sinfulness of the fiend⁷, one becomes a promise-breaker. 30. This, too, that they shall bring every man who is a wounder before the convocation composed of any priest who is a controller of recitation (srâyisnō ayûkhtâr), any priest who is of the district (âdehîk), any priest who is of an out-district (aûzdehîk), and any priest who is the man's own kinsman.

VIII, Chap. IX, 3, and S. B. E., vol. xviii, pp. 393, 396.

31. 'Thus say I unto thee, O Spîtâmân! let there be no breach of promise; neither when the conversation, that they would make a support, was with the wicked, and there is no great judiciousness in it; nor when it was with those of thine own religion, the righteous, as to anything of great judiciousness; because both of them are promises, both with the wicked and the righteous¹.'

32. It is the excellence of righteousness that is perfect.

CHAPTER XIII.

Sûdkar Nask.

1. The twelfth fargard, Ustavaiti², is about the exaltation of Zaratûst through the satisfaction of water, and the hope of all creatures for him. 2. And about the impure recitation of a text, when³ the text is not uttered by a high-priest. 3. This, too, that the text which a man who is corrupted may offer is an impropriety (adînâih) for that which is an uncorrupted place. 4. This, too, is declared, that a greedy man whose belly is filled by accumulation—and the end of every sin is, to him, only for the gratification of the body—one considers just like a gallows to which there is a foundation (sipō) of every impurity. 5. This, too, that a bird (vâê) practises that habit (sân) even that it kills those outright which have become large in our midst, which are the serpents produced by the demons. 6. This, too, that for invocation (azbâyisnō) of the sacred beings thinking with speaking, speaking with acting, and acting without deceitfulness are effectual.

7. About the pure goodness of the archangels, and the union of their thoughts, words, and deeds together; their bountifulness, nurturing, and protection are the cause¹ of the prosperity of the world. 8. About the production of Zaratûst by Aûharmazd with a goodness like his own. 9. This, too, that whoever gives anything to the disciples of Zaratûst, his reward and recompense are just as though the thing had been given by him to Zaratûst².

10. It is perfect excellence that is righteousness.

CHAPTER XIV.

Sûdkar Nask.

³ The first three words of the second hâ of the second Gâtha (Yas. XLIV, 1), here written tað-spâ-pêres in Pahlavi.

is about the strength and mightiness of the spirit of the sacred cake¹. 2. This, too, that every night the demons rush from hell² into the world, to injure and cause the death of the creatures; and, when people consecrate a sacred cake, that spirit descends to attack and keep back the demons, and to engage in combat with the demons ninety-nine times during every night; he also smites and stupefies them, and keeps them back from destroying the world.

3. This, too, that any one whatever of those men who utter these words³ in prayer becomes righteous, except those men who shall contentedly, or wishfully, carry out a command for evil deeds, and they deceive (suftênd), or make others deceive, by statements proposed to them; and whose evil thoughts are thus more than their good thoughts, their evil words more than their good words, and their evil deeds more than their good deeds. 4. About carrying off the reliance produceable that a sin worthy of death is the obliteration (frâz mûshtanô) of other sin, like an awful and mighty wind when it sweeps swiftly over the plain⁴.

5. Of righteousness the excellence is perfect.

The enmity of fire to Keresâsp, through the distress which he occasioned to it, and the keeping of him away ¹ [from heaven; also the friendship of Gôs-aûrvan ² for him, through the prosperity which he occasioned to it, and the protection of him] from hell. 4. The petition of Zaratûst to the fire to have compassion upon what was owing to Keresâsp's sin; the compliance (hangâftanô) of the fire with that petition, and the departure of the soul of Keresâsp to the ever-stationary existence ³.

CHAPTER XVI.

Sûdkar Nask.

1. The fifteenth fargard, Kamnamaêza ⁴, is

² Av. geus urva, 'the soul of the ox,' the spirit which departed from the primeval ox when the evil spirit attacked it; she is supposed to be the heavenly protector of all animals, and is also called Drvâspa (see Yt. IX, 1; Bd. III, 14, 18, IV, 2-5; Sls. XXII, 14).

⁴ The appellation of the fourth, and last, hâ of the second about the arrival of Ast-vidâd¹ upon the spot, and the insecurity of any one from him; also the non-continuance of the mortal body and decaying (farsâvand) wealth of any one of the mortals summoned is death². 2. And this, too, that Ast-vidâd shall carry off all mortals by that awful and proclaimed marvel, and they are not saved from him³; each one, indeed, saves only that which is the soul. 3. This, too, that the soul alone sees the reward and bridge⁴ of the spiritual existence, and embodied it does not see such things; if, when embodied, it could have seen like that, then it would not have committed the sin really originating with it, even for anything whatever of the ease and comfort of the worldly existence, nor shrunk (mansîdô) from the first good work.

4. About the hideousness and frightfulness of the body of man after death, and only that which is considered by every one the most precious of desirable things is undecaying (afarsâk). 5. As regards the casting away of the dust, and also living people, that which is more nearly connected therewith is Gâtha (Yas. XLVI), which begins with the words kâam nemôî zâam; it is here written kamnamēzō in Pahlavi.

¹ See Chap. XII, 17. The connection of the demon of death with Yas. XLVI is that the first few words of that hâ are supposed to be repeated by the wicked soul in despair after death (see Yt. XXII, 20, W.; Mkh. II, 159; AV. XVII, 7).

² K has marzûm, 'human (?).'

uninhabitableness¹ and its duration. 6. And when, too, this way, the consciousness is in the vicinity of the body², and the dog and bird go forth for the dismemberment of the body, the frightening of the consciousness by them is like that of a sheep by a wolf; also its disputing with the dog and bird about the dismemberment of the body, the reciting (mârdanō) of words spiritually at first repelling them, thinking the body is alive. 7. And, afterwards, when the body is dismembered by them, the hastening of the consciousness to the vicinity of the dismembered body, just like a female (dênûdakō) sheep when it hastens on to its young ones; and its noticing—with grievous unhappiness³ for the body—and recounting where the features (dêmagânō) of that body were in happiness, and to what misery it has now come. 8. And, when that body became sinful in its lifetime, about its not accepting, during that lifetime, that which the consciousness repeatedly well-endeavoured to promote for that body, as regards abstaining from sin and practising good works.

This, too, that the people who live on, in the worldly existence, a hundred years are less than those who do not live a hundred years; the progress of a lifetime, little by little, and the rushing on of a lifetime; wife and property and the rest of worldly things all

All these forms of the name imply that he was a king, or master, of oxen; and Mkh. describes him as a Mazdā-worshipping minotaur on the sea-shore, probably the Caspian, or the river Oxus, as Bd. makes him a brother, or nephew, of Frâ-siyâv the Turanian. About the bridge penalty of him who is a mourner (navinîdâr) and self-wounder in the three nights after a death, and how it is as though they who are living should again pour melted ore on a human being. 5. About the punishment for a woman who gives herself in marriage to a righteous man, and comes away² from him; such as when a hedgehog³ should be constantly going in and coming out by her sexual organ; and the cutting off of her way from the best existence. 6. About the non-deliverance of a soul of the wicked from hell till the future existence. 7. About the punishment of the wicked there is this, too, it is as though a sheep which is alive should be remaining tied by the legs, head downwards, and there should be a specific exudation of its toes through running at the nose⁴.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Sūdkar Nask.

1. The seventeenth fargard, Yêzî¹, is about where he is who shall commit any of these five sins², and, thereby perverted from the religion, has diminished his own life and destiny³:—A human being when he contentedly reverences a demon in spiritual lordship (ahûth) and priestly authority (radîh), one steadfast in religion when he so reverences one unsteadfast in religion, a teacher when he so reverences one who is no teacher and ignorant, one acquainted with the Gâthas when he so reverences one unacquainted with the Gâthas and unintelligent (anashnâs)⁴, and a helpful one when he so reverences an unhelpful and unwise one.

2. This, too, where also they are who unlawfully slaughter a sheep, or beast of burden, which diminishes their life and destiny. 3. And so, too, those also who think scornfully of Aûharmazd, O pure and righteous Spîtâmân! and their own religion, the strength of the righteous and thy disciples.

4. Excellence that is perfect is righteousness.

about the pregnancy of the demon from him who has eaten and chattered in sinfulness towards Khûr-dad and Amûrdad¹, or who makes water when standing², or who heedlessly sees his semen. 2. And the hussy³ who spills (gûyêdô) anything after sunset (hûk-frâshmôk-dâd), or who scatters a morsel (dânar) of food to the north, at night, without a recitation of the Ahunavair⁴.

3. This, too, that only the soul is constantly desirable for the body, even through this alone, that this perishable body⁵ [is a worldly state of righteousness, and, by rousing up (lâlâ-payamîsnîh)⁶ when thou wouldst sleep on, the righteousness] is on the advance when thou wouldst have retreated; and

³ See Chap. XI, 5 n.

⁴ K does not mention the latter sinful action. The reason of the sin of such actions is that they may be considered as offerings to the demons (who are supposed to come from the north and to be powerful at night) unless protected by the Ahunavair (see Bk. VIII, Chap. I, 7) used as an exorcism (see Sd. XXX, 1, 2; Sls. X, 7, XII, 18).

the righteousness, in arising, is like thee in every coming and departure; through fetching and delivering the breath it shall become good reward, abundant reward, and the reward of righteousness. 4. When the body shall act so, the soul is rejoiced and shall utter a blessing for the body thus: 'Happy may it be for thee, O perishable body! whom I have made tall, and whom I have brought near to the best existence.' 5. And when the body shall not accept the progress (afrâs) of the soul, and says it is evil progress on rousing up, evil progress on advancing, [and evil progress upwards, the soul is a demon]¹ and shall offer [lamentable]¹ words thus: 'Evil art thou, O perishable body! whom I made dwarfish (gasûk), and whom I have brought near to the worst existence.'

6. About where there are unaccustomed (avêsakô), imperfect, and secret signs of short life, and the healthfulness of uttering the Ahunavair² and Ashem³ for it. 7. This, too, that, when thou wouldst squat for making water, thou recitest the Ahunavair, and the Ashem, afterwards, when thou wouldst stand up; so that any demon, or fiend, shall least injure thee. 8. And when thou wouldst go in unto thy wife (nârîk), thou recitest first the Ahunavair, and the Ashem, afterwards, when thou wouldst be coming together⁴; for so thou wouldst be making that, too, which arises—which is thy son—more righteous and more successful through the Ashem. 9. This, too, that, when thou wouldst go into a house, thou shouldst be offering homage, and do thou utter the Ahuna-vair, for the spirit of the house and for everything of the material existence of the righteous which is and was and will be in that dwelling.

2. About the darkness, the intensity (bûr'zvôhômândîh) and far-reaching bottomlessness of the blackness, and the absence of goodness in hell; and the proximity to stench, close concealment³, sleet-pelted clambering (pîsnakö-bâlinîh), frozen ad-

LIV, 5-8:—'As close as (tang-iġ) from the ear to the eye, and as many as the hairs a horse has in his mane, so many in number the souls of the wicked stand, but they do not see, nor do they hear a sound, one from the other, and every one, therefore, thinks that he is alone.' vancing, painful condition, distressed state, and awful fear of those in hell. 3. This, too, that is thrown open (lakhvâr ramitund) over it, from the Dâitî peak¹, which is in Airân-vêg, to Albûr'z², and below the middle of which is the gate of hell, is the K'invađ bridge³ which is the route (vidâr) of every one, righteous or wicked; the width across the route of the righteous is a breadth of nine spears, each one the length of three reeds, but the route for the wicked becomes like the edge of a razor.

4. ' Thus say I⁴ unto thee, O Spîtâmân! that the man of truth steps forward over the K'invađ pass, even the far-famed happy bridge; for Âstâd⁵, the good promoter of the world, and Mitrô⁶ of the vast cattle-pastures save only the man possessing truth from that distress, as though they were a regiment (sîpâh) a thousand strong. 5. So I say unto thee, O Spîtâmân! that thou shouldst not become a liar unto Mitrô, neither when thou wouldst converse with the wicked, nor when thou wouldst with those of thine own religion who are righteous; for both of those are promises, both with the wicked and the righteous; there is a promise, O Zaratûst! even of a wolf with young animals, but that which is a lascivious (gêhîk) promise is more awful, O Spîtâmân! 6. So I say unto thee, O Spîtâmân! that thou shouldst not seize a wanton (gêhîk) for use—that is, do not make her thy wife—and with compulsion (ûpayamîsnîh) of her¹—that is, do not let thymself lie with her. 7. And if thou shouldst seize a courtesan for use, and with compulsion of her, thou mayst not dismiss her afterwards, neither in adversity, nor in prosperity, neither on account of fondness for self, nor for life; because he who seizes a courtesan for use, and with compulsion, and shall dismiss her on account of fondness for self, or for life, becomes thereby a breaker of promises to the house, village, community, or province, that gives her life (valman zîvinêdô), and to the soul that animates her².

8. So breaking the promise comes upon the children that are theirs, through evil teaching; and he who is wicked is lying down without children at the bottom of hell. 9. That is, there is nothing whatever of³ happiness for the wicked, that happiness which is produced abundantly by him who is Aû-harmazd.

10. Perfect righteousness is excellence.

¹ Or, perhaps, 'with approach to her' (see Chap. XIX, 3 n). If ûpadamîsnîh were read, it might mean 'aspiration, or attachment' for her.

² This implies that the woman, being a notorious sinner, cannot reasonably complain of bodily injury on being dismissed; but her soul and the community are grievously injured by her being thus driven into further sin, and for this injury the man's soul will be made responsible.

³ K has 'none even of this.'

CHAPTER XXI.

Sūdkar Nask.

1. The twentieth fargard, Vohû-khshathrem¹, is about the oppressive actions of the sovereignty which Dahâk² exercised over the earth of seven regions, and the forward progress of his commands owing to a surrounding of terrors.

2. About Dahâk's enquiry of the members of the assembly, regarding the reason of the affliction of the collected people, after the cutting up of Yim³ and the accession (khûdâyih) of Dahâk; and the people's saying, in reply to Dahâk, that Yim had kept away want and destitution, hunger and thirst, decay and death, lamentation and weeping from the world, besides the cold and heat of the immoderate mingling of the demon with mankind. 3. And this, too, that⁴ 'a giver of comfort was Yim—that is, those things were produced by him which are the comfort of mankind—and he was a giver of desire for them, so that his happiness was through the gratification produced—that is, mankind gratified him through virtue. 4. ⁴ What follows, as far as the end of § 7, appears to be quoted verbatim from the original Pahlavi text of the Nask.

⁵ The demon Uda who tries to make people talk when they ought to be silent (Bd. XXVIII, 19), and who seems to be identified

Yim the splendid and rich in flocks—who was struck down by you through violent assault—unauthorisedly desirous (varak¹) and eager for the world, produced want and destitution, distress and greed, hunger and thirst, and the sanctifier² of Wrath the wounding assailant, Want without pastures, Terror, Destruction the secret-moving, Decay the decrepit³, and the seven arch-demons⁴.’ 5. And this, too, that ‘those who look for a son are made devoid of pregnancy by thee; evil-destined is the monster (sîpist) self-made, the uncompleted demon that it is impossible to seek a remedy for, who does not extend (lâ vâlêd) from himself, that is, no lineage proceeds from him. 6. And thou art a sheep that is a wide-traveller, and keeps the dog away from mankind; thou hast snatched away from us the bright radiance of Yim the splendid and rich in flocks, who came out on every evil contingency, at the approach of

(in Pahl. Vend. XVIII, 70) with the fiend who confesses her amours to Srôsh, and is said (in Bd. XXXI, 6) to have been the mother of Dahâk, there named Udaî or Aûd, but more commonly called Vazâk (see Chap. X, 3; Dd. LXXII, 5, LXXVIII, 2), whence possibly the matronymic Vazakân (Mkh. LVII, 25, ‘the Av. vadhaghana of Vend. XIX, 6) of that monarch. The text here appears to allude to an amour with Yim.

every winter, or scorched by extreme heat, so as to act for the benefit of his place¹. 7. Thou art intelligent, O Bêvarâsp²! do thou even tell how this opinion is so, that a bad ruler is a thing which is so bad; he who is a good ruler is our desire, we will give the revenue of taxation (bâhar-i madam-dedrûnisiñh) to him, and anything which is necessary for good government when he shall achieve it.'

8. About the smiting by Frêdûn³, for the sake of killing Dahâk; the striking of his club upon the nape of the neck⁴ (pilîk), the heart, and even the skull; and Dahâk's not dying from that beating. 9. Then smiting him with a sword, and the formation (vastanö) of noxious creatures of many kinds, from the body of Dahâk, at the first, second, and third blow. 10. The exclamation of the creator Aîharmazd to Frêdûn thus: 'Thou shouldst not cut him who is Dahâk, because, if thou shouldst cut him, Dahâk would be making this earth full of serpents, toads (khan-galâk), scorpions, lizards, tortoises, and frogs;' with the mode of binding him with awful fetters, in the most grievous punishment of confinement⁵.

11. This, too, that when Az-î Dahâk was bound, the report of the same proceeded thus through all the regions, which are seven, that down-stricken is Az-î Dahâk, but he who smote him is Frêdûn the Âspikân⁶, the exalted and mighty. 12. And in the tenth winter those particulars were believed, and thus they spoke, that it was owing to¹ Yim that Az-î Dahâk is now smitten by them, because the tidings which are good are not yet gathered unto all the regions, which are seven, and those which are evil do not mention Az, nor demand the virtuous maiden (karâtîk) with importunity, nor even coveted wealth². 13. This, too, that, when information came to him of women, or property, that seemed to him desirable to possess, they were then admitted by him into a golden cage³, and that, which was completely impregnable (airistö), came on through immaterial space (mainôg-divâkih) to the den (grêstakö) of Az-î Dahâk.

14. This, too, that, though⁴ he who smote him were his brother, or descendant, or kinsman, or any one whatever of his nearest relations, it did not seem to them as that which is grievous, and it was not thought of in their minds, so that it did not occasion them even a reminiscence again; and thus they talked, that if a householder be he that smote, he is one for whom all the fires of the religion are suitable, but that householder being a monarch, he that smote is one who is every way their ruler. 15. About those of the Mâzendarân¹ country having consulted, after the smiting of Dahâk, as to turning (gâstanô) to Khvanîras², and driving out Frêdûn therefrom, and as to the residence offered by the same place through the great number fallen; also, on account of their tallness, there are parts of the wide-formed ocean³ that come up to their mid-thigh, there are others that are up to the navel, and the deeper places are up to the mouth. 18. And, when they have come to this region, their producing grievous harm and destruction to the poor⁴, and the coming of the people with complaints to Frêdûn, and their speaking thus: 'Why didst thou smite Az-î Dahâk, who was a good ruler as to prerogative, so that danger was kept away by him, and an inquisitor (vigôyîdâr) from him protected this region from those of the Mâzendarân country?' 19. And they also said this, about the vileness of the Mâzendarâns, and the wretched state of the people of this region as regards them, that is, they then speak thus: 'Since their habits are thus, since they

20. About the encountering of Frêdûn with those of the Mâzendarân country on the plain of Pêšânîgas², and disputing with them thus: 'You are of the Mâzendar country, and I (anmanô) have destroyed Az-i Dahâk by the swiftest ruin, him who was a grievous sovereign of every one, demons and men; for that smiting of him I am produced by Aûharmazd more overpowering than his limbs made paralyzed by his own enmity, and then you destroy this country of mine, you who are of the Mâzendar country.'

21. And the Mâzendarâns thought slightly (sapûkô) of Frêdûn, and spoke in a tone of derision thus: 'Should it be so, that thou destroyedst Az-i Dahâk by the swiftest ruin, him who was a good sovereign of both demons and men, and thou art produced by Aûharmazd, for that smiting of him, more overpowering than his limbs, even then we will settle in this place and will stay in this place; and it is not thou that art exalted, who art an overgrown (kabed-ârôyisnô) huge sheep with the speech of a hero among other people, and we would not admit thee here.'

And he made it rush up on the ascent, whereby they are made figures of stone, and they who are of the Mâzendar country are destroyed by him through the smiting of fifties, the smiting of hundreds, the smiting of thousands², the smiting of myriads, and the smiting of multitudes innumerable³.

'Thus there are destroyed by him, the victorious and mighty Frêdûn, two-thirds of those of the Mâzendar country, and one-third came out beaten and sick; and never afterwards, O Spitâmân Zaratûst! have they who are of the Mâzendar country marched upon this region of Khvanîras, and it has not been imagined by them, even in thinking about it, that they⁴ should go there, except those⁵ whose names were thus, Spîtiyôš, son of Spânsnâyôš⁶, and Arezrâšpâh, son of Spânsnâyôš⁷, who have wan-

CHAPTER XXII.

Sûdkar Nash.

1. The twenty-first fargard, Vahistôisti³, is about where the best prayers⁴ of the good religion are: unto Mitrô⁵ once every night for dismissing and lessening Wrath in the whole world, and a second time for doing so with Lethargy; a third unto Srôsh⁶ the righteous, and the fourth is the Dâhmân Âfrîn⁷ for further gifts and increasing gifts; and the most supreme high-priests, of the two northern regions, Fradaðafsh and Vîdaðafsh. They are named Spîtôîd-î Aûspôsînân and Aêrêzrâsp-î Aûspôsînân in Bd. XXIX, 1; and the statement that they came from Mâzendarân, made in the text here, identifies that country with the two northern regions. The names of these two high-priests are evidently derived from the Avesta genitives Spitôis Uspâsnaos and Erezrâspahê Uspâsnaos in Yt. XIII, 121, persons concerning whom it is only stated that their fravashis, or guardian spirits, are to be revered.

preservative of them was the Dāhmân Āfrīn. 2. And this, too, that the most admirable of shapes of women was Hūmât¹ of the noble family of Vistâsp, of horses the splendid horse of Vistâsp, of oxen the male ox Barmâyûn², of sheep the very much celebrated³ sheep that is fat, white-jawed, and star-spotted, with its upper half in a manufacture (pa-sakhtakö) embroidered with gold and the topmost part yellow; and yet not one of them attains an equality to even a single thousandth part of the glory of a righteous man, a member of the community, by whom the Dāhmân Āfrīn of the good is uttered. 3. And this, too, as much as its goodness for the man and his wife is its evil for a villain and his paramour⁴.

And, owing to the seductiveness of Aeshm, and the other demons who remained his co-operators for that undoing, Kât-Ûs was even engaged in opposing and molesting the sacred beings. 7. The previous separation (madam rêgî-hastanö) of Kâi-Ûs from the troops, and his not turning from that ill-advisedness even on renewed strife aloft² with the supreme sacred beings. 9. Afterwards, the creator's calling back the glory of the Kayâns to himself, the falling of the troops of Kâi-Ûs to the earth from that height, and the flying of Kâi-Ûs to the wide-formed ocean³.

10. This, too, it says, that, besides him, some one⁴ flew behind him, thus associated with him; and after him flew Nêryôsang⁵, the promoter (frêh-dâdâr) of the world, for diverting that person from him. 11. And the cry of him, the unborn Khûsrôî, who was thus associated with him, like that of a regiment (sipâh) a thousand strong, was thus: 'Thou shouldst not smite him, O Nêryôsang, promoter of the world! for if thou shouldst smite this man, O Nêryôsang, promoter of the world! there will not be afterwards obtained, for acquirement, a

² B has 'pitying strife;' khvāparîk being written instead of avarîk.

³ Meaning the Caspian, as in Chap. XXI, 17.

⁵ Av. Nairyôsangha, an angel who is supposed to be the usual messenger of Aûharmazd to mankind (see Byt. III, 25, 26, 59, 60). K has only 'besides him and behind him flew Nêryôsang.'

Through these words the guardian spirit of Khûsrôî delighted Nêryôsang, the promoter of the world; and, on these words, the latter was releasing him and that Kâi-Ûs who thereby became discreet.

13. Perfect is the excellence of righteousness.

The reply of Vâê, the long-continuing lord, about his smiting them; and, upon that answer, Kaî-Khûsrôî's taking Vâê, the long-continuing lord, and transforming him into the shape of a camel, mounting him, and going, with the Irânian levies (hangamanôîkân), to the place where the immortal Haoist, son of Geurva¹, lies in strength², and his letting him lie; also his going beyond (kâdmon) him to the place where Tûs³, the banisher of strife, lay in strength, and his letting him also lie; and his going beyond him to the place where Kaî-*Apivêh*⁴ lies, and his letting him also lie.

XV, 0, 58, and the latter with Astô-vîdhôtu, the demon of death, in Vend. V, 8, 9; Bd. XXVIII, 35. They appear to be personifications of the upper and lower air, respectively; the former being considered pure through its connection with the sacred beings, and the latter impure through contamination by the demons. Possibly the legend about Vâê in our text may have been suggested by the words vayt-beredubyô and vayôî in Yas. LIII, 6, 7; in which case, this fargard must be considered, to some extent, as a continuation of the preceding one. According to Dd. XXXVI, 3 Kaî-Khûsrôî was made to pass away by Vâê.

His proceeding beyond them, and meeting on the road with that beneficial victor Sôshâns¹, and being asked by that beneficial victor thus: 'What man art thou who sittest aloft on Vâê, the long-continuing lord, so that thou makest Vâê fly, the long-continuing lord transformed into the shape of a camel?' 4. CHAPTER XXIV.

1. Of the Varstmânsar¹ there are twenty-three fargard's, and the first is the Aêthrapaitis², on the asking of Zaratûst, by Maîdôk-mâh³, about the nature of the birth of Zaratûst, and his coming to the religion.

2. And the reply of Zaratûst about the combative coming together of the life-causing and death-causing spirits at his birth⁴. 3. This, too, that when the fellow-villagers⁵ of her who bore him saw his head⁶

4. The speaking of Zaratûst spiritually, on the grievous bringing forth of *his head*⁷, thus: 'As a spiritual lord is my desire, do thou who art the Zôti speak forth to me⁸;' and the reply from Aûhar-mazd thus: 'So shouldst thou be the priestly master as regards whatever righteousness I speak forth with righteous intelligence; thou art of very much value, thou art very righteous, thou art most intelligent, and thou wilt state the religion of the Mazda-worshippers to creatures of every kind.' 5. Through that saying an arrow reaches spiritually unto the demons, just as from a mighty chief warrior of Kai-Vistâsp⁹, like him in a mountain dwelling (garânô mân) who has shot an arrow for an attack (patko-pisnô) opposing those in coats of mail. 6. Even so Zaratûst proclaimed life free from the control of the demons, when this same saying was uttered by him, thus: 'As a spiritual lord is my desire;' and, at the falling of the demons upon Zaratûst for his destruction, an incarnation (tanû) of its spiritual existence stood opposed to them, in that weapon proceeding from Zaratûst, to keep them back.

The third utterance of Zaratûst, on the bringing forth of his arms, was thus: 'That which the first existence produced is to be so practised, with attention, through actions to be concealed by him who is a priestly authority (radô)²;' and through that saying an arrow reaches spiritually unto the demons, equal to one hundred of that which was first spoken, and, at the falling of a demon upon Zaratûst for his death, its spirit, as a sacred being, kept the demon away from Zaratûst.

13. And Aûharmazd spoke to Zaratûst thus: 'As to the sacred beings of the worldly existence, do thou beg companionship from them; but as to the demons, do thou long for (dôsh)² separation from every one of them; practise good thoughts, good words, and good deeds, and abstain from evil thoughts, evil words, and evil deeds.' 14. Also about Aûharmazd having created the creatures in the spiritual existence, and their allotment out to the worldly existence, the superiority of the righteous man as compared with other creatures, and, among mankind, of him who is relying on the provisions of the law and its unchangeableness from goodness, and who is a teacher and provider of teaching as to the pre-eminent existence of the good religion of the sacred beings.

20. And a summary about the bringing together of that fire which is the residue of a fire in a house, for the reverence of that water which is nearest to the dwelling, and of any spirit of a kinsman; and as to him who leaves that fire, water, and spirit, and, on account of a similar desire, reverences another fire, water, and spirit, but none of them can accept that ceremonial, and the acceptance of that man's ceremonial by the others will have occurred just when the former three are revered by him.

21. Righteousness is perfect excellence.

CHAPTER XXV.

Varstmânsar Nask.

1. The second fargard, Yathâ-ahû-vairyo², is about the worthiness, as to worldly and spiritual virtue, in a ruler and in the production of a high-priest's efficiency; and they have been suitable for leadership and priestly authority with whom there is an existence of it; also other talent through which sovereignty and priestly authority are appropriated, and which the ruler or high-priest himself possesses.

2. 'My wish (dôsh), O Zaratûst! is that thou be in spiritual lordship and priestly authority, because thou art, O Zaratûst! provided with a spiritual lord and possessing priestly instruction—that is, they consider thee, too, as high-priest—and it is because thine is the accomplishment of rites, that thou art quite preserved when there is an encounter of the demons with thee—that is, a dispute of apostates with thee.' 3. It is non-possession of a ruler and high-priest, or non-possession of a ruler¹, that became the nature and law of the demons; and the maintenance of Aûharmazd and the archangels, as ruler and high-priest, and the dominion of Aûharmazd are combined with beneficence.

4. This, too, that through righteousness a priestly instructor (radô) is a ruler at will, a sage and benefactor, a cherisher and cleanser (âsnîdâr) of the poor; also the fitness for the supreme heaven (garôdmânîkîh) of all those who are accepting the religion which proceeds from Zaratûst.

5. Of righteousness the excellence is perfect.

CHAPTER XXVI.

admonition as to the praising of righteousness, which is itself the production of true awe of Aûharmazd, the perfection of existences, the better state of prayers¹, and the greatest assemblage of righteousness, good breeding, humility (avöpatagîh), awe of the spiritual existence, extreme joyfulness, and comfort and enlightenment of soul. 2. Also the equipment (padmûkîh) of him who is practising as a high-priest is righteousness and the maintenance of the worship and obeisance for the spirit of righteousness.

3. Of righteousness perfect is the excellence.

CHAPTER XXVII.

Varstmânsar Nask.

1. The fourth fargard, Yênhê-hâtâm², states that Aûharmazd spoke to Zaratûst the Spîtâmân thus: 'Utter the words of the ceremonial and obeisance for us who are Aûharmazd *and*³ the archangels, because they are, O Zaratûst! thy ritual for water⁴, ritual for plants, ritual for a guardian spirit of the righteous, and ritual for an angel of a spiritual existence, or who is even appointed for a worldly existence.'

2. And Zaratûst spoke thus: 'I will utter the words of Aûharmazd, which are opposed to harm and are the ordinance of Aûharmazd, those of the ceremonial and obeisance for you who are arch-angels.'

3. Of righteousness perfect is the excellence.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

Varstmânsar Nask.

1. The fifth fargard, Yânim-manô¹, is about the beneficence and worthiness of Zaratûst, through the virtuousness of his thoughts, words, and deeds²; the priority of Aûharmazd³, and the first possession of obeisance (nîyâyisnô) to him; the mindful performance of obeisance to the sacred beings, and all the merit of obeisance to the sacred beings; the excellence of receiving a righteous man, of bringing fire together, and of maintaining the good religion; the elementary (khâm) wisdom⁴ of the creator, and the consideration of every duty towards his will and creation; the outward indication as to propitious discrimination and of what is done by those who are propitious; and the existence of every kind of self-attraction by Zaratûst towards the religion, from first to last, through the complete reasoning thought that arose solely through obeisance to the sacred beings.

2. This, too, that 'thou art come to the supreme heaven (garôdmân)⁵, O righteous Zaratûst! thou art aware of the deeds, O Zaratûst! which were practised by those in the bodily existence, and which still they practise, and the sacred beings have placed upon mankind acquiring the power of good works.' 3. And about the wonderfulness of the supreme heaven there is this, too, that whoever is in that abode is not any one that passes away after his birth; at the time of the renovation of the universe the supreme heaven is lowered down to the star station¹, the earth being up to there, and Vohûman² is summoned for every purpose to the conference, and, when they call him, Mitrô's³ investigation as regards the existence of righteousness is on the spot; through the coming of that archangel⁴ of true statements for assistance, and through the co-operation of the other archangels and Srôsh² the righteous, is the overpowering of the vexing of distressers⁵; and the assistance of the archangels for Zaratûst was when he went forth for disabling the vicious law of Irân. 4. Concerning Zaratûst there is this, too, in the words of Aûharmazd, that is: 'Thou art our own, O Zaratûst! and this liberality to thee is ours; anything one gives to thee is given by him to us;' also the announcement to Zaratûst, and the bringing of him to Vistâsp⁶ for his assistance and likewise the strength⁷ of his sovereignty for him.

5. The discipleship and veneration of Frashôstar¹ also, and the laudation of Frashôstar for making the religion progressive and for its true transmission in the words of Aûharmazd; also the whole righteousness of those whom Frashôstar attracted to the religion.

6. About the laudation of Zaratûst there is this, too, that is: 'Thou art not astray from us, neither in life, nor in enquiry, nor in openly announcing, even when demonstrating² the religion to others, nor in anything whatever, O Spîtâmân! from us who are archangels; and the donation of benefit to supplicants is the food, and the clothing for us, who are in the ceremonial of the sacred beings, is unworn (asûdakô)³.'

7. About guarding a friend, managing an unfriendly person, and affording a person shelter for the sake of protection, justice, and rectitude⁴; also the unworthy condition of that man who, requiring to perform those duties and good works that are important, shall perform those that are trivial. 8. And this, too, that is: 'Thou art likewise aware, and thou also understandest it, O righteous Zaratûst! through the sagacity of my wisdom, which was the first among existences⁵, and which is also so unto the last existence.'

CHAPTER XXIX.

Varstmânsar Nask.

1. The sixth fargard, Khshmaibyâ¹, is about the complaint of Gôs-aûrvan² to Aûharmazd, when she sat at the creation in the assembly of the arch-angels, as regards the abundant disease and misery which she saw spiritually would come upon her in a bodily existence, through beating, slaughtering, and wounding, stealing, plundering, and presenting, by him of vicious actions and worse desires, as a bribe to him who is an evil-ruling villain (mar), and the operation thereof: the bad ownership, wrongful investigation, false evidence, and making captive (vardakō), by him who is wrathful and oppressive through greed and envy, from the warm cowshed and the effective and diligent guardianship of the herd's dog (pasûs-haûrvō), to that which is a cold and hastily-constructed place; or by him who is seeking meat with a merciless hand through making her distantly separated from her young. 2. Also their explanation and extenuation (kâstanō)³, and the causing of misery of many kinds thereby, 'which is no affliction to them when the wind that is cold⁴, or even that which is hot, comes upon me; which is no affliction to them when, the untimely offspring of my womb being cast away, they slaughter me; and is no affliction to them when the serpent, the leech (khun-garâi)¹, or even the foulest of noxious creatures gnaws me.' 3. And the petition of Gôṣ-aûrvan was thus: 'Do not appoint me to a worldly existence and that awful misery, or, if thou appointest me to a worldly existence, produce it for me without life (aû-zûstânîhâ), so that I may be without feeling and may want that distressing² pain; it is created for the mighty, through whose assistance there is a capability of affording protection to me, even though the Kaî and Karap³ exist.'

4. And, together with the just complaint of Gôṣ-aûrvan, and the compassion of the archangels as to that complaint, there is then the creation of the creatures, among whom the greatest and best⁴ is mankind, for fighting and subduing the destroyer, even though joined together with a complaint of wounding and affliction like that of Gôṣ-aûrvan, and Gôṣ-aûrvan arose with greater judiciousness than an absence of creation even with freedom from disturbance by the Kaîs⁵; on account of the necessity of preparing for the living of mankind through the assistance of cattle, Gôṣ-aûrvan was produced for the material bodily existence and assistance of mankind. 5. And, on account of little feeling for her worldly misery, the breeding (mâyînîḍanō) of cattle was the arraying of strife ; the advancement of the Mazdā-worshipping religion of Zaratûst in the world by Gôś-aûrvan, on the production of Zaratûst for the assistance of cattle ; and the preservation of cattle and other good creations through complete satisfaction at the progress of the religion.

6. This, too, was said to Gôś-aûrvan, that is : ‘ I assert unto thee the passing away of devastation, that is, the existence of a remedy for the misery owing to the evil spirit¹, for which no creature would be produced by me—me who am Aûharmazd—when a remedy for the misery owing to him had not been known to me.’ 7. This, too, that the wish of the evil spirit was thus : ‘ Thou shouldst never produce a creature, O Aûharmazd ! and there should be here no spiritual lordship, no priestly authority, and no desire for perfect righteousness, or necessity for duty and good works.’ 8. The enquiry of Gôś-aûrvan, thus : ‘ For whom am I appointed and formed ?² ’ and the reply to her, thus : ‘ For him who is diligent and moderate³.’

9. Also the friend and nourishment (srâyisñō) begged for cattle by Gôś-aûrvan, the righteous man produced for the assistance of cattle by Aûharmazd, and the sweetness in water and plants for the nourishment of cattle, so that he is privileged to feed and keep cattle who gives them pasture in reality, and is also diligent in the production of cattle, that is, he gives them pasture, and is thereby proclaimed a cattle-guardian (pasûs-haûrvō) for them who makes the cattle fully develope⁴ ; and also he who gives the wicked Wrath, the foreigner, a beating, so that he may make him stupefied¹.

 10. The development of cattle by Aûharmazd, advice to mankind as to moderate eating², and the grievous bridge judgment of him who has unlawfully produced distress for the cattle whom Gôš-aûrvan is kindly regarding, with loving eyes³, in the spiritual existence, in bodily contact with (ham-kerpö-î) the arch-angels and in bodily contact with the light of the sun, so that her hands are more powerful; she who replies to the sacred beings, and the sacred beings reply to her⁴.

11. About the statements of Aûharmazd there is this, too, that is: 'I am a calculator of those words⁵ by which they assert that the existence of worldly beings is for the sake of that of both existences; I am aware of the actions which are practised by those in the material existence, both demons and men; of whatever they practise⁶ I am the decider and lord, and it is such as my will *requires*⁷, even for the last change of existence; and I look upon all that with that wisdom and sagacity of mine which was, which is, and which ever will be.'

12. The formation of a reward for worldly beings by Aûharmazd, through the propitious liturgy (mânsarspend)⁸ which has become the precursor of the beneficers; that is, their high-priest, who has

14. Righteousness is perfect excellence.

CHAPTER XXX.

Varstmânsar Nask.

1. The seventh fargard, *Ad-tâ-vakhshyâ*², is regarding the maintenance of the worship and obeisance of the religion and the spirit of the liturgy; and this, too, that the spirit of the ceremonial of him who is a right-thinking, intelligent, and wise³ man is quickly mixed up with the light of the sun, and connected with the accomplishment of the wishes and the joy of the archangels.

2. About the choice of will by mankind, and the existence of a way to reward through their decision.

3. About advice to mankind as to seeking that position in which it is possible to remain long with fondness, and as to reciting and teaching⁴ the revelation of the sacred beings.

4. And, from the statement of Zaratûst, about the shouting of the demon Aresh⁵ to mankind, thus:

'Aûharmazd and Aharman have been two brothers in one womb¹, and out of them the archangel² liked that which is evil³, through what occurs when the understanders of it have mentioned the worship of the demons and this, that, after it, you should present cattle to the planetary bodies and the demons.'

5. About the falsity of the demon Aresh, the separate origin of light and darkness, the goodness of the material existence of light for determining what is done, and the evil of that of darkness.

6. The grumbling of the evil spirit thus: 'I am he whose thoughts are evil, O beneficent spirit! he whose words are evil, and he whose deeds are evil⁴; what is dark is my garment which is very thick, with lower corners where, so far as many go, it is still darker⁵; evil thoughts, evil words, and evil deeds are my food, and I love those of them who are in that place through evil thoughts, evil words, and evil deeds.' 7. And the speaking of Aûharmazd thus: 'I am he whose thoughts are good, O evil spirit! he whose words are good, and he whose deeds are good⁶; the sky is my garment, which was first produced from that substance of the worldly existences which is created as the stone above all stones⁷, that is, every jewel is set in it; good thoughts, good words, and good deeds are my food, and I love those of them who are in that place through good thoughts, good words, and good deeds.'

8.* This, too, that true discrimination is not for them, the demons¹ astute in evil; and they never truly discriminate whose will is that of Akôman².

9. And about the sickening (vîmârinîdanö) of the patron spirits of mankind, by the demons³, through the deceit of man towards man owing to the deceit of the demons; and the approach of mankind to evil proceedings on the part of the spiritual lordship, through those patron spirits⁴.

10. Also the sending of monarchy and the wisdom of religion, by Aûharmazd, for the preservation of the creatures; the recurrence of the mission⁵ whereby there are injury and affliction for the demons and sovereignty again for Aûharmazd, and they possess the reward of Vohûman⁶ and what is required by the sacred beings; and the predominance of man over demon, in the end, the good over the evil, and the righteous over the wicked; also about the nature of those who are producing the renovation of the universe. 11. This, too, that is a declaration: 'They are those, O Zaratûst the Spîtâmân! who shall produce the renovation, they have escaped (girekhtö) among the existences, they are vigilant¹ in seeking righteousness, and gentle-voiced; and, as regards righteousness in thought, they convert into righteousness anything virtuous which belongs to them.' 12. About the statement of those praised it is recited that it is thus mentioned in the Gâthas: 'So we are with those who are thine—that is, we are thine own—by us this renovation is to be produced in the existences².' 13. About the perpetual convocation held by the archangel regarding the production of the future existence³.

14. This, too, that he is an extender of the days of those who defeat the army of the fiend⁴ and clothe themselves with deeds of shining light, and also those of a virtuous body, who are these: the priest, the warrior, the husbandman, and the man who is a ruler; with whom are Aharîsvang⁵ and the spirit of liberality (râdîh)⁶; they meditate with good thoughts (hû-mînisnîh)⁷ and joy, and, with pleasure to themselves, they give the world into the guardianship of Aûharmazd, and also of Ashavahist⁸, when they possess the religion of Aûharmazd as a ruler. 15. This, too, that he, whose thoughts are through a high-priest who possesses a patron spirit, always thinks that which is virtuous, and his sagacity increases⁹.

16. And about advice to mankind as to three things, through which the renovation and happy progress of the creatures arise, namely, seeking the

CHAPTER XXXI.

Varstmânsar Nask.

1. The eighth fargard, Tâ-ve-urvâtâ¹, is about advice as to reciting² the revelation, the information therefrom for the faithful, about which they have to report to the unfaithful, by mentioning conspicuous specimens and explanatory knowledge, and by thinking of anything whatever which they have to accept, or even which they have not to accept³; also, for one called to the religion, the advantage owing to the attraction of mankind to the numerous actual discipleship of the religion, and the increasing greatness materially, and further reward spiritually, owing to the numerous discipleship; and the progress of the religion of Aûharmazd even among the irreligious (adênôân)⁴ and actual apostates⁵.

2. This, too, that the life of the creatures of Aûharmazd and also all other benefit are owing to Aûharmazd⁶ and the inclination (kâmvarikakô) of Aûharmazd thereto; moreover, reward and recompense come from Aûharmazd. 3. And the creatures of Aharman proceed from Aharman, all misery is owing to Aharman, and Aharman becomes worse and more oppressive and a further producer of misery when they worship him.

Zaratûst and the reply of Zaratûst as to the advice of Aûharmazd and whatever is on the same subject, just as revelation (dênô) states it, that the demon Aresh spoke to him thus: 'Then the Franâmam¹, O Zaratûst! is applicable to the assembly of demons who sit in the same place three nights and four days on account of thee.' 7. Zaratûst enquired of him thus: 'O Aresh, thou most deceitful to me! what recompense would there be for it to me, if I should worship you in words?' 8. And Aresh, the most deceitful of demons, spoke to him thus: 'Thou wouldst become predominant among mankind, through producing at will among the existences just as is requisite for thyself; and thou wouldst become immortal, O Spîtâmân!' 9. Zaratûst also enquired of him thus: 'O Aresh, most deceitful of demons! as to the people by whom you are worshipped, whether for the birth of a son, or even for a concubine sought for enjoyment, so that the favour is considered by them as your property, how can any one of them be immortal?' 10. And Aresh, the most deceitful of demons, could not tell him who had the more intelligence. 11. So Zaratûst spoke thus: 'I am for that being and I like him, that is, I am his own and would transact his affairs, and I will recite the law and the benedictions of the sagacious Aûharmazd, the gratifier of desires.'

12. About the deliverance of all creatures through the liturgy ¹, and, so long as it is continued by them, it is for the power through which the immortality of the separate creations is prepared in the renovation of the universe; the increase of the good creatures through the complete continuance of the liturgy, and the existence of purity and development of goodness in the world when he who is a good ruler arrives.

13. The arising of the spiritual creation, the first thought of Aûharmazd; and, as to the creatures of Aûharmazd, first the spiritual achievement, and then the material formation and the mingling of spirit with matter; [the advancement of the creatures thereby, through his wisdom and the righteousness of Vohûman being lodged ² in the creatures,] and all good creatures being goaded (zakhamî-hastanô) thereby into purity and joyfulness. 14. This, too, that a complete understanding of things arises through Vohûman having made a home in one's reason (vârôm).

15. About the great reward of him who shall produce benefit for cattle ³; also the deceitfully and seductively assuming of religion and colouring of thought, talking of righteousness and adopting evil practices, through the recitation of righteousness even hypocritically (davânsîh â-k); and an instance of the reward of an undutiful (avar'zîdâr) apos-

About the work of the creator; and, for the completion thereof, the most eminent is understood to be when the world and religion were formed² by him, when life was given by him to those possessing bodies³, and⁴ he provides instruction and employment⁵ for it, and when spiritual life (h û k ö)⁶ was given by him to the wishful man, so that he may more fully appropriate a share of the worldly and spiritual existences.

17. He who makes complete mindfulness⁷ lodge in his body consults complete mindfulness, and⁸, through the much investigation of his spiritual life (ah v ö) and mind into the attraction of both spirits—that which is good and also that which is evil—each separately for its own appliances, and into the duties of the religion of Aûharmazd, is explaining the inefficiency of mankind, as regards the dissipation of their sin, because Aûharmazd is aware of all they practise, that which is public and that, too, which is concealed⁹. 18. CHAPTER XXXII.

Varstmânsar Nask.

1. The ninth fargard, *Hvaêtumaiti*¹, is about the coming of three deceitful demons, and their making supplication (lâgak-karîh) to Aûharmazd², so that he should consider and reward those aggrieved by him, and it would amount to strength for them in destroying the creatures. 2. The disgorging (akhvârdanô) of supplication by those demons clamorously upwards from an abyss, and the statement of one that *he is*³ the kindred that is undeceitful, of another one that he is the serfdom that is undeceitful, and of the third one that he is the confederacy that is undeceitful, was in these words, namely: 'We are those spirits when the kinsman, confederate, and serf² do not break promises, one with the other; we are not really these that are no implements of thine, but our religion and law are thine, and we do thy will; we become assistants of him who is thy friend, and injurers of him who is thy enemy⁴; and from thee we beg a position in the existence that is best, the reward that is a reward of the worthy.'

3. The reply of Aûharmazd to them was thus: 'You rush out, astute in evil, to the extremity (bûn) of that horrible gloom⁵; so you are all from the demon, your race is really from Evil Thought, that is, your race is from there where Evil Thought¹, as well as Lust the destroyer and also Greed the well-accumulating, resides, and where, moreover, Îndar the fighter is the spirit of the religion of apostasy and further deceives the worldly existence of mankind, as to proper living and immortal progress², and first confines their thoughts. 4. He shall first do this, so that he may restrain the thoughts of men from virtuous things³, and their further words and perverted further deeds from the ceremonial of us who are archangels; they further lose their wisdom⁴, and further consider even as perfect righteousness that which is loved by the demons; they utter the false words and consecrate with the worse deeds of mankind; and with the holy-water which one consecrates most to you, more falsely and more arrogantly⁵ than that falsity and arrogance, do they enhance the greatest ceremonial, so that they shall make more of the most. 5. Owing to discord, through that love of you who are demons, they smite with destruction him who shall not be a satisfaction to you in the presidency; and the leader they take (girênd) becomes a destroyer, so in the sequel, too, there is some one that smites him; even though they

¹ See Pahl. Yas. XXXII, 3 a. For the demons here mentioned, Akômanô, Varenô, and Âzô, see Bk. VIII, Chaps. IX, 3, XXXI, 44; Îndar is the same as Andar (in Chap. IX, 1), the arch-demon who perverts from virtue and despises the sacred shirt and girdle (Bd. I, 27, XXVIII, 8). With reference to the good old schism-hypothesis, that identified the Av. daêva Indra, or Andra, with the Sans. deva Indra, it is worthy of note that he is here represented as the pervading spirit of an apostate religion, and is termed the kûshîdâr, 'fighter, slayer.'

You are evil demons for a congregation when they speak of avoiding you, and worse for the ceremonial, or obeisance, when it occurs; that which becomes all clearness to the utterer of righteousness, in this existence, you utterly destroy; and the lodgment of complete mindfulness in the body is for admonition to human beings about abstaining from the demons.'

7. This, too, is stated, namely: 'Evil are you who are wicked and worship the demons with good holy-water and with words; through them the holy-water obtains evil recompense, even the hell that is horrible.' 8. This, too, he spoke, namely: 'Concerning those malicious demons¹ I will first mention intelligibly to thee when they have come to the world, that is, first when they have rushed in, how their jurisdiction arose. 9. For thirty centuries² those of my world were immortal and undecaying, O Zarātūst! but when the thirtieth century was accomplished³, O Spītāmān! the sweat (khvâe) produced by the demons then came on to my Gâyômarđ⁴, for his affliction, so long a time as a man speaks forth these words of the Yathâ-ahû-vairyô⁵, relating to the spiritual lord and priestly master. 10. 11. About the harm owing to the demons this, too, he spoke, namely: 'The destructiveness of the evil spirit is his evil teaching by statements³ to my creatures; and my riches (îstô) plundered by him are the proportion of the production and possession of wealth for which a desire exists through Good Thought; that is, when they possess it with propriety it is desirable⁴. 12. And mankind were gratified by that son of Vîvanghau who was Yim⁵, and cattle were gratified by him, producing thus the phrase "you are mankind" in words, O Zaratûst! when he spoke to mankind thus: "You are the mankind for cattle, that is, you who are mankind eat meat of your own subdivision, and through subdivision by you there is a superabundant occurrence of meat⁶; you are mankind, neither for Greed (âzô), nor for Envy (arêshkô)⁷, do thou throw away the warm entrails (taftôg rûdîk), nor do thou throw them away warm on account of custom (pîsakô), now you slay for slaughtering, so that thus it may be beneficial for you and your servant."'

14. About the harm owing to the demons this, too, is stated, namely: 'Their accomplishment of arrogance over these creatures of mine, and also the unfitness for heaven (avahistîh-iĕ) of a righteous man, and that, too, of a valiant one, are due to the burial of a corpse.' 15. This, too, namely: 'They who drag away a corpse⁴ are most hurtful for men, as regards the wealth of the religion in this world, and as regards sheep and beasts of burden.' 16. ⁴ If these centuries are dated from 'the coming of the religion,' according to the incorrect Arabian chronology of the Bundahis, they extended from A.D. 393 or 435 to 593 or 635 (see Byt. III, 11 n). In the ninth century lived king Yazdakard (A.D. 399-420), surnamed 'the sinner' by the priesthood because he tolerated other religions, and the heretic Mazdak who was put to death in A.D. 528. In the tenth century the Muhammadan religion arose, and the Sasanian dynasty tottered to its fall. If it were not for the manifest errors in the Bundahis chronology, this passage in our text might be important for fixing the age of the Pahlavi version of this Nask.

They also produce destruction for these of mine, and speak of the living state, to these of my religion, thus: "When living is an expediency it is in our way;" they are wicked, they dwindle through greatness and even terror, that is, they shall commit sin through leadership and vassalage¹ who are smiting thee, and they speak folly who are smiting this pure religion of thine, O Spîtâmân!

20. 'They, too, who recite this thy revelation of the Mazda-worshippers, say that the distinction (nîsôn) of those others from those who are thine, even those whom they hurt, is this, that they plunder, they also think scornfully of this thy ceremonial, and think scornfully of the obeisances (nîyâyisnō) and of both those blessings from me, the Avesta and Zand which I, who am the most propitious of spirits, spoke forth to thee. 21. They also injure the ceremonial of him who is perfectly righteous², even the obeisance arisen from a disciple of Zaratûst the Spîtâmân; and they chant that which is a settled effusion (barâ-hankhetûntô rêgîh) that is very evil, as a perfect deed for mankind³, which those of very evil deeds call joy⁴.'

22. 'They seek sovereignty as a devouring (grehmakö), that is, they seek privilege for a bribe, and in their abode is he who is very evil in thought, that is, they seek with this design, that, for the hundred which another gives up, they may take two hundred away from the other¹; they destroy the best existence², they destroy their own souls, and they destroy the world of material beings.

23. Then they who are privileged shall convey that sovereignty of the Kík and Karap³, even those that are the worst-ruling who are in the country, unto him who is best-ruling in house, village, community, and province; and then both shall keep up an uproar, he who is well-ruling and also he who is ill-ruling, and he who is ill-ruling is beaten, and he is delivered up to the best-ruling ruler. 24. And then, among them, he who seeks for a devouring (grehmakö) of all that which is animate, as well as that which is inanimate, is he who is desirous of assault and complaint; and he who fears him who is a righteous man of mine allots him comfort, and is he who watches those who are an exposition of righteousness⁴, and who would be wizards or witches, so that the authorities shall inflict punishment upon them.'

² In the great ceremonies of ancient times the Hâvanân appears to have been the priest who attended to the Hôm-mortar, and his position was near the north-west corner of the ceremonial area; the Âtarevakhsh was the priest who fed the fire, and his position was near the south-west corner; the Frabardâr was the priest who brought the necessary utensils, and his position was near the north-east corner; and the Srôshâvar'z was the priest who kept general order, his position being at the south end, facing the Zôti at the north end. Besides these five priests, mentioned in our text, there were three others enumerated in Vîsp. III, 1; Vend. V, 58, VII, 17, 18, the water-bringer near the south-east corner, the washer on the west side, and the cleanser on the east side. In modern times the Zôti retains his ancient duties of chief priest, while the Râspî (Bk. VIII, Chap. VII, 5, 9) combines the duties of the seven others, being called by the Zôti (in Vîsp. III, 1) to take the place of each of them in succession.

6. This, too, is said, namely: 'Let no one practise ill-perpetrated deeds, even though in a wilderness when far from publicity, nor in distress, O Spîtâ-mân! because Aûharmazd, the observer of everything, is aware of them; and the rule is that just as any one whatever of the embodied existence thinks, speaks, and practises, so great is his punishment.'

7. And this, too, that the best ceremonial and obeisance¹ are the ceremonial and obeisance of a righteous man.

8. About begging for life and receiving it, there is this, that it is customarily due to two methods (babâ): one, through leadership of righteousness², is that through which it is evident that it is owing to virtuousness; and one, through service of righteousness², is that which is not an evidence that it is owing to viciousness. 9. About the case where virtuousness is producing authority over truth, and truth over the tongue, so that thou speakest words through the will of Aûharmazd. 10. And this, too, is said, namely: 'I am the propitious spirit who was at first and ever will be, and am not really deceived by anything.'

11. About fire being given by Aûharmazd for shelter and assistance by the protection of mankind; its maintenance and assistance by mankind; and the openheartedness of the spirit of fire for him who shall perform obeisance to it, and for him who is to perform obeisance to it³. 12. occurs through fire; and one prays for it for the sake of the requirements which mankind acquired from the sacred beings. 13. This, too, is said, namely: 'Since thou art thus, O Zaratûst! most propitiatory, that is, able to perform most for our pleasure, we are more promptly coming than Mânûskêhar was able to come, when thou beggest of us who are archangels, *O Zaratûst!*¹'

14. About Aûharmazd's exhibiting the creatures in the future existence to Zaratûst. 15. And this, too, namely, the all-brilliance of the earth, the all-brilliance of the cattle, the all-brilliance of the plants, and the all-brilliance of every excellence² which is a manifestation of righteousness. 16. About the worshipping of Aûharmazd by worshippers, through advancing³ in the religion of Aûharmazd's covenant (padmânô), which gave the world his righteousness; also the good protectiveness of his rule, and of the greatness therein, is owing to it⁴, and the name of the ruler is Wisdom⁵; likewise his ceremonial—performed while the creations owing to him live, when possessing bodies and possessing life⁶—is a benefit to all the worldly and spiritual existences.

17. And this, too, is said, namely: 'Thou art our own⁷, and also our confederate, O Spîtâmân! likewise unto us thou comest with the reverence that is good⁸; thine, O Zaratûst! are the greatness and completeness in performance⁹, so that they

18. Zaratûst begged of Aûharmazd thus: 'Give unto me him who becomes a disciple of men³ of the mighty through meditation for the religion, of them who shall produce the actual progress of this my religion of the Mazda-worshippers, and who will also explain the good practices to this one of mine, even the blessings set forth by me in the benedictions they possess.' 19. And Aûharmazd spoke thus: 'I will give unto thee him who becomes a disciple of other men of the mighty; they are thy kinsmen and those confederates of theirs, and thine are their companions and their serfs⁴, who produce the progress of this thy religion of the Mazda-worshippers. 20. Mostly thine, O Zaratûst! are their worship and their homage; and, through their ceremonial and obeisance, the liberality of him who is worshipped is given to thee, and righteousness for the soul is with thee; also thy life exists owing to us, and likewise thy body⁵, O Zaratûst! 21. Forth to thee will I, who am the creator Aûharmazd, come in both existences⁶, as assistance; thou becomest worthy, O Zaratûst! through Khûrdad and Âmûrdad⁷, both of them, and through the gratification of

23. And Aûharmazd spoke thus: 'Thou becomest an applicant and powerful in the embodied existence.'

24. Zaratûst spoke thus: 'Be thou a gratification to us in the slow progress of life, thou most beneficent (hû-dahâktûm) of existences! that is, thou shouldst give to us².'

g. About the religion becoming progressive¹ in every one, through its renovation of the universe and its future existence, there is this, too, namely: 'This thy religion of Zaratûst is the width of the world, and righteousness is the best of religions; this thy religion of Zaratûst is the improvement of the world, which is first supplied by righteousness and complete mindfulness in the reason (vârôm) of those who recite this thy revelation (dênô)² of the Mazda-worshippers, O Zaratûst! this thy good religion is the best which it is possible to provide with righteousness for one's own. h. Thou shouldst proclaim this to kinsmen and confederates, to priests and him who is most active in the country; as to those who will dispute³ this thy religion of the Mazda-worshippers, thou shouldst proclaim this over the earth of seven regions, unto that which is the furthest of houses, villages, communities, and provinces: "Do thou openly curse⁴ these who are heretical towards me, thou united Mazda-worship of Zaratûst, opposed to the demons, which is the ordinance of Aûharmazd⁵!"'

l. About being despised in hell; the wicked are scornful to a wicked one, and to the spirits apart from the wicked; and it is the creator who, even after saving the others from hell, and the three nights stewing in hell², is to cause the preservation of them also—after those three nights—from that misery, and every one attains to happiness. m. This, too, that Zaratûst enquired of Aûharmazd thus: 'How have the ignorant demons, O Aûharmazd! ever been good rulers³? How do they think of them in the world thus, that their happiness arose from them?' n. And Aûharmazd spoke thus: 'They have been demons, O Zaratûst! and evil-ruling; not well-ruling, even for a reward, do they produce the work of righteousness⁴.'

1. The fifteenth fargard, *Ad-fravakhshyâ*¹, is about the seven² perfections of the admonitions of the religion. 2. First, association with the beneficent spirit of the creator, through hearing³, learning, and practising his religion; and this, too, that thereby arises the preservation of the good creation when the destroyer is separated (vangîd). 3. Second, about separation from the destructive evil spirit⁴, and the contempt which is due to his arrogance and falsehood, the chief of all his vice. 4. Third, governing the temper⁵ by good thoughts, good words, and good deeds; and this, that, whoever of you does not so use this liturgy as thought and word⁶, they will not allot him light, they will not allot him the best existence, and he is miserable up to the last⁷. 5. Fourth, about the perfection of the nature of next-of-kin marriage⁸, which is when it is a giving of one's own (khûdîh-dahisnîh); and the decision

Fifth, about providing and maintaining the high-priests³ who are provided with a spiritual lord and possessing priestly instruction; the listening of his authorities of every kind to Aûharmazd, and the reward of the beneficent good works⁴ of the high-priesthood, are authority for Aûharmazd; and the reward of the good works of the high-priesthood is their relation to the best existence. 8. And this, too, namely: ‘Thou art aware of the gratification of desire ⁵ by us who are archangels, and which we give for the gratification that thou bringest forth (zihih); we also give thee the liberty which a friend gives to him who is a friend ⁵.’

6. About what occurs in future ages ⁶: the experienced (arvandân) who are beneficial through teaching and practising wisdom ⁷, and the thirst of youths is increased by them; by the assistance of complete mindfulness they improve the world of righteousness and produce distress for the fiend; and the advantage due to virtue extends to them ⁸.

Through the opposing arrival of *Srôsh*², the righteous, the ruler is in vexation with that person; that ruler who is a protection of these others through good emanation³—not through evil living—and at every time a distresser of the wicked⁴.

20. And here, too, about the praise of the family of the Fryânaks² it speaks thus: 'Righteousness comes up, O Spîtâmân! from the descendants and posterity of Tûrân; when extracted by the Fryânaks it is stated³ just as though it were by Tûrân; through the assistance of complete mindfulness they develope the world⁴ of righteousness and produce distress for the fiend; they likewise think about it with Good Thought, O Zaratûst! and thou shouldst bring forth (zâyêš) their gratification⁵ from us, who are archangels, by words, that is, do thou demand it.'

This, too, that as to him who has to act with the freedom from effort (apêsitûnagîh) of righteousness² and owing to it, for the good works done by him the gift is good. 29. This, too, that whoever seeks by good works, and seeks good works by innocence, obtains freedom from harm (a-nâsih); and whoever is liberal to the sacred beings³ is free from destruction (a-nasînisnô), owing to the liberality of the sacred beings. 30. And this, too, namely: 'These are the rewards I am aware of⁴, which have been, which still are, and which ever will be.'

CHAPTER XL.

Varstmânsar Nask.

1. The seventeenth fargard, Spentâ-mainyû⁵, is about this, that Aûharmazd produced the creatures through wisdom, and maintains them in truth. 2. This, too, that the best thing⁶ for every one is thought in a high-priest who is the tongue of a spiritual lord⁷; in a high-priest, who has to maintain thought, no appliances of the body are to lie unto the spiritual lord on account of affection for the worldly existence. 3. Also that the spiritual lord is always true; of the tongue—when he (the priest) speaks falsehood with the tongue—are those words which he does not believe through the spiritual lord, and it is owing to this, too, when, of all the body, the tongue first dies. 4. 'I say unto thee, O Spîtamân! that thou shouldst speak with the tongue just as thou thinkest with the mind, and thou shouldst accomplish work with both hands in complete mindfulness¹.' 5. And this, too, that he who shall act thus is sagacious, and he is the father of righteousness through wisdom²; and whoever would do that which has happened, thoroughly observes it on account of that which has not happened. 6. Also this, that in the person of him who shall do that which he understands, and asks again about that which he does not understand, the propitious spirit of wisdom is lodging.

7. About cattle being produced for the assistance of mankind, and the pastures of pleasure for the assistance of cattle³. 8. This, too, that the arch-angels injure the evil demon and wicked people, but they do not injure righteous people⁴ and the sage. 9. This, too, is said, namely: 'In scanty opulence do not murmur (aḷ mang) owing to good works⁵, and thus in great opulence much good work arises.' 10. This, too, that beneficence gives all to the good, and it is no further the villain whom the sacred beings maintain⁶.

Varstmânsar Nask.

1. The eighteenth fargard, Yêzî², is about the existence of certain and doubtful evidence and indication as to the future existence³ arising. 2. About the great dignity of the spirit of good works, and that also of the person doing good works through the lodgment of that spirit in him. 3. This, too, that they praise, recount, and practise the religion of Mazda-worship at the time of the renovation of the universe, that of which the demons through deceitfulness, and then also wicked mankind deceived by those who are demons, have said that it does not occur ⁴.

4. About the triumph of the sacred beings over the demons at the end of various periods. 5. First, that which occurs when, on account of the preservation of mankind from hell, they praise the religion of Mazda-worship; and that which occurs when Zaratûst the Spîtâmân, whose guardian spirit is revered, came to the obedient king Kai-Vistâsp¹. 6. Second, when the power and triumph of renewed sovereignty are again connected with the religion, and mankind, on that account, return to the good religion; and this occurs on the near approach of Aushêdar², son of Zaratûst, when the righteous Kitrag-miyân³ arrives. 7. Third, when mankind contentedly praise the religion of the Mazda-worshippers, and this occurs as Aûshêdar-mâh⁴, son of Zaratûst, arrives. 8. And fourth, that which occurs when every one shall practise the religion of Mazda-worship with eagerness; at that time arrives the beneficial and triumphant producer of the renovation, Sôshâns⁵, son of Zaratûst; and this becomes the consummation (sar-hômôndîh) and supreme triumph of the sacred beings.

12. About mankind attaining to the wisdom of an angel (yêdatô dânôgîh)² through the grades of intellect, ability, and religion. 13. This, too, is said, namely: 'It is for that way when mankind cause disturbance (siklinênd) of that which is a vile religion for want of a way, when even this is produced from among the creatures, in which is the opening of a passage for mankind to him, where the Holy spirit is dwelling and making thee surrender, and account of the stupefying Akômanô³.' 14. This, too, that, through the sovereignty of sagacity, every man at last arrives at that way. 15. And this, too, that by him, who shall persistently perform good works or sin with fearlessness, it is to be hereupon considered that his performance is mindful⁴, and that the best thing for mankind, after birth, is purification from sin⁵.

16. This, too, that the food and maintenance of priests depend upon the husbandmen⁶. 17. This, too, that coveted is now the pleasure and strength of mankind due to the cattle of Khûrdad and

About the oppressiveness of Wrath and Envy, and the destruction of both through complete mindfulness and possession of Good Thought². 19. And this is said, namely: 'I made the religion of righteousness a combining desire (vôyak-i hām-dahisnō³), and all mankind's own selves are to be forced into that desire; also its involuntary seeking of immortality is the reign of the will of all mankind, and advantage always arises from it⁴.' 20. This, too, that the care of cattle is reverence of Aûharmazd⁵.

21. About the progress⁶ of righteousness there is this, too, that that greatness⁶ is generated therefrom, and its seekers—who are human beings—have demanded the supreme predominance in the best existence. 22. About the praise of the period of the renovation of the universe there is this, too, that, at that time, those who are doubtful about it are all disclosed to publicity⁷; also the last reward and bridge judgment of the worthy. 23. About the lawfulness of that which occurs through the destruction by Vohûman⁸, who is himself the spiritual lord of the arrangement, there is this, too, that the wicked,

About the destruction of the good works of the wicked, also that of their own souls, that of their spiritual existences, and that of their material bodies¹. 25. And this, too, that at the time of the renovation of the universe occurs the approach of the wisdom of our sovereignty to that of the best of mankind, and that glory is put on by it through which the destruction of the bad and the development of the good arise; also the sagacity which exists in Vohûman extends to those who are its friends².

26. This, too, that there are those who are extenders of the days, and they are beneficial in the country³; and their custom, where they have arisen, is an opponent of him who is a wrathful person⁴. 27. And this, too, that they shall thereupon excite (lâlâ vadîdûnâñd) a brother and sister with mutual desire, so that they shall form a next-of-kin marriage with unanimity; and before midday they generate a sublime radiance, centred in the face, and trembling passion⁵, and they make the radiance grow up, openly manifest, to an altitude of the height of three spears of the length of three reeds each⁶; and

LXII) and just before the beginning of the Âbân Nyâyis (Yas. LXV), during the recital of Yas. LXIV which chiefly consists of a repetition of §§ 6-11 of this Gâthic hâ (Yas. L=XLIX of the Pahlavi version). These proceedings are detailed in the rubrics, partially in J₂ and more fully in Pt₄, Mf₄, as follows:—After reciting Av. Yas. L, 7 d 'the Barsôm (Av. bares-man, see Bk. VIII, Chap. XLIV, 65 n) is to be taken up from the Mâh-rû,' or crescent-topped Barsôm-stand, 'and one step is to be set forth in the direction of the Frabardâr' (the imaginary assistant priest whose station is near the north-east corner of the ceremonial area, or to the left of the Zôti, see Chap. And this, too, is said, that there arises therefrom a conception (ham-giriftârih), by him whose disposition and character are sagacious¹, also as to the adaptation of his own deeds to that nature of his. 10. And about the good affinity of Zaratûst, even for abundance of good works, there is this, too, namely: 'So, for all those deeds which thou hast to accomplish, and which are also accomplished, there is reward for thee through their righteousness, O Zaratûst!'

11. And about the advice to Zaratûst there is this, too, namely: 'Thou hast to become reverent to them², so that mankind may become reverent to thee.'

12. About considering the time of the days and nights as all for good accumulation in good works there is this, too, that whoever is diligent and always doing good works, and that whoever shall perform as many good works as is possible for him, is given as much reward³ as is his desire.

20. About the abounding of Zarātūst in complete mindfulness of the origin of learning, and its development by him⁴; both the object and the advantage of knowledge—which is the reigning of Vohūman in the body—being the means of developing the world in righteousness⁵. 21. About the perfection of the ceremonial⁶ and obeisance of Zarātūst, and the superiority⁷ of his recompense⁸; also advice to him as to worshipping Aūharmazd pre-eminently, and the primeval angels by their own names⁹ according to their greatness.

22. It is the excellence of righteousness that is perfect.

About the glory of a family of some houses that has come to the Spitâmas¹, even before the coming of Zaratûst; the knowledge and habit of organization and priestly authority of those arising from that family; the existence therein of houses, villages, communities, and districts; its attracting and exalting mankind, from vice to virtue, by propriety of words and actions; and it convinces those of the world even till the arrival of the good religion. 3. And this, too, that the existence of Kaî-Vistâsp—that desire of Zaratûst²—and of Frashôstar of the Hvôbas³, is owing to it.

4. About the praise of Pôrûkâst⁴, daughter of Zaratûst, for loving the good religion with wisdom and acting by the advice of the religion, having given herself contentedly in womanly service (zanôih) to Zaratûst⁵; her complete accomplishment

² Perhaps we ought to read 'the Spitâma Zaratûst,' substituting Spitâmak for kâmak, 'desire,' which latter word is written on a patch by the repairer of the MS. who must have found the original word defective. See Pahl. Yas. LII, 2 c.

And if zanôih means merely 'womanly service' here, its Zvâris equivalent nêsmânîh, applied to the seven sisters of Ardâ Vîrâf in AV. II, 10, may also not imply marriage, which is a view already suggested in S. B. E., vol. xviii, p. 398 n.

CHAPTER XLVII.

Bakō Nask.

1. Propitiation for the creator Aûharmazd and all angels.

2. The first of the twenty-two fargard's of the Bakō¹ is the Ahunavair² of the Bakân³, about the production by Aûharmazd, before every creation apart from the archangel⁴, and on the solicitation of ¹ The third of the Nasks and fourth of the Gâthic division (see Bk. VIII, Chap. I, 9, 12). It is an analytical commentary upon the Gâthas and the texts associated with them in the two preceding Nasks, devoting a separate fargard to each hâ, and selecting very short phrases, or portions (Av. bagha), for explanation and comment; so short that it is usually difficult to identify them in their Pahlavi disguise. The first three fargard's are still extant in Yas. XIX–XXI, and a translation of their Pahlavi versions will be found in the Nask Fragments at the end of this volume; but whether the Pahlavi versions, consulted by the writer of the Dînkard, were identical with those in the present Yasna is uncertain.

² The name of the Yathâ-ahû-vairyô formula (see Bk. VIII, Chap. I, 7). This fargard is still extant in Yas. XIX.

³ That is, 'of the apportionments,' or 'of those analyzed.'

the archangel, of the form of words (rastakō mi-layâ) which is the innermost and most comprehensive encompassment (parvand) and best-congregated embodiment (vêh-ramaktûm kerpō) of the intelligent omniscience of the religion¹.

3. The divisions of this germ of germs, and the origin of the other primitive sayings of the good religion, are the divisibility of the portions (bakō) of the Ahunavair. 4. The Ahû of the Ahû-vairyô of the Ahunavair is the first creature² which, as regards the first, is specially that creature which is really derived from the creator Aûharmazd, and its adaptation is owing to mankind. 5. The thought (mit)³ that exists with the first is with the word that is Vairyô, his 'will,' which is in the second created existence (dâmîh), which, as regards the first, is specially the primitive secondary state (dadî-garîh) of those who are specially characterised by it, who exist as it were with that character, and have become, in that way, in association with the second creature. 6. The conjunction of the first creature—whose origin (yehevûnîsnō), which is the liturgy, is a co-existence whose origin had occurred—is the source for the saying; and the distribution of the portions thereof is the whole saying of a liturgical kind; also its name is Yathâ-ahû-vairyô, the spirit through which it is set going is the lore of the religion, needful among the creatures, the creations arose through wisdom for that purpose, and they, too, were produced on the solicitation of

7. And this, too, about the same words, that the statement is the best-worded which is spoken, or to be spoken²; and the obscurity is not about the sound of the word-elements, but about the manifold nature of the actual meaning (kabedih-i sang-i kô), which is the character of the statement, in the words of the epitome. 8. This, too, that mankind guard the soul from hell by learning, reciting, and practising it, and the body from death³ by likewise perpetually persevering therein.

9. This, too, that, as to the first apportionment of the Ahunavair, whose name is the Bakân Ahunavair, when, thoroughly accomplishing it (ava-vidâr) unanxiously (asûdakîhâ), one chants it in a ceremonial, the good work is as when one chants a hundred authorities (radîh) of the Gâthas, thoroughly accomplishing them unanxiously⁴; and when, accomplishing it (vidâr) anxiously, one chants it, such a ceremonial amounts to as much as ten *with any other authority*⁵. 10. This, too, that, through the same apportionment, while one solemnizes the summing up of the first completion⁶, which is the Stôd-yast, as it becomes the rite of one newly initiated (navak-nâpar)⁷, on that day they make the soul of the solemnizer pass three times into the supreme heaven¹.

11. About the grievous sinfulness of imperfectly accomplishing (avidâr) the Bakân Ahunavair².

12. This, too, that it is made by him in subjection to Aûharmazd, as the first creature made, who gives the body in service to him who is the ruler, and in discipleship to him who is the high-priest of the religion³; for this reason, because they are suitable for lordship and mastership in the worldly existence.

13. He who is the highest lord and master is the creator Aûharmazd, and, owing to the same reason, when it made their subjection that to the creator Aûharmazd, he has made it as the first creature made.

14. This, too, that it is taught by it to keep the body in the service of the king of kings⁴, whose origin Aûharmazd keeps in his possession; for this reason, because, when his origin is kept in the possession of Aûharmazd, Aûharmazd is over his own if a good ruler is made; him who is thus prepared, when also the worldly existence is necessary for Aûharmazd, he maintains as ruler when the creation is instructed.

15. This, too, that the reward of Vohûman is appropriated (khvêsinîdô) by him who indicates anything which is virtuous, who also utters virtuous recitation, and who likewise teaches perfect abstinence from sin to mankind⁵. 16. For this reason, because the indication of anything virtuous, the utterance of recitation wisely, and abstinence from sin are, as it were, a lodgment materially in good people owing spiritually to the archangels, Vohûman being more particularly the instigator therein; and, owing to the same reason, he in whom there is a like proficiency is of like good works with Vohûman, and adapted to the good works arises the like reward.

17. This, too, that the dominion is given to Aûharmazd by him who may perform those works, is manifest from the phrase Tād mazdâ tavâ khshathrem, &c. and its meaning, which is this: 'That, O Aûharmazd! is this dominion of thine, by which benefits (vehagânö) are given to him who is justly living and poor¹.' 18. Which is a deliverance for this reason, because Aûharmazd created no dominion for the more particular preservation of the poor and the creatures of the worldly existence from the destroyer; but, for the purpose of control over the dominion of him whose strength of rule is the cause of preservation for the poor—which is continually the wish of Aûharmazd—the dominion is given to Aûharmazd.

19. And this, too, that, through preservation from the adversary, he has assisted his poor who have preserved friendship for the Spîtâmân²; the adversity of the creatures is the advancement of religion, by supporting the religion; and a friend of the Spîtâmân becomes an assistant of the supporters of religion. 20. About the entrance (dên yâtûn-dakîh) of the destroyer of the creatures from without³, and the helplessness of the beneficent spirit owing thereto.

21. About the girding on of this saying of the religion of Aûhar¹mazd by the three degrees (pad-mân), which are good thoughts, good words, and good deeds; by the four classes, which are priesthood, warriorship, husbandry, and artisanship; and by the five chieftainships, which are house-rule, village-rule, tribe-rule, province-rule, and the supreme Zaratûstship; and the one summing up (hangerdîkîh) which is the liberality of the good ruler¹.

22. Righteousness is perfect excellence.

CHAPTER XLVIII.

Bakō Nask.

1. The second fargard is the Ashem² of the Bakân³; it is by it that perfect excellence is produced for every one who produces for any one else that which is suitable for him⁴; for this reason, because, for the sake of perfect production, there is much unprofitable production, but profitable production is suitably producing. 2. This, too, that the reward of every good work is given by it to mankind, which keeps mankind in diligence when it instructs⁵; because, as the business of all good works is that which instructs and keeps mankind in diligence, the reward of good works which mankind can appropriate by diligence is appropriated by it. 3. And this, too, that advancement is given by it to every good work¹.

4. He who is understanding good works, and yet a suppliant, has thereby made the learned foolish (âzân akhanîdînîdö); whoever possesses authority through virtuousness² is more particularly for rewarding the doers of good works; whoever, too, can make true decision³ and adjudication is more particularly for causing the bridge judgment of a criminal, and for thrusting him aside owing to the exhaustion of his good works; and whoever, too, can exercise mediation and wisdom is more particularly for the good government of the world.

5. Of righteousness the excellence is perfect.

CHAPTER XLIX.

Bakö Nask.

1. The third fargard is the Yênhê-hâtâm⁴: there is here taught by it the worship of Aûharmazd, which is the law of Aûharmazd, that is, its law is virtuous⁵. 2. This, too, that the worship of Aûharmazd is occasioned by it, which is the asking for life for beings by mankind⁵. 3. And this, too, that the ritual of the males and females of the righteous occurs through it, which is the obeisance for the archangels⁶. 4. And the atonement for crimes (vagagânō), because it is a gratification, is all for Aûharmazd personally therefrom; and in connection therewith it amounts to a gratification for Aûharmazd.

5. Here one mentions three particulars¹ which are in one's worship of Aûharmazd of every description. 6. One is when the design (dâdō) of the person is virtuous, because it is restrained by some virtuousness of thought; this is that which amounts to worship and obeisance for Aûharmazd personally. 7. One is when it teaches an asking for life for mankind, and its ordinance is the protection, nourishment, and other assistance and gratification of mankind; a friend of the primitive worldly creation of mankind produced it, and it comes into connection with the bridge judgment of mankind, for the worship and gratification of Aûharmazd. 8. And one is when one would celebrate the obeisance for the archangels, which is for the sake of strengthening the archangels, each separately, in their control of the business of preparing and managing the world; because it is declared by revelation that to worship is this, that the ceremonial may reach this bridge² in company with one (padvand), for the worship and gratification of Aûharmazd; the archangel who is to be strengthened by the ceremonial is one, and mankind are developed by the strength of the archangel.

9. Of righteousness perfect is the excellence.

CHAPTER L.

Bakō Nask.

1. Propitiation for the creator Aûharmazd, and a scornful dole for the evil spirit.

2. The fourth fargard is the Yânim-manô¹ of the Bakō, about the praise of Zaratûst, that is, his jurisdiction, invocation of blessing (yânō)², and speaking in reply were such as are declared by the sacred text. 3. This, too, that that jurisdiction of his arose before the blessing, that is, this one decision is made by him about his own, that his own person is first made deserving by him through virtue, and then virtue is prayed for by him³.

4. This, too, that he has attributed the source and result to Aûharmazd, who gives joy to Aûharmazd; for the source and result of various advantages and various joys are desirable for joy itself, as joy is the acme (rôêsman) of every happiness of him whose joy has made an offering (aûstôfrîdō) to Aûharmazd, because his decision is this, that by him whose joy arises from that thing which is the will of Aûharmazd, its source and result are attributed to Aûharmazd. 5. This, too, that the good work, which is a gratification by lawful gratifiers⁴, becomes appropriated by him who shall perform that which is truly reverent; even for this reason, because he who is a lawful gratifier of others, through true reverence, has intended to gratify through the practice of his reverence, and, when thus the gratifier of those persons, the good work of gratification by lawful gratifiers becomes appropriated. 6. This, too, that the wisdom of Vohûman¹ is advanced by him who utters a discourse through Vohûman; for this reason, because the wisdom of Vohûman and its advancement are mostly through discourse. 7. This, too, that the plentifulness and satisfaction of cattle¹ are taught by him who properly maintains the cattle which are in his possession; even for this reason, owing to the multitudes thus belonging to him who properly maintains the cattle which are in his possession, he gains his profit and pleasure therefrom, and others, who see that gain, are instructed, even as much as he, about the proper maintenance of cattle for their own profit and pleasure.

8. This, too, that benefit² being given for the benefit of the worthy man is taught by him who keeps the benefit that is his as the property of the sacred beings; even for this reason, because he gives the benefit that is his unto the worthy man for the purpose of keeping it for the advantage of the sacred beings, and others are instructed about it. 9. This, too, that prosperity³ being given, in both existences², to him who is generous and worthy is taught by him who gives benefit to a worthy man possessing body and life; even for this reason, because a worldly existence and a spiritual one are both his, also his worldly existence is in this existence, and the spiritual one in that existence wherefrom satisfaction for the giving of benefit arrives. 10. This, too, that by him who shall cause reverence⁴ of the good, even this is taught, that the sacred

beings gratify him who is practising their will ; even for this reason, because good for him, by whom the reverence is practised, becomes the reply of satisfaction, and the throne of the sacred beings is certain.

11. This, too, that he who was at first has taught even this to mankind, that supplicants¹ for the favour of the sacred beings gratify the sacred beings by being contented (padvâz) ; even for this reason, because the welcome of a sacred being, supplied by command from the religion, is a virtuousness in the world distinct from that, and the production of a course of generosity, from the sacred beings to mankind, arises really through the contentment of the favoured ; and mankind thereby become freer from doubt, and believe more in the sacred beings.

12. This, too, that his soul is delivered, or will be delivered, into the supreme heaven², who has given something to him who praises the sacred beings and the good ; even for this reason, because even through liberality as to wealth, and the production of a way to the supreme heaven, it is manifest that anything given to the praisers of the sacred beings and the good is a greater liberality. 13. This, too, that the reverence³ of those needing reverence is occasioned by him who teaches the sacred word (vâkakô) to the good ; even for this reason, because he who is a good teacher of revelation (dênô) can bring it into use for the reverence, advantage, and joy of the sacred beings and the good.

14. This, too, that acquaintance with the religion of Aûtharmazd³ is disclosed to his own by him who loves Vohûman ; even for this reason, because true knowledge arises from the discrimination of pure wisdom, and the pure attainment of the most discriminative spiritual lord (ah vō) to the mind, through the purity that constitutes the way within the mind of a spiritual lord, the purity which becomes that way through the lodgment of Vohūman there. 15. This, too, that righteousness is taught¹ by him who keeps his mind connected with righteousness; even for this reason, because his mind attains to an effort for authority, and, ridden by the effort, attains to its acquisition. 16. This, too, that by him who gives commands about the progress of the concerns of Aûharmazd, this is also taught to mankind, namely, when one sees the throne of Aûharmazd²; even for this reason, because it is possible to see that throne through the complete progress of the will of Aûharmazd in the world; and whoever gives commands about the progress of the concerns of Aûharmazd, the will of Aûharmazd is necessary in him, the progressive share of those concerns for the people of the world being shown, which is seen even through that foundation of completeness that becomes the throne of Aûharmazd for mankind.

17. This, too, that by him who welcomes Aûharmazd in *himself*³, matters only known by even a high-priest are then taught to mankind; even for this reason, because instruction and knowledge are mostly those through a high-priest, and by him who welcomes Aûharmazd in himself, a spiritual lord is then prayed for, who becomes glorious and praised for that which is to be taught, and mankind are taught by him. 18. This, too, that by any one good, who is a servant and pleaser of a good ruler, a good person may be brought forward, to him who is the ruler, for benefit¹; even for this reason, because a good man associates other good people with him in the benefit that happens to him, and his character, temper, and disposition are thus due to that; but when bringing himself forward to rulers, through reverence and gratification of the rulers, other good people may also be brought forward by him for that benefit. 19. This, too, that by him who shall virtuously make an accumulation, the way of prosperity² from the sacred beings is disclosed to his own; even for this reason, because virtuous accumulation is provided through unnumbered (apên avâđō) grants of a decider, and, when it is so, he becomes the treasurer of the sacred beings.

20. This, too, that by him who produces advantage for the archangels, the gift of him who is suitable for the sovereignty³ of the immature (khâm) world is solicited; even for this reason, because the advantage which is produced for the archangels being for the sake of his own, the advantage of the immature creation solicited—the supreme advantage of the primitive good creations—becomes a virtuous ruler. 21. This, too, that by him who is a praiser³ of an archangel, the good religion is praised; even for this reason, because the good religion is praise of the archangels, and the praise of the archangels is the good religion. 22. This, too, that the religion of the sacred beings is made progressive³ by him who shall make an offering (aûstôfriđō) to the sacred beings ; even for this reason, because making an offering to the sacred beings strengthens the upholders of religion, and the progress of religion occurs through upholders of religion.

23. This, too, that by him who shall make mankind quite zealous (gare m ôkō) for doing good works, the reward of the good works is also made liberal for mankind ; even for this reason, because the producer of the origin is also the producer of the result.

24. This, too, that above the multitude is the praise of the man who is assisting those of virtuous will, who is also the nourishment of the creatures through virtuousness, and whose accumulation is also owing to virtuousness ; even for this reason, because whoever is assisting those of virtuous will is an increaser of virtuousness in the world, whoever is the nourishment of the creatures through virtuousness is a producer of the paternity of creatures, and he whose accumulation is owing to virtuousness becomes an improver of the world. 25. This, too, that by him who assists him who is ignorant (khast), is given and taught to supplicants that which is suitable for them. 26. To assist him who is ignorant is this, such as forming the province, district, domain, and family ; maintaining the abode and house of a follower of Vistâsp (Vistâspânō), the fortress and stronghold, and the homestead (khân) of the agricultural peasant ; repairing a rugged road ; building bridges over rivers ; managing a river, aqueduct, or brook ; populating desolate places ; and doing other things, owing to which any retention (gîrift-aê) of the comfort and advantage of mankind in the world occurs. 27. And by him who shall do these things, the assistance even of him who is born afterwards, the making of that which is a very advantageous thing suitable for mankind, and also the doing of this for others, are taught.

28. This, too, that it is revealed (kâshtô) of the spiritual existence that that which is wisdom is for Aûharmazd, for him who is wisdom—that is, it teaches that acquired wisdom is for him whose innate wisdom is good—even for this reason, because the spirit, this that has come into his possession, which is acquired wisdom, is given by it to the progeny of Aûharmazd, which is innate wisdom, to increase it; and Aûharmazd is gratified thereby.

29. Of a summary about the continuance that was, the progress of the material existence, and the continuance that will be¹, there is also this:—about the continuance that was, which is the beginning, there are the essential thought and beneficent production of the good and evil material existence of its good goodness, and that of its evil vileness; about the progress of the material existence, which is intermediate, there are the dutiful doing of good works, righteousness, and having reward, the committal of crime, wickedness, and having the bridge penalty; and about the continuance that will be, which is the last, there are the government, with wisdom, of that supremely good one who is the origin of all the multitudinous creatures (vasîkân), the triumph of goodness over vileness, the admissibility of the good, the inadmissibility of the bad, and the purity of the restoration of the good creatures.

30. Of righteousness perfect is the excellence.

CHAPTER LI.

Bakō Nask.

1. The fifth fargard, Khshmaibyâ¹, is about this, that complaint is made by Gôṣ-aûrvan² that there did not exist any one who properly keeps the cattle that are in his possession; even for this reason, because cattle are increased by such, and others, through design (âhang) and a desire for that increase, act by his example and keep cattle properly; but the complaint of Gôṣ-aûrvan is that he does not exist. 2. This, too, that by him who gives orders about the advancement of the concerns of the sacred beings, the care of cattle is produced, and his soul attains to the sacred beings; even for this reason, because the care of cattle is a principal thing in the advancement of the concerns of the sacred beings, and also for the preservation of the soul. 3. This, too, that by him who keeps cattle with a controller (das-tôbar) who is a cattle-master³, even a friend of him who is the creator of cattle is taught to the cattle—the cattle-master and he who is wise in the nourishment, protection, and multiplication of cattle—even for this reason, because when his cattle are kept with a controller who is a nourisher, protector, and multiplier of cattle, the friendship of a nourisher for the nourished, of a protector for the protected, and of a multiplier for the multipliable is also exhibited by him; and the design of the creator for the creation, through affection, is that of a nourisher for the nourished, of a protector for the protected, and of a multiplier for the multipliable.

4. This, too, that by him who maintains an animal with propriety, it is presented to the sacred beings; even for this reason, because when it is maintained by him with propriety, the will of the sacred beings drives him on, and when the will of the sacred beings drives him on, it is presented by him to the sacred beings. 5. This, too, that when one shall admit the male of animals at the proper time, the mastery (sardârinîdanö) of the animal is also taught by him; even for this reason, because the admission of the male of the animals is the essential business in the multiplication of cattle, and he who is a multiplier has also taught the mastery of the animals. 6. This, too, that by him who does not slaughter an animal until it attains to full growth, the formation of a store for cattle is also taught; even for this reason, because, from the increasing cattle produced, the profit of mankind arises, and on account of the liking of mankind for profit, they persevere more fully in cultivating cattle, and provide a store for them.

7. This, too, that it is he who is the more powerful of beings—that is, strength is what is more in use by him¹—whose proceeding is for him who is his own, so that he supplies that which it is necessary to supply; even for this reason, because needful bountifulness to one's own needy ones arises through lawful thoughts, lawful thoughts are provided by expelling greed, lust, wrath, disgrace, envy, and other fiends from the body, and a man expelling a fiend from his body becomes of efficient strength. 8. This, too, that he is a very powerful person, for invocation¹, supplication, and attaining to good works, who possesses wealth for the high-priest of the priests, who shall also procure decisions and judgment always justly, and who likewise becomes humble and reverent to the good; even for this reason, because the wealth of multitudes of mankind is for maintaining the desires and pleasure of the body, for procuring decisions and judgment whereto their wishes tend, and for others becoming humble and reverent to them even when their design is vicious; but he who possesses wealth for invocation and connection with the wisdom of the religion, through the high-priest of the religion, and shall procure just decisions and judgment, and becomes humble and reverent to the good, is a putter away of that design and one who, through the putting away of that design, becomes a capable and very powerful person.

9. This, too, that every one is made to persevere at his proper duty, as to any excellent thing, by him who holds the reward of the diligent, as the sacred beings are proceeding with a pure needy one; for this reason, because the toiling of the body of a person at his proper duty is induced by a desire of reward. 10. This, too, that by him whose mouth (yông)¹ and its appliances are for virtue, the possession of Vohûman is then explained, through this mode, because the maintenance of the mouth and its appliances as virtuous becomes so, when, through protection and assistance of the good, and defeat and smiting of the vile, the reformation of the world occurs; and this, too, is so, when there is an existence of preparation of the friend of the good and the enemy of the vile, and of friendship of the good and enmity of the vile, through understanding good and evil; and the understanding of good and evil is through possession of Vohûman, and that possession of Vohûman becomes also an explainer of Vohûman.

11. This, too, that by him who gives commands about the progress of the concerns of the sacred beings, his own knowledge of every kind is also developed; even for this reason, because the command being necessary for the personal duty of the good, they also develop the knowledge of every kind for which that commanding of duty and its auspiciousness are suitable. 12. This, too, that by him who teaches the good, the good work is then appropriated which is also an assistance of Zaratûst through speaking of the religion; even for this reason, because, on account of those of the religion of Zaratûst who really constitute the renovation of the universe, the speaking connected with Zaratûst—through the teaching of the good and teachers not of the same religion—and the assistance through speaking of the religion become the good work appropriated.

13. This, too, that by him who gives anything to that person who praises the sacred beings and the good, a throne is appropriated *in yonder world*¹, even on the mention of it. 14. This, too, that by him who is teaching that which is for the propitious, the damage that is owing to want of resources² in religion is shut out of the world; even for this reason, because, owing to that, he increases the resources of religion of every kind, and the advantage therefrom, in the world. 15. This, too, that by him who is bringing him who is righteous forth to the rulers, for beneficence, the utmost assistance is then afforded; even for this reason, because an expectation of the utmost beneficence is further attached by him to the place of obtainment¹.

16. This, too, that by him who gives himself in service unto him who is the supreme king of kings, the way of good thinking², of the assistance of pleasure, and of the production of sovereignty by Aûhar³mazd is disclosed to his own; even for this reason, because the original reason of virtue is the worthiness of mankind owing to the creator and their service unto the creator, and, therefore, as he who is a well-ruling monarch is a creator in the worldly existence, and a recompensing (padô-dahâk) leader of the creatures who steadfastly give themselves in service to him, it is then given by him to the creator also; and I teach, besides, that the origin of the virtue of worthiness, which is attached by the creator to his own, is the way that is stated above, and other virtue is also disclosed to his own thereby.

17. Righteousness is excellence that is perfect.

CHAPTER LII.

Bakô Nask.

1. The sixth fargard, Ad-tâ-vakhshyâ³, is this, that by him who is a wise upholder of the dignity of a priest's leadership, the priestly assembly¹ wanted for performing religious rites (dênô) is enlarged; for this reason, because the nature of the person, whose resources are bounty for the needy, eagerly becomes a causer of exertion for the teaching (âmûkô) of accomplishments. 2. This, too, that by him whose habits are virtuous the glorification of Aûharmazd² is accomplished and taught; even on this account, for the sake of whatever advantage and pleasure are due to virtue, they, indeed, whose habits are virtuous, glorify him, moreover, who is the creator of those virtuous habits, who is Aûharmazd himself. 3. This, too, that by him who speaks virtuous words the performance even of the worship of Vohûman³ is also taught; even on this account, because of the comeliness and desirableness of virtue, the good make it an example and speak virtuous words, and virtuous speaking is the worship of Vohûman. 4. This, too, that the ceremonial which he whose way is virtuous shall accomplish becomes greater⁴ thereby; even for this reason, because the sacred beings come more particularly to the ceremonial of those of pure dispositions and virtuous ways, and accept it.

5. This, too, that he who is a producer of benefit for promoters of good works becomes an extender⁴ of the teaching of religion; even for this reason, because from producing benefit for promoters of good works arises an increase of good works, from an increase of good works arises further progress of the will of the sacred beings, from further progress of the will of the sacred beings arises more progress of the good religion, and from more progress of the good religion arises an extension of the teaching of the good religion in the world. 6. This, too, that by him who possesses authority through virtue, discrimination¹ as to the regulation of duties is taught to mankind; even for this reason, because the possessor of authority through virtue is a man who becomes a decider and ruler, and mankind learn and practise to exercise the disposition, habits, and custom of rulers.

7. This, too, that he who is a giver of the needful to his own needy ones has given himself to Zaratûst; even for this reason, because the needful being given to one's own needy ones is the existence of true liberality, which is a compendium of the religion of Zaratûst; by him who is thereby ennobled (vâsṣû-harakânî-âitō) the religion of Zaratûst is then put on, and whoever has put on the religion of Zaratûst [has given himself to Zaratûst. 8. This, too, that by him who]² gives the leadership [to him who is suitable for the leadership]² even the wisdom of that man is increased; for this reason, because even the wisdom of the suitable, through which they accomplish that leadership, when the leadership comes to them, grows further with the glory of that duty.

9. This, too, that he who has to select the better of two ways, which are good and bad³, is assisted to do so by the benefitters' ordeal of fire and ore; even for this reason, because that is discrimination by the eye of wisdom, which is the way of good intention, and the benefitters are decisive declarers of acquittal and incrimination through fire and metal, the two good discriminators; and when the business is of a different kind, even then both are associates in discriminating, and are powerful connections of one another. 10. This, too, that he who shall do that thing from which advantage of the sacred beings arises, is empowered to discriminate truly that which is sagacious¹ in thought, word, and deed; even for this reason, because from doing anything for the advantage of the sacred beings arises the reign of the will of the sacred beings in the world, from the reign of the will of the sacred beings in the world arises the freedom from danger of the temporal existence of the world, and the freedom from danger of the temporal existence of the world contributes also to the power of him who is sagacious in discriminating truly as to thought, word, and deed.

² The words in brackets are the translation of a passage that was inserted in the MS. at the time the folios were patched. The original copyist of the MS. has evidently omitted a passage, but whether the repairer has made the insertion merely by guessing from the context (which is quite possible), or by referring to some other MS., is uncertain.

11. This, too, that by him who thinks of the affairs of Aûharmazd the eternity (hamâyîkîh) of Aûharmazd² and also the consideration of his own eternity by Aûharmazd are thought of; even on this account, because mankind mind and serve Aûharmazd for the sake of even the hope² of eternal benefit from him; and they who think of him, through the eternal benefit due to him, are themselves increasing that benefit which is eternal, and it is thought eternal by him that thinks of that eternal thing his own eternity. 12. This, too, that he who restrains a person from reverence of the demons, has diverted him from making the world sickly; even for this reason, because whoever has restrained a person from reverence of the demons, has diverted a demon from making the world anarchical and from making the world sickly. 13. This, too, that by him who shall practise liberality benefit for the sun is caused, and by him who shall cause benefit for the sun benefit is caused also for the nature of the body of mankind; even for this reason, because it is declared that the sun has progressed through the radiance and glory of the liberal, and the nature of the body of mankind is preserved by the sun.

14. This, too, that by him whose desire is for anything virtuous, and who possesses authority through virtue, mankind are controlled to persist (mānīnīdanō) in virtue for receiving a reward¹; even for this reason, because he whose desire is virtuous seeks happiness for every one—a pre-eminent desire for the happiness of human existence being the desire of mankind for virtue—and by him who requires that, and strives for it fully, so far as possible for him, any one whatever is brought to persist in virtue and to constrain the spirit for reward; and by him who possesses authority through virtue the continuance of mankind in authority and their persistence and instruction in virtue are attached to good works and are brought to reward. 15. This, too, that by him who possesses happiness through appropriation of the sacred beings mankind are attached to the sacred beings for receiving a reward²; even for this reason, because, on account of the possession of happiness through appropriation of the sacred beings, he possesses it through the assistance and gratification of the good, and mankind shall therefore make him an example; it also becomes a good work for them, and they adhere to the sacred beings for receiving a reward.

16. This, too, that by him who produces the benediction of him that is a conductor of investigation and a righteous judge, and who shall also occasion the reverence of the good, the teaching of the advantage of the righteous¹ is likewise performed; even for this reason, because the essentials (mâdîgân) of the advantage of the world are two—one owing to justice, and one owing to generosity—and it is declared that the advantage of him who possesses the blessings of the judges is owing to the justice of the judges, and the advantage of him who is reverent to the good is owing to the generosity of the good in developing the world, and the righteous teach about it.

17. Righteousness is perfect excellence.

CHAPTER LIII.

Bakš Nask.

1. The seventh fargard, *Tâ-ve-urvâtâ*², is that by him who possesses advantage through virtue, the world of righteousness is freed from³ destruction⁴; even for this reason, because the possession of advantage through virtue arises through the non-participation of the demons and the vile therein, and the participation of the sacred beings and the

good; and, when one shall act so, the advantage of spiritual origin becomes more powerful through guarding the advantage from the destroyers. 2. This, too, that, by him who welcomes Aûharmazd in his person, apostates are likewise forced to make the religion of Aûharmazd progressive¹; even for this reason, because owing to² the apostasy of apostates being a religion produced by Aharman, they are only able to make the religion progressive through the appellation of Aûharmazd; apostasy and priesthood, and the apostates and priests, are fraternal opponents, and whenever the priesthood and multitudes of the priesthood are triumphant, multitudes of the apostates of apostasy perish (aôshênd), and when the multitudes of the apostates of apostasy are bold, the priests of the priesthood are weak; and the priests are superior in power and success when their priesthood is properly limited, and their properly-limited priesthood, too—which can arise through mankind—consists in the welcome precedence of Aûharmazd.

3. About the completeness (spôrikîh) of the priesthood in that quality now, when the priests of the multitude are the habitation (mêhônö) of Aûharmazd, and the power of the priests of the priesthood has increased, the valour of the apostates of apostasy is smitten, and the apostates are defeated by the abundant splendour of the priests, also their power as regards making the religion of Aharman progressive through the appellation of Aûharmazd is fettered, and they keep apostasy concealed³.

³ The passage in the Pahlavi commentary on this Nask, which

4. And then also they, with the appellation of priests, truly speak and teach the religion of Aûharmazd, and make it progressive, just as it is solemnized and made easy by them, even though the will of the sacred beings be unheard and undesired through apostasy.

5. This, too, that he proclaims the miraculousness of Aûharmazd¹, who shall appoint for ordeal that which is certainly a doubt; even for this reason, because, through accomplishing an ordeal, that which is doubtful is forcibly rendered visible (vênâv dahakî-aitô) to the eyes, as certain clearness, through the power of the spirit, which is itself a miracle of Aûharmazd. 6. This, too, that by him who shall make a public decision thereon, as to the acquitted and convicted², gratification is afforded to him whose maintenance of the dispute² is righteous; even for this reason, because the needful is delivered by him to its own requirer who thereby becomes even renowned. 7. This, too, that even the rite of ordeal [is produced]³ by him [who is an advantage to the righteous; for this reason, because the rite of ordeal is for the advancement of the ordeal, and the religious ordeal] proceeds through sovereignty; these righteous are those of the good religion, and their advantage is that belonging to the multitude, which is the sovereignty now, and every one who is given for that advantage, to the is here described, must evidently have been written shortly after some great triumph of the priesthood over some heresy, probably either that of Mânî, or that of Mazdak.

righteous of those of the good religion, becomes the performer of any rite of ordeal really produced, because the origin of that giving of advantage is even the rite of ordeal. 8. This, too, that by him who gives a priest and righteous man for propagating the religion, the rite of ordeal is also proclaimed; even for this reason, because the teacher and one rightly merciful (hû-âmûr'zîdâr) give¹ the sacred text by which even the rite of ordeal is declared.

9. This, too, that he who recites the revelation of Aûharmazd, and who shall do it with exceeding goodness, becomes an increaser of wisdom; even for this reason, because the wisdom of a man increases in these two ways, either he speaks and teaches himself, or he exemplifies the excellence of a portion to the wise who become speakers and teachers of wisdom. 10. This, too, that his homage is for Aûharmazd, who thoroughly teaches a righteous employer of animals and human beings (kirâ va-vîr) that he considers him as their controller (da-stôbar); because, since the productiveness of the completion of the creatures is produced through the nourishment of the creatures by Aûharmazd through his fulfilling his own productiveness, that righteous employer in the world is intended for the nourishment of his creatures, owing to that outward subjection and propitiation of theirs, and the righteous employer is connected with their subjection and propitiation for the creator.

11. This, too, that by him who gives thought to the religion of Zaratûst, the soul is given to Zara-tûst; even for this reason, because with a man's having given thought to the religion of Zaratûst is connected the receiving of his soul by Zaratûst for preservation from hell. 12. This, too, that by him who teaches the nature of the sacred beings to mankind, consultation with Aûharmazd is also further taught; even for this reason, because the nature of the sacred beings is consulting a spiritual lord, and becomes also the consulting of Aûharmazd.

13. This, too, that by him who keeps the produce of sheep as the property of Aûharmazd, a sheep is given to him who is diligent and moderate¹; even for this reason, because produce kept as the property of Aûharmazd is for being given for good works, being given for good works is being truly kept as a beginning for the possession of produce, and a beginning truly kept is kept even through a sheep, as a beginning of excellence, in the control (dastôbarîh) of him who is a diligent and moderate shepherd².

14. This, too, that by him who is liberal to the liberal the increase owing to developers is brought into the world; even for this reason, because a liberal man, on account of even that gift given back to the worthy, becomes even for us—through the development of the world—him who is first praised therein with the sacred beings. 15. This, too, that whoever shall form a store for sheep, becomes an agent even in the development of sheep by the creator; because, on account of the increase of sheep through the existence of nourishment for them having arisen, whoever has arranged nourishment for sheep, becomes an agent even in the development of sheep by the creator. 16. This, too, that by him who teaches inward prayer (vâkākō) to the good, it is also taught to eaters; even for this reason, because, everything connected with eating being declared by the religion, when the religion is taught by any one to the good, in which even that information is proclaimed, even eaters are taught about it. 17. This, too, that whoever maintains a sheep, or human being, as our property, is taught to maintain it through the high-priest of Zaratûst; even for this reason, because it is so maintained as the property of the sacred beings, when he maintains it as the property of Zaratûst.

18. This, too, that by him who gave predominance to those of the nature of Gâyômarđ¹, the sovereignty also of those of the religion of Zaratûst is desired; even for this reason, because the religion of Zaratûst is the nature of Gâyômarđ, and the nature of Gâyômarđ is the religion of Zaratûst. 19. This, too, that when one is alone among rulers a way of speaking to the rulers such words as are really true is thereby provided; even for this reason, because the utterance of blessings by a solitary person is for advantage. 20. This, too, that by him who keeps the sovereignty which is his within the will of Aûharmazd, the best thing is done unto Aûharmazd; even for this reason, because a sovereignty is so kept within the will of Aûharmazd when he who is the ruler gives to Aûharmazd the individuality in which is the sovereignty, and when its proximity and closeness have given to Aûharmazd that thing which is best and supreme.

21. This, too, that when one teaches the sayings

îkākō) of the beneficers, the information which is ing to the religion is illustrated¹ by him to his n; even for this reason, because the knowledge religion, which is in its causing liberality by him, increased even by the repeated enquiry of dis-les. 22. This, too, that by him who teaches an plicant the virtuous way and doctrine (pand) the rgy is then taught; even for this reason, because owledge arises through the virtuous course of the rgy². 23. This, too, that by him who thinks of : affairs of virtue, the liturgy is maintained and ight with virtuousness²; even for this reason, cause the maintenance of the liturgy with virousness arises through virtuous thinking.

24. This, too, that whoever shall provide the urishment of creatures with propriety, his Vohûin (good thought) is Aûharmazd's progeny³; and oever properly maintains those which are in his eping, his position becomes Aûharmazd's father-od of Vohûman⁴; even for this reason, because ery proper nourishing is that in which the urished becomes an offspring such as Vohûman to Aûharmazd; and every proper protection of : creatures, over those which are protected by it, a fatherhood such as that of Aûharmazd over ohûman. 25. This, too, that by him who shall ovide nourishment with propriety for the creation ick is good, it is taught that the good creation is produced by Aûharmazd; even for this reason, cause from the nourishment of the creation with opriety, together with the discriminating action of e nourisher, the goodness of the nourished is also

³ Ibid. 8 a.

evident, from the goodness of the nourished creation the goodness of him who is its creator is evident, and the creator of the good creation is Aûharmazd himself.

26. This, too, that whoever shall spiritually make Aûharmazd the ruler over his own person becomes a ruler as to actions¹; even for this reason, because whoever is making Aûharmazd ruler over his person is a leader of wisdom, a leader of wisdom is a decider taking account of sin and good works, taking account of sin and good works is abstaining from sin and practising good works, and owing to abstinence from sin and practising good works one becomes a ruler over actions. 27. This, too, that Spendarmad² is given to Aûharmazd by him who is as reverent unto Aûharmazd as a daughter unto a father; even for this reason, because the Spendarmadic nature (Spendarmadîh) is provided by him for Aûharmazd.

28. This, too, that for him who thinks of the care of cattle there arises that wisdom³ which the control (patîh) of cattle gives; even for this reason, because the nature of the wisdom for a production of cattle is provided in mankind, and, when mankind apply their thoughts to seeking that wisdom, they obtain it. 29. This, too, that by him who is admitting the male to cattle at the proper time, the care of cattle is also thought of; even for this reason, because the admittance of the male becomes productiveness, and whoever⁴ would cause productiveness thinks also of nourishment.

30. This, too, that by him who has prepared himself for the priests the way to yonder¹ world is taught; even for this reason, because the way to yonder world is declared by the religion, and its indicator is the priest; therefore, by him who is prepared for the priests, through discipleship, that way is known and is made known. 31. This, too, that in him who shall do that which is something that is an assistance to the renovation of the universe, thoughts of the bounty (dahîh) of the creator arise; even for this reason, because creativeness is through thinking of the renovation, thinking of the renovation arises through the renovation, the renovation arises through anything which is done that is an assistance of the renovation, the doing of anything that is an assistance of the renovation is through thinking of sagacity, and thinking of sagacity becomes thoughts of the bounty of the creator.

32. This, too, that by him who loves the affairs of the archangels a heart and mind², for not being misled from the way of the sacred beings, are recommended to mankind; even for this reason, because from the religion of the sacred beings being loved arises increasing power of the sacred beings, from the increasing power of the sacred beings arises their greater authority among mankind, and from the greater authority of the sacred beings among mankind arises the resistance of heart and mind of mankind, even in their not being misled by the very demons. 33. This, too, that whoever shall act with reverence to Vohûman sees the sin which is concealed in him mingled with good works there-

by¹; even for this reason, because reverence for Vohûman becomes submission (hêrîh) in virtuousness, with virtuous submission are connected freedom from Kîkship and from Karapship², and with freedom from Kîkship and from Karapship is connected one sound of life and eye, whereby he is an observant decider, and atonement for sin arises from good works.

34. This, too, that by him who shall provide liberality for the liberal, the giving of a loan³ to mankind is also taught; even for this reason, because liberal giving by any one is accounting for his own debt, and he endeavours to repay it fully observantly and with complete gratification; besides that, the power of liberality becomes extendible among mankind, and through loans and other gifts³ of generosity (dahisnikîh) they become ardent.

35. This, too, that by him who pays homage (franâmêdô) to the affairs of Aûhar mazd, as much as he is able, the non-injury of the innocent is also taught; even for this reason, because to intertwine further (frôvâftanô) with the affairs of Aûhar mazd, as much as possible, is first to commit no sin and to perform as many good works as possible, and abstaining from the essentials of sin is non-injury of the innocent.

36. This, too, that by him who possesses a ruler and high-priest Aûhar mazd is spiritually made ruler over his person¹; even for this reason, because, through the requirement of Aûharmazd, the angels are lord and master of the worldly existence of that man.

37. This, too, that whoever decides duty and opinion becomes also an informer of others; even for this reason, because it informs others that he is possessing wisdom, and this is what is said, that 'the wisdom of a man is evident from his deciding as to affairs.' 38. This, too, that whoever shall provide nurture with propriety becomes also an indicator (dakhshakîndâr)² for others; even for this reason, because the happiness of the nurturer becomes also a happy indicator even for thee; and this, too, is what one says, that 'always good, happy, and free from serfs³ is he who is not a master of vagabonds (padö-i pûân).'

39. This, too, that by him who is a ruler who, by a command given, appoints him who is liturgical (mânsarîk), and gives anything to him which it is desirable to give, the necessary demeanour for true and virtuous statements⁴ is taught; even for this reason, because the uttering of true and virtuous statements, in fearlessness⁴ of rulers, is owing to a well-established sovereignty, and their well-established sovereignty is more particularly through these two things, good commanding and helpfulness; when they establish that liturgical one by a command given it is good commanding, and when they give

anything to him which it is desirable to give the helpfulness is provided; also, owing to their good commanding, the helpfulness is a good establishment of the sovereignty, owing to a well-established sovereignty there is fearlessness also in uttering true and virtuous statements, and, owing to freedom from concealment in uttering true and virtuous statements, the necessary demeanour for true and virtuous statements arises. 40. This, too, that he who gives personal service unto the king of kings, and who considers the product (bar) as the property of Aûharmazd, is empowered for indicating the acquitted and convicted¹ by the spirits, his indicators of the acquitted and convicted; even for this reason, because the person being given in service to the king of kings is the preparation (nîvârisnô) of subjection, and the product being considered as the property of Aûharmazd is to consider the innocence of its origin (bûn) and to make the product well-selecting (hû-kînakô) through virtuousness; owing to the progress of these two, the virtuousness in the world becomes great and increasing productiveness for all the good spiritual and worldly existences which are in it, even those who are angels indicating the acquitted and convicted.

41. This, too, that by him who becomes immortal progress² for him who is immortally progressive, complete progress² is given to him who is completely progressive; and its routine (dâdîstân), too, is even this, that by him who wishes¹ to make that which is his own soul immortal, and would afford it assistance, every benefit is given to him who is a suppliant for every benefit and becomes a giver of every benefit which he begs, which becomes an assistance to him whom he asks in attaining thereto.

42. This, too, that whoever gratifies that which is enjoyment renders his soul immortal; even for this reason, because the soul subsists through good works, and good works are all those which gratify enjoyment. 43. This, too, that whoever keeps himself always in good works² has produced perfection and happiness by any goodness and worthiness of his; even for this reason, because keeping oneself always in good works becomes perfect diligence in industry, within perfect diligence in industry is also comprised opposition to any harm whatever, and it is opposition to harm and perfect goodness that are worthy of every happiness.

44. This, too, that by him who possesses wealth as high-priest of the priests, predominance as their high-priest is maintained³ and taught; even for this reason, because the provision of sovereignty and its progress are really through wealth. 45. This, too, that by him who would act for the pleasure of others, owing to virtue, the growth and increase owing to Vohûman⁴ are produced; even for this reason, because that which has given virtuous pleasure is the nourishment of the creatures by the producer of increase and growth.

46. This, too, that by him who welcomes Aûhar-

mazd in *himself*¹, and teaches good works to mankind, every virtuous instruction is taught; even for this reason, because the welcoming of Aûharmazd in oneself is the non-committal of sin, and the teaching of good works to mankind is more particularly the performance of good works oneself; innocence and the practising of good works are the end of every instruction, and he in whom they exist becomes a teacher of every goodness. 47. This, too, that by him who shall occasion benefit through him who is a propagator of good works, the evidence of him who is well-informed² is taught through one well-informed; even for this reason, because the chief evidence as to sagacity is to occasion benefit for the good. 48. This, too, that by him who gives commands as to the affairs of Aûharmazd, Aûharmazd is made welcome in his person¹; even for this reason, because the throne of Aûharmazd in the worldly existence is more particularly in a ruler of well-commanding person.

49. The excellence of righteousness is perfect.

CHAPTER LIV.

Bakō Nask.

1. The eighth fargard, *Hva êtumaiti*³, is that by him who teaches wisdom to others the not being deceived by an apostate into confusing a righteous one (aharûbō-barîsîh) is also taught⁴; even for this reason, because he who has taught is not deceived.

⁴ See Pahl. Yas. XXXII, 1-4.

2. This, too, that by him who is as reverent unto Aûharmazd as a daughter unto a father, and who is also a gratifier of virtuous doers, Spendarmad¹ is made one of the archangels, and one is also made to love her; even for this reason, because through that Spendarmadic one being reverent unto Aûharmazd, and the gratification of the good by him, the archangels love and preserve her Spendarmadic nature (Spendarmadîgîh). 3. This, too, that he who is loving Vohûman is taught by his wisdom not to destroy (nasâninîdanö)² the religion of Aûharmazd; even for this reason, because wisdom maintains the religion in virtue, and others are taught about it.

4. This, too, that by him who gives himself in discipleship unto the priests, and who asks again that which he does not understand, learning (âmûkô) is taught; even for this reason, because the asking for knowledge again by him who has given himself in discipleship to a wise priest, increases knowledge; and the friends of knowledge, therefore, make him an example, and shall practise asking again, that which they do not understand, from the disciples of the priests.

5. This, too, that whoever is in accordance with Zaratûst, through pure affection, becomes, in like manner, him who is giving strength to the will of the archangels and the commands of the good; even for this reason, because these two capabilities are of the special nature of Zaratûst. 6. This, too, that through the discrimination of him who loves³ Vohûman Aû-harmazd is gratified ; even for this reason, because one loving Vohūman is loving wisdom and has taught wisdom, wisdom taught is discrimination, and the discriminator becomes a gratifier of Aûharmazd.

³ Ibid. 8 c. It is possible to read the verbal stem gôsh, 'hear,'

7. This, too, that whoever gives thought to the religion of Zaratûst is taught wisdom ; even for this reason, because all the wisdom of the good religion is taught to him by giving thought. 8. This, too, that whoever has kept wealth in the control¹ of Zaratûst becomes taught, and is one who is reverent to the benefitters ; even for this reason, because whoever is reverent to the supporters of religion keeps wealth in the control of the supporters of religion, and, when kept by him in their control, it is kept by him in that of Zaratûst.

9. This, too, that his destiny is connected with himself who practises industry. 10. This, too, that his good works for arranging the creation become his own who has fully prepared his own person.

11. The excellence of righteousness is perfect.

CHAPTER LV.

Bakō Nask.

1. The ninth fargard, Yathâis², is that by him who praises Aûharmazd his work in the Gâthic lore³ is taught ; even for this reason, because the reason of the praise even of Aûharmazd is for his works, and by him who extols any work the performance instead of dôsh (Av. zush) ; but this is hardly possible in § 2, and gôshîdanō is not the usual Pahlavi for 'to hear.'

of that work is also taught; moreover the work of Aûharmazd, which is the Gâthic lore, is pure goodness. 2. This, too, that by him who increases the propagators of good works priestly-controlled action (radîk-kûnisnîh)¹ is taught; even for this reason, because the advancement of merit and the action of priestly chieftainship are the two maxims (vâkākō) of one who, when there is reason, exalts progressive merit when he increases the propagators of good works; and when progressive merit is exalted priestly-controlled action is praised and also taught.

3. This, too, that what is worthy, and what is coveted for every worthy man, is produced by him for whom the command of the liturgy is the reckoning for him who is habitually sagacious; and this statement also indicates the explanation of rulers and all who are needing those of the world for one combined effort, who, in the immature world, have to trust a command that is at one time sagacious.

4. This, too, that personal assistance is liberally given (râdînîdō) to the creatures of the good beings by him whose deeds are an assistance of the renovation of the universe; and this statement, too, also indicates the great power of any good work whatever, because every good work, being an assistance of the renovation, becomes liberality to the immature (khâm) creation.

5. This, too, that whoever teaches to a son reverence unto his father has also appropriated the reward for reverence unto the creator for teaching that person; even for this reason, because express reverence unto parents and service to them are connected with reverence unto the creator and service to him. 6. This, too, that whoever is personally progress for him who is his own¹—that is, for any one whatever among those who are needing him—becomes the happiness of the creator who is the maker of the original good creations; and this statement also indicates as to whom it is, when, through him whose decision is progress—which arises through that which occurs when the decision is given that becomes for every one that which is needful for him—there is happiness that is concentrated. 7. This, too, that by him who is causing benefit for him who is a cultivator cattle² are multiplied; even for this reason, because a gratifier of the performers of tillage is multiplying tillage, and cattle are the chief tillage of the world.

8. This, too, that the religion which is the way of righteousness is made his own³ by him who is a good thinker about the religion of righteousness; and this statement, too, also indicates the limit of reliance (astisnō) upon the good religion; because whoever is not a good thinker about the good religion, even though he be a reciter of revelation, becomes really an apostate; whoever is a good thinker, but not about the good religion, becomes really an infidel; and whoever thinks truly becomes a good thinker about religious righteousness and the statements in the good religion. 9. And about three statements, the bringer forward for all mankind is your submission to the sacred beings; one is of the produce (bar), one of the origin (būn), and one of the body and life ; that of the produce is the exertion from which there is produce, that of the origin is the advantage for which the origin is requisite, and that of the body and life is the thought of the proposer (râyîñîdâr), which considered both as submission to the sacred beings. 10. This, too, that connected with the sitting-place of the sage is the excessiveness of the pleasure¹ for those causing pleasure, for the upper classes (avarigânö) of Irân, and for the energy (patûkîh)¹ of the diligent.

11. Excellence that is perfect is righteousness.

Bakö Nask.

1. The tenth fargard, Yâ-shyaothanâ², is that, for him who is practising good works³ as much as it is possible for him to do, an efficacious reason for the renovation of the universe is afforded assistance ; even for this reason, when every good work is an assistance to the renovation, then—according to the declaration that whoever does much more good work is more assisting the renovation—by him who is practising good works as much as it is possible for him to do, an efficacious reason for the renovation is afforded assistance. 2. This, too, that the apostate⁴, who is the seduction of mankind, is injured by him who devotes himself to Aûharmazd ; even for this reason, because he is dislodged and is elucidated

(adīvâgî-aîtō rōshanî-aîtō), and there arises a class of mankind who see the admission (parvâ-nakîh) of the apostate into hell, and he is disabled when it is seen by them.

3. This, too, that by him who is eager¹ for knowledge, knowledge is grasped and taught; even for this reason, because knowledge is taught through that which is the instruction of every science and the original desire for it, and mankind shall extol his knowledge; it is also coveted by them for being taught, and they mount and grasp it. 4. This, too, that to slay² an apostate is taught by the good one who is united (hamî-aît) with a good man; even for this reason, because the destruction (aôsh) of Aharman arises from the union of the good. 5. This, too, that by him who is a disturber (vishûftâr) as to Vohûman the production of development through Vohûmanic rule³ is taught; sinners lawfully subjected to the bridge judgment (pûhalînîdō) for Vohûmanic disturbance, and the command for it by rulers and high-priests, being a preparation for the development of the world.

6. This, too, that a great ordinance⁴ is taught by him whose ceremonial⁵ is for Aûharmazd; even for this reason, because a comprehension of Aûharmazd and serving him are the foundation of joy (parkân bûn), and the ownership and concentration (hangerdîkîh) of all good works are themselves the great ordinance of the faithful whose preparation is through the ownership, and their welcome is more particularly in the ceremonial; owing to the same reason, the original possession of the great ordinance of the ceremonial which is Aûhar mazd's own, and of other good works—even though relating to the ceremonial of Aûhar mazd of every kind owing thereto—is necessary for the manifestation of the great ordinance, and is incorporated (ham-tanû) with it when it becomes manifest as a great ordinance, or as more than a great ordinance; even then its extent (vâlisnô) is over this joy. 7. This, too, that the performance (sakhtârîh) of a ceremonial¹ of the needy is a gift to the worthy of the creation, and a gift to the worthy of the creation is the attraction (hâkhtârîh) of a ceremonial of the needy.

8. This, too, that the way of righteousness², also that through which that way is seen, and likewise the reward of those lonely-labouring (a êvar'zîkân) therein are taught by him whose deeds are an advantage to the sacred beings; even for this reason, because the advantage of the sacred beings is the advantage of the multitude, and the advantage of the multitude, which is itself the religion of the sacred beings that is a guide, is the way of righteousness and also that through which is the reward of those lonely-labouring. 9. This, too, that even the reward of a teacher of professionals, which is the profit of the profession, is liberally given and appropriated for the professionals taught; even for this reason, because the business of the sacred beings has profited by the instruction (âmûkô).

10. Excellence that is perfect is righteousness.

CHAPTER LVII.

Bakō Nask.

1. The eleventh fargard, the Yasna¹, is that the whole of the good works which are to accomplish, and those, too, which are accomplished², are appropriated by the righteous man who teaches virtue³ to the righteous; even for this reason, of the good works which one accomplishes, and those, too, which are accomplished, there is all one store (anbâr), from the work (var'zō) of the original good creation even to the renovation of the universe, and ever afresh the teaching of virtue by those who are righteous comes to the accumulation of the righteous and the accomplishment of that store, and they, too, are in possession of that store, in partnership with the other righteous. 2. This, too, that it is because he would do the best for his own⁴, whose meditation of the liturgy is for those who are archangels, and who also maintains, for the assistance of the good, the strength which is his for the existences. 3. And this statement indicates the great participation of any one in that store, because when that store is really an accumulation of work on the way, for the partners in that store who have done more, and also those who have accomplished less, and remains, moreover, in the possession of them all, then, as to those accomplishing more of it, through the original possession of most of that work, and also through that which occurs when the accomplishers have attained to that plenty more particularly owing to their more labour, and likewise through the property, liberally,

largely, and lordlily, of those accomplishing more, and the indigence, unafflictedly¹, scantily, and subordinately, of those accomplishing less, it is reasonable to speak of that store as in their possession, and of their superiority as greatly over those accomplishing less. 4. This, too, that his work is good work whose liberality is for the archangels; even for this reason, because through a little labour for the sacred beings, which is itself that liberality, he contributes duty and good works.

5. This, too, that it becomes best for him, in both existences², who teaches a wishing for living in diligence to mankind; even for this reason, because he is a preserver of them through the wishing for living, and his soul, through the diligence owing to him, attains perfection, here from mankind and in yonder world from the sacred beings. 6. This, too, that the ceremonial and obeisance of Aûharmazd³ are performed by him who is in the way of like thinking and like praising of the law of Aûharmazd with all the worshippers of Aûharmazd. 7. This, too, that he is in the leadership of his religion⁴ who makes the knowledge of religion ever afresh; even for this reason, because every item of knowledge which he provides increases some greatness of it. 8. This, too, that he is in the service of his religion⁴ who demands the knowledge of religion ever afresh; even for this reason, because so long as he demands more, he becomes nearer to a knowledge of religion.

9. This, too, that mankind's wishing for life is authorised (dastovarīnīdō) by him who authorises the production of anything for mankind; even for this reason, because authority (dastōbarīh) over the production of anything is conjoined with that which is for the wishing for life; so that whosever production of anything is authorisedly, their life is free from any discomfort; and whosever wishing for life is authorisedly, his production of anything is also authorisedly. 10. This, too, that acceptance, hints, and words are given¹ to Aûharmazd by him who asks again, that which he does not understand of the religion, from him who does understand; even for this reason, because knowledge is completed through these three things: obtainment, hints, and speaking, and all three are asked again by him who does not understand. 11. This, too, that the words of Aûharmazd² are taught by him who teaches the acceptance, remembrance, and speaking of the religion; even for this reason, because this is the recital of that compendium (hangerdīkīh).

12. This, too, that the care³ and reverence of fire are provided by him who is liberal to a fire as regards anything he supplies for the care and reverence which others shall provide for the fire, and he becomes equally rewarded for it. 13. This, too, that by him who teaches the religion of Aûharmazd with joyfulness⁴, the care and reverence of fire are

⁴ Ibid. 4, 5.

provided as declared by the religion; even for this reason, because even that which is taught by him combines with the action due to that teaching.

14. This, too, that the obeisance¹ to those requiring obeisance is arranged by him who loves Vohûman.

15. This, too, that fire is strengthened—for that work, achieved in the future existence, which is the greatest² that exists—by him who invokes fire with the title of fire; even for this reason, because the title is put by him upon a nature that is laudable, and when invoked by him with that title the praised one is then strengthened by him.

16. This, too, that he becomes informed as to the religion of Aûharmazd³, who teaches the religion of Aûharmazd with pleasure; even for this reason, because every knowledge is exercised and increased by teaching. 17. This, too, that Aûharmazd is propitiated by the excellent sagacity of him who teaches virtuous words and actions⁴; even for this reason, because sagacity has two parts, the speakable and the workable. 18. This, too, that the bodily form (kerpö) of Aûharmazd is praised as perfection (nêvakötmîh)⁵ by him who elevates (bâlistînéðö) his own soul⁶ to the station of the sun⁷; even for this reason, because that bodily form of Aûharmazd exists, and becomes the loftiest and most perfect in the station of the sun.

19. This, too, that all excellence is purely produced for Aûharmazd by him who has root in the possession of Aûharmazd; even for this reason, because, when a root is given to him, fruit is also produced by him, and all excellence is both root and fruit¹. 20. This, too, that Aûharmazd is invoked with the title 'lord'² by him whom Aûharmazd calls; even for this reason, because the interpretation of 'Aûharmazd' is really with the words 'greatly wise lord' (mas dânâk khûdât). 21. This, too, that the names of the sacred beings which are invoked³ are the praise glorified by any one, and by him who glorifies them they are named; even for this reason, because the names of the sacred beings are the glorification due to their names of praise. 22. This, too, that among those of the same class (ham-gôharân), when he shall do it for one race⁴, benefit is produced by him for other races within that class; among those of the same races (ham-tôkhmakânân), when he shall produce benefit for one species, it is done by him also for other species within that race; and among the same species (ham sarâdâkô), when he shall produce benefit for one individual (kerpô), it is done by him for other individuals within that species.

23. This, too, that his personality (khûdîh) is the sacred beings' own⁵, who maintains the rites⁶ with the assistance of the righteous. 24. This, too, that his own is in the guardianship⁷ of the sacred beings, whose vehemence is through Good Thought; even for this reason, because his bravery is for the law. 25. This, too, that life is given to mankind by him who shall do that which is able to remain good for them. 26. This, too, that the friendship of Aûharmazd is appropriated by him who has Aûharmazd as a guardian, and perpetual guardianship is appropriated by him who teaches to mankind that thing which becomes their perpetual guardianship in yonder world.

27. This, too, that he causes righteousness¹ who thinks of anything which is virtuous. 28. This, too, that he has caused the good commands and propitiousness² of Aûharmazd, who gives his body and life³ to the sacred beings; and body and life are given to the sacred beings by him who affords friendship to the religion of Zaratûst. 29. And this, too, that to him who affords friendship to Aûharmazd it occurs owing to the guardianship of Aûharmazd; and that guardianship is perpetually⁴ connected with him who teaches to others that thing which always constitutes their companionship with the sacred beings.

30. Excellence that is perfect is righteousness.

CHAPTER LVIII.

Bakō Nask.

1. The twelfth fargard, Ustavaiti⁵, is that the benefit of him who is reverent to the benefiter is the benefit of any one whatever⁶; even for this reason, because the benefit of the immature creation is owing to carrying out the commands of a benefiting spiritual lord. 2. This, too, that whoever pleases superiors by submission, is pleased by inferiors. 3. This, too, that by him who gives thought to the religion of Zaratûst, that which is best for his own in every mode¹ is produced, because he has attained to the religion who is listening best. 4. This, too, that virtue is taught by him to all the creatures of the beneficent spirit, to the righteous whose stepping forth (fravâmisnô) is for the righteous; even for this reason, because the creatures of the beneficent spirit are all of one nature, and the stepping forth (fragâmisnô) and hastening of the limbs of one body become those of the whole of that body. 5. This, too, that his spirit is connected with Aûhar Mazda², and his knowledge is accepted, who loves Vohûman; even for this reason, because the spirit who is the original spiritual lord of knowledge is Vohûman. 6. This, too, that just giving is taught by him whose words are through Vohûman³; even for this reason, because the speaking of virtuous words becomes the teaching of knowledge in which there is also just giving.

7. This, too, that joy which is of long duration is produced⁴ for his own by him who brings forth strength through virtue, and who also assists him who is unborn; even for this reason, because joy which is perpetual increases by both. 8. This, too, that by him who is an assistance of those in the proper way, the proper way is taught to mankind⁵;

³ Ibid. 2 d.

even for this reason, because he is making mankind long for that way. 9. This, too, that heat is given to fire¹ by him who tells truth to the invokers; even for this reason, because the adversary—owing to the heat of the fire achieved by the indicator of truth—is more particularly subdued by the strength of that just one.

10. This, too, that the assistants for the renovation of the universe are the decrees of Vistâsp²—which are through Vohûman—of Sôshâns³ and Kaî-Khûsrôî⁴; even for this reason, because the fragments are possessing a renewer which is their own completion⁵, and the completion—which is through the assistance of the renovation by Vistâsp—is through what occurs when the religion is set going by him, through which the renovation arises; and the triumph of the completion, which is through an ordinance by Sôshâns, is through what occurs when through the ordinance there is thus a decree which sets aside all distress from the creatures, and gives the ordinance to the whole material existence, that which is living and also that which is dead. 11. This, too, that whoever intrusts it with a command given—which command given intrusts him who supplies the command from revelation—and it worships what is necessary to worship, is thereby displayed among the existences as the progeny of Aûhar¹mazd¹.

⁴ In the MS. the letters srô are omitted from this name which might, therefore, be read Kayânag; but Kaî-Khûsrôî (see Chap. XXIII) is considered as one of the assistants of the renovation (Dd. XXXVI, 3), probably on account of his opposition to idolatry (Bd. XVII, 7).

12. This, too, that the defeat of the bad and the acceptance of the good² are taught by him who shall provide a righteous gift for the worthy; because both are therein. 13. This, too, that ability for even the transformation of the creatures³ of Aûhar¹mazd¹ is taught by him who loves Vohûman; even for this reason, because the forward-dragging, and also the backward-dragging, power—which is in mankind—is qualified, through changeableness of will, for even the actions of the Vohûmanic nature. 14. This, too, that power is taught, to that spirit through whom the creatures are changed, by him whose wisdom is for that which is wisdom; even for this reason, because that spirit is wisdom, and increases in mankind through instruction. 15. This, too, that by him who praises the religion like a disciple, and who also teaches it like a priest⁴, it is shown that Sôshâns⁴ really comes; even for this reason, because the religion, from the first praiser and teacher down to the last praiser and teacher, is connected by discipleship and priesthood, and Sôshâns becomes a disciple in the end, and the last priest.

16. This, too, that the wisdom of Aûhar¹mazd⁵ is taught by him who shall supply decisions and adjudication from the religion; even for this reason, because the decision of religion is the wisdom of Aûhar¹mazd¹. 17. This, too, that complete mindfulness, so that they are not deceived⁵, is taught through wisdom by him who is as reverent to Aûhar-mazd as a daughter to a father; even for this reason, because the reverence of a daughter unto a father arises mostly through natural sympathy (âhang-î kîtrîk), and through the intellectual complete mindfulness of the daughter.

18. This, too, that maintaining the destinies (vakhtân) of the body through the command of the creator is taught by him who teaches the righteous man and the wicked one that thing which becomes comfort to them, to the righteous man as to his body, and to the wicked one as to his soul; even for this reason, because he becomes a friend of the creatures, a friend of the creatures is also a friend of creativeness, and a friend of the creator maintains body and wealth through the command of the creator, and others are taught by him. 19. This, too, that joy owing to him who is powerful is taught him who is righteous only by him—that is, he is conveying him to the rulers for benefit¹—who is an assistance of him who is righteous through capability, that is, he shall do it through exertion of power; even for this reason, because, when he has provided as much assistance as it is possible for him to do, his praise arises through that benefit which is pre-eminent through his exertion. 20. This, too, that the benefit of sovereignty for that which arises² is taught only by him who always thoroughly teaches authority (patîh) up to dictatorship (vispô-farmânîh); that is, he teaches to others that thing which always arises for them up to dictatorial authority; this is where it is connected by them with the renovation of the universe through the control which is in the tree of germs¹.

21. This, too, that he becomes liberal to fire² who shall perform work for fire that is its protection, and so it is taught about it through the obeisance by him whose liberality—that is his through the obeisance—becomes liberal, and whose declaration, that arises as to Vohūman, possesses wealth through virtue.

22. This, too, that this thinking as to righteousness³ is taught only by him—that is, he thinks—whose petition for righteousness is ever afresh. 23. This, too, that the religion is interrogated⁴ by him who is submissive to superiors and similarly situated (ham-gâk) to inferiors.

24. This, too, that the state of the present world (latammanh) for the Mazda-worshipping religion is thoroughly taught where whatever becomes a progress⁵ of the religion is whatever is purification for mankind; even for this reason, because the want of progress of the religion is owing to the want of purification of mankind as to the fiend, and when a human being is purified from the fiend, the progress of the religion becomes different. 25. This, too, that pleasure is taught to him who is a friend⁶ only by him—that is, he gives it—who is a pleasure to him who is a friend; and its routine is really this, that by him who causes pleasure to friends, his having caused pleasure is taught also to them. 26. This, too, that, owing to him whom Aûharmazd teaches joy, it is taught that gratification¹ comes from Aûharmazd; even for this reason, because he is exalted, even in the worldly existence, through that joy which is supreme, and mankind are thereby taught.

27. This, too, that the augmentation of indications as to intellect is taught to him who is a vigorous-minded (tûstō-minisnō) man², by him whose own progress is that towards his own sacred beings; even for this reason, because he fully considers, and delivers the decision, of his own powers, of those, too, of his contemporaries (ham-budî-kânō), and likewise of the chivalry (êîrîh) of the age; and others are taught about it by him. 28. This, too, that the spirit of Aûharmazd³ is expounded only by him—that is, he loves it—whose close exposition is of Aûharmazd; even for this reason, because he becomes similarly loved with Aûharmazd, so that⁴ . . . 29. And this, too, that the reward is taught in the publicity of the sun⁵ by him whose friendship is for the Spîtâmân, which also increases in the day—that is, it is necessary to perform duty and good works in the day—but he does not put it aside the second day; even for this reason, because friendship for the religion is through kind regard; and duty in one day, only to put it aside for the second day, becomes affliction (vêsh) at the bridge of judgment; also the sun is the most kindly-regarding and swiftest of those visible.

30. Excellence that is perfect is righteousness.

CHAPTER LIX.

Bakō Nask.

1. The thirteenth fargard, Tād-thwâ-peresâ¹, is that the obeisance² of the archangels is performed by him who is educated in the recitation for the archangels of one learned in the religion, which is when he has to understand the recitation and to maintain the recitation of revelation with propriety, which is when an enumeration, or form (âinakō), as to the qualities of the archangels exists, which is the obeisance for the sacred beings. 2. For, on this subject, one mentions seven kinds of *men*³, educated, or well-educated, or ill-educated, who are connected with it in statements by those of the world; the merely educated man, particularly also the physician, explains this which is not mentioned and does not occur, that it is well, or ill, disposed⁴; the merely well-educated man, particularly also the physician, explains this which is mentioned and occurs, that it is well-disposed; the merely ill-educated man, and

also the physician, explains this which is mentioned and occurs, that it is ill-disposed; and the merely uneducated man explains anything whatever that is really life¹. 3. One educated in the recitation for the sacred beings, who when—on account of the necessity of speaking evil about a learned man—he is mischievous (anâg), so that he keeps in viciousness, and has remained in the obeisance for the sacred beings, is called not ransomed (lâ tâkhtik). 4. One ill-educated in the recitation for the sacred beings, which is when it happens that he keeps in viciousness, becomes even an apostate who is acquainted with the religion. 5. One uneducated in what pertains to the sacred beings is of two kinds, either good² and void of learning, or an evil one who is void of knowledge; the good and void of learning worships the sacred beings unobservantly with the proper rites, and the evil one who is void of knowledge thinks to worship the sacred beings unobservantly with improper rites, and has no means of trustworthy reliance upon the religion of the sacred beings and their obeisance. 6. And one well-educated in what pertains to the sacred beings, through the three words of the connected series (ham-padvandisnîh) which is good (khu) and learned³, and through what pertains to the sacred beings, expounds faithfully the object of the obeisance for the sacred beings.

7. This, too, that, by him who teaches to mankind that thing which becomes their hope of eternity, mankind are taught to come to the religion of the sacred beings; even for this reason, because the Vohûmanic attainment¹ to the religion of the sacred beings is to be required wisely for them, its requirement wisely for them is a benefit for the steadfast and becomes a consideration (mînîh) for them, and the consideration of the benefit of the steadfast is through hope of the eternity which is provided for the benefit, on account of which the hope of eternity—which is the basis—is the reason even of the acceptance of the religion.

³ Probably 'good thoughts, good words, and good deeds.'

8. This, too, that the perfection of the first among the existences² is taught by him who has retentively remembered his words; even for this reason, because remembrance is the acme of every perfection.

9. This, too, that he becomes a nourisher of good works who shall perform good works publicly; even for this reason, because others are taught thereby, and good works increase in the world.

10. This, too, that by him who has fruit in the possession of Aûhar³mazd the development of the world in virtue³ is taught; even for this reason, because a lawful preserver and a producer of liberality arise through the fruit, they enlarge the root of the power of the angel of liberality, and pluck its fruit; the world is improved thereby, and mankind are taught about it.

11. This, too, that, through complete mindfulness, words and actions⁴ are truly taught by him whose ceremonial is for complete mindfulness; even for this reason, because there are both words and actions in the ceremonial.

12. This, too, that the sagacious creativeness (far'-zânak dahîk) of Aûhar³mazd is taught, which is

the exposition, to Aûhar^{ma}zd¹, of the production of the renovation; even for this reason, because the advantage of the sagacity of Aûhar^{ma}zd is the consequence of its beginning, and its middle is through the power of the goodness and knowledge of him himself, and because it is destiny as regards the creations; and whoever possesses that power for the assistance of the renovation, is extolled for that sagacity, and people are taught thereby. 13. This, too, that the reward of Zaratûst is appropriated by him who decides about duty and opinion²; even for this reason, because, through that discrimination, he is similar to Zaratûst.

14. This, too, that the recitation of revelation is performed for mankind by him who extends the propagation of the religion³; even for this reason, because, owing to the gratification of virtuous practisers, virtue increases. 15. This, too, that the religion of Aûhar^{ma}zd is made progressive² by him who shall perform the ceremonial of Aûhar^{ma}zd; even for this reason, because through that performance of his occurs the blessing of the provider of the rite (nîrangîni^dâr). 16. This, too, that that perfectly righteous man of just judgment is protected from the annoying spirit⁴ by him who possesses the resemblance (ângûnagîh) unto Vohûman that they behold and resources through virtue; even for this reason, because the vexation which is partaken by him (the spirit), owing to the just judgment among those of the nature (kîharîkân) of mankind, is redoubled (dôkânî-aîtô) by their pleasure owing to the Vohûmanic resemblance, and the annoying spirit

³ Ibid. 15 d, 17 c.

is disabled (akâri-hênd)¹ by that accumulated vexation which occurs for his annoyance.

17. This, too, that the exploits of the archangels are taught by him who is really capable in what pertains to the archangels; even for this reason, because they become the hope of a consoling (vêdvar) end, and are also indicative of the renovation of the universe, the hope of a virtuous end.

18. This, too, that the words of him who is Zaratûst, that 'people shall become supplicant,' are taught by him who is for the benefitters; even for this reason, because they who are benefitters, on account of an inclination for the religion, make others eager for the religion, and make them mount for prayer.

19. And this, too, that by him who gives anything to a righteous man, this is also done that some one else may give even to him who is vile; even for this reason, because a foundation of liberality is thereby prepared for him².

20. Perfect righteousness is excellence.

CHAPTER LX.

Bakō Nask.

1. The fourteenth fargard, Ađ-fravakhshyâ³, is that whatever is instruction is to be listened to⁴ here as much as is possible, and he who is not to be

taught is allowed an opportunity for listening by Zarātûst.

2. This, too, that by him who would be a causer of procreation for performers of labour, the perfect nature of the performance of the first next-of-kin marriage¹ is praised; because causing the procreation of performers of labour is the fatherhood of mankind, the proper fatherhood of mankind is through the proper production of progeny, the proper progeny of the producer is through the accomplishment of progeny among his own, according to the disposition of the first creatures, and the accomplishment of progeny among one's own is next-of-kin marriage; and that which occurs, when a causer of the procreation of performers of labour praises the fatherhood of mankind, is that next-of-kin marriage is also praised by him.

3. This, too, that by him whose creatures are in virtue, owing to his virtuous nourishment of the creatures, the performance of next-of-kin marriage² is taught, and the virtue is his virtue; even on this account, because, for the sake of keeping the creatures in virtue, he allows (andâzêdô) for the virtuous disposition pertaining to the multitude, and that which is born he produces (dahêdô) as lineage from the next-of-kin marriage pertaining to the multitude.

4. This, too, that Spendarmad is in daughterhood³ to Aûhar Mazda is taught by him whose wisdom is through complete mindfulness; even for this reason, because his wisdom and complete mindfulness are within limits which are Aūharmazd and Spendarmad, the wisdom being that of Aūharmazd, the complete mindfulness that of Spendarmad, and the complete mindfulness being the offspring of the wisdom just as Spendarmad is of Aūharmazd; and, owing to this, the assertion is reasonable that, by him whose complete mindfulness is connected with wisdom, it is taught that Spendarmad is in daughterhood to Aūharmazd. 5. This, too, that thus the exercise of that daughterhood is taught by him whose righteousness is through complete mindfulness, and whose ceremonial is also through complete mindfulness; that is, he shall perform the ceremonial and other good works fully mindfully.

6. This, too, that mankind are attracted to religious good deeds by him who shall provide benefit for the people through actions and words; even for this reason, because those actions are religious good deeds, and, when instituted by him, others are also taught by him. 7. This, too, that reverence for Vohūman¹ is taught by him who shall make that which is contaminated obvious to the eye, so that what is dark becomes light; even for this reason, because the display of the work of Vohūman thereby has also taught the offer of reverence for Vohūman. 8. And this, too, that the ceremonial is taught with complete mindfulness² only by him who teaches words and actions with complete mindfulness.

² Ibid. 10 a.

Bako' Nask.

1. The fifteenth fargard, Kamnamaêza¹, is about the reply of Aûharmazd to Zaratûst, as to that which was asked by him thus: 'To which lands do I step²?' and it is thus: 'Do thou march (sagîtûn) there where the man, in whose person righteousness is connected with complete mindfulness, is welcome; this, too, is where happy is he from whom there is no complaint.'

2. This, too, that mankind are made diligent in good works by him who produces progress for good works; even for this reason, because mankind attain progress in manifest duty who engage more particularly in good works. 3. This, too, that the teaching of religion is the public action which is prescribed by him who would produce exertion for the righteous, that is, benefit for those of the good religion; even for this reason, because the multitude (kabedân) approach the religion, and are taught and practise it, on account of a desire for benefit.

4. This, too, that it is in a province of even exhausted production³ that it is taught by him who appoints a virtuous governor over the province; even for this reason, because a virtuous governor of a province becomes a teacher of ability and good works to those of the province.

5. This, too, that the good protection of fire¹ is taught by him whose words are through Vohûman, and who also would provide a time for the ordeal of that which is doubtful; even for this reason, because he whose words are utterable through Vohûman, and who would provide a time for the ordeal of that which is doubtful, teaches the provision of care for the operative fire, owing to that which occurs when what is accomplished, about one acquitted or convicted by the fire, is declared, and mankind shall provide more particularly for the brilliancy of the fire, and the wicked more for assistance and protection from it.

6. This, too, that whoever shall provide about him who liberally gives himself in discipleship² unto the priests, has thereby taught even by the mention of the high-priest; even for this reason, because the person being given in discipleship unto the priests, the religion practised by the high-priest arises also for mention, and whoever shall provide generosity for that person, has increased and also taught that action, which is religion, even by the mention made.

7. This, too, that men and women³ are taught as being given in discipleship⁴ to Zaratûst by him who keeps his own males and females in the control of Zaratûst. 8. This, too, that goodness is taught by him to those (valman) who are good, so that they produce it who give to that righteous one the worthiness which is through that wealth; the righteous one who is worthy is one of the good religion for whose production of the worthiness which is through that wealth it is sought, and that wealth which is

coveted is wealth of little trouble and much advantage, through the goodness and idea of virtue of the giver to the account of him who is the acceptor of the good worthiness. 9. This, too, that through his Kinvad passage (Kis-vidarg) it is taught that they shall step forth (frôvâmând)¹; and by him who goes on through anything (kis) openly, when he has proceeded publicly on the right path, one passed away on the Kinvad passage is taught.

10. This, too, that by him whose ceremonial is through complete mindfulness it is taught that the world produces abundance through complete mindfulness²; even for this reason, because it is taught by him, through that disposition of his for the sacred beings (pavan zak-i valman yazdânô khîm), that the developed world is shown to be theirs; and here below it is fully taught by him, that Khûrdad and *Amûrdad*³—that is, the sacred beings—produce it for the beneficers. 11. This, too, that thus he who is wicked, even he who is privileged, becomes unprivileged at that time when every one understands, that is, when righteousness is aloft. 12. This, too, that when he who is privileged is *Vistâsp*⁴, likewise he who is privileged is the righteous *Zarâtûst*⁵, and so he who is the wicked *Argâsp*⁶ is unprivileged.

13. This, too, that creation is taught by him to Aûharmazd, so that he creates, and this, too, that the archangels are taught by his will, whose contentment¹ is through that of the archangels, so that he observes the conclusion in the affairs of the archangels. 14. And this, too, that wisdom is taught to him who is Zaratûst—so that it becomes his—by him whose thoughts are for Zaratûst² and for the religion of Zaratûst.

15. Perfect is the excellence of righteousness.

Bakō Nask.

1. The sixteenth fargard, Spentâ-mainyû³, is that the religion is lodging in him who is himself wise, or becomes a hearer of the wise. 2. This, too, that the deeds of complete mindfulness are practised⁴ and taught by him who becomes himself completely mindful. 3. This, too, that whoever shall openly perform good works becomes a nourisher of good works.

4. This, too, that the spirit of fatherhood becomes lodging in him who nourishes the creatures with propriety⁵. 5. This, too, that pasture is given⁶ to cattle is taught by him who shall provide care for cattle, because the giving of pasture to them with care is advantageous.

6. This, too, that all for his good who becomes a benefit to him who is good⁷—through that which has come to him—is every benefit which occurs to him who is good; all for his good every benefit is given to every one good by way of similarity in race, species, and nature, and every benefit is given in the way of complete giving which is possible for it.

7. This, too, that whoever shall justly inflict sentence and judgment, really according to the declaration regarding one acquitted or convicted¹, becomes praiseworthy; even for this reason, because the origin of the judgment is the ritual of the ordeal. 8. And this, too, that by him who gives to him who is wise that which is needful for him, an immense² and strong foundation for learning is produced, and the knowledge in the world is augmented.

9. Perfect excellence is righteousness.

CHAPTER LXIII.

Bakō Nask.

1. The seventeenth fargard, Yêzî³, is that whoever maintains the benedictions of the religion⁴, and shall uphold its commands, has thereby made even others learn it; even for this reason, because through this it is much more possible for him to attract others to the religion; and, as to the origin and means of attraction, the attraction is this, that he himself maintains the benedictions of the religion, and the means of attraction are this, that he is an upholder of the commands of the religion.

2. This, too, that by him who shall perform the ritual of an ordeal which is accomplished, the Kin- vad passage¹ is made known; even for this reason, because those even who have accomplished what is a work of the spirit become witnesses, one about the other, as to the facts. 3. This, too, that by him who shall perform that thing whereby a change occurs from evil to good², even that change which is the renovation of the universe is made known, by means even of the evidence of a partial change as regards a perpetual change.

4. This, too, that by him who shall produce generosity for the tillers³ of the world it is then developed; even for this reason, because they become more diligent in tilling the world. 5. This, too, that by him who shall produce benefit for the poor, a development⁴ of the world is produced for them; even for this reason, because through that reason they increase more.

6. This, too, that the creature-forming (dāmîh) of *Aûharmazd*⁵ is occasioned by him whose rule⁶ is for Aûharmazd; even for this reason, because he becomes a holder and attendant of good works.

7. This, too, that the devastation by *Vohûman*⁷ is taught by him whose rule is for Aûharmazd; even for this reason, because he smites sinners and destroys among villains.

8. This, too, that virtuous people are increased in a province⁸ by him who appoints a virtuous governor of the province. 9. This, too, that virtuous instruction is provided and explained by him who loves *Vohûman*⁹. 10. And this, too, that vir-tuous deeds¹ are set going by him who teaches learned sayings and virtuous deeds to him who is good; even for this reason, because the reception of the progressive supply of virtue by the learned becomes more complete.

CHAPTER LXIV.

Bakō Nask.

1. The eighteenth fargard, *Aḍ-mâ-yavâ*², is that, through his complete mindfulness³, the teaching of mankind in virtue is by him, and they become properly intelligent³ through him, whose actions are those which are more daughterly, that is, as reverent unto Aûhar mazd as a daughter unto a father; even for this reason, because his display of the complete mindfulness which is instinctive (âsnîk) is through action, and that action, acquired (srûtîk) for the thoughts of mankind, is kindled by him and has become properly intelligent. 2. This, too, that proper intelligence of things arises for one completely mindful³, even for a daughter to a father, through that complete mindfulness which is instinctive, whereby that lust is excluded which is most violently revered by the male (kûsnö), and, devoid of that, the reverence is assimilated (âgunîhîniḍö) most strongly to one's reverence unto the creator.

3. This, too, that discrimination of the affairs of the sacred beings through wisdom⁴ is taught by him

whose learning is in the affairs of the sacred beings; even for this reason, because discrimination of the affairs of the sacred beings is specially that which is advantageous in the end, and the advantageousness in the end is seen through learning; and, apart from that, he who is learned in the affairs of the sacred beings has taught discrimination of the affairs of the sacred beings through his wisdom¹.

4. This, too, that the joyfulness in righteousness is taught to Frashôstar by him—that is, he would make him ardent in the performance of duty and good works²—who has thoroughly expounded Khûrdad and Amûrdad to Frashôstar³, that is, he maintains him as his high-priest. 5. This, too, that he who shall perform good works ever afresh, has taught him to become ardent in duty and good works². 6. This, too, that Aûharmazd supplies guardianship⁴ to him who gives pleasure to Aûharmazd; even for this reason, because a giver of pleasure to Aûharmazd is any one who is a true servant of Aûharmazd, and Aûharmazd becomes the guardian of a true servant.

7. This, too, that they ever amount to a master⁵ of all commands⁵ for him who is a benefit and sovereignty for that which arises; even owing to this reason, because, in establishing and arranging that which is an absurd (âs kûn) or a virtuous law, the command issued, which is another and further observation of the advantage of the creatures, prepares that which is ever an attainable benefit among the creatures, by means of which, even after symptoms of the life of one's body, it is governed through setting going the usage of that law, and is connected with his mastery of command and his sovereignty.

8. This, too, that Vohûman's having guarded the creature-forming (dâmîh) of Aûharmazd¹ is taught by him whose rule is for Aûharmazd; on this account, because he whose rule is for Aûharmazd has taught the inclination for (padîsâi) being guarded, on this account, because the inclination of the creatures of that ruler for being guarded by the power of goodness, and the creatures being guarded by the power of goodness have published the power of goodness, which is Vohûman, to the multitude.

9. Here is about the reply to Zaratûst concerning the wicked, thus: 'Upon arrival in the fiend's abode², through an immature (khâm) death, they are unprivileged, so that every misery is theirs, and it is not possible for them to seek a remedy.'

10. This, too, that the spirit of reverence comes through invocation to the assistance³ of him who is reverent unto the benefitters; even for this reason, because the spirits respond more particularly to that invoker who becomes their worshipper preponderantly (vâspûharakânîhâ); and for each one of the spirits there is preponderantly a form of worship, as the spirit of liberality is more particularly worshipped through helpfulness (vigîdâr-dahisnîh), the spirit of truth through exact truth (hû-râstîh), the spirit of a promise through true promising (hû-mitrôîh), and the spirit of sovereignty through good sovereignty; and, even so, the worship of the spirit of reverence consists preponderantly in reverence unto the benefiter. 11. This, too, that he whose rule is for Aûharmazd becomes a suppliant for that which is coveted (îstô) from Aûharmazd¹; even for this reason, because what is wisely begged from the sacred beings and rulers, for rendering one's own self worthy, occurs as a benefit owing to the sacred beings and rulers.

12. About the reply of Aûharmazd to Zaratûst, when asked by him about his own, his confederate², and his serf, thus: 'He is thine own, he thy confederate, and he thy serf, even when and where he is a righteous offspring who produces the progress of this thy religion of Mazda-worship, and recites it openly even unto him he knows, who provides the public benedictions, this good practice of thine, that is, he maintains what is provided by thee as benedictions³.'

13. Perfect is the excellence of righteousness.

CHAPTER LXV.

Bakô Nask.

1. The nineteenth fargard, Kad-môî-urvâ⁴, is that the sheep-nature (pâhîh)⁵ is taught to him who is a sheep (gôspend), even for this reason, because the sheep is still among sheep (pâh-iê dên). 2. This, too, that by him who provides pasture for sheep, mankind are nourished (srâyiniâdö)¹ through the sheep; even for this reason, because the nourishment of mankind is through the sheep, and that of the sheep through pasture. 3. This, too, that the sheep of the present worldly state is expounded to him who is a sheep (pâh) to Zaratûst, that is, he has Zaratûst as a high-priest; even for this reason, because still a sheep (pâh-iê) is a sheep.

4. This, too, that strength in virtue is increased and taught by him who produces joyfulness² through seeking gradual development, so that he would do that thing which gives him joyfulness, that is, he would do that thing which becomes his long-continued joy; even for this reason, because increase of strength arises more particularly from pleasure, the pleasure that one is gradually attaining (dêr-padâi). 5. This, too, that by him who shall provide the ceremonial of the sacred beings, the joyfulness² owing to the sacred beings is then connected with his own; even for this reason, because the coming of the sacred beings to it occurs.

6. This, too, that the wisdom³ of Zaratûst is taught and displayed by him who gives thought to the religion of Zaratûst. 7. This, too, that the tongue³ is instructed (farhângîniâdö) in speech by him who becomes discriminating through wisdom. 8. And this, too, that preparation⁴ is taught to them who are benefactors of Zaratûst, or who are so of the religion; even for this reason, because, owing to

that action, disposition, and attraction which are now theirs, they prepare mankind for the religion of Zaratūst. 9. This, too, that whoever teaches the virtuous way to others, they become his through the knowledge of being instructed; even for this reason, because through the enlightenment of that way, they see and act, and are thereby instructed.

10. This, too, that the obeisance¹ for the archangels is performed by him who is a praiser of the archangels. 11. This, too, that assistance is taken² from the sacred beings by him who gives to him who is a suppliant that which is dear to him, because he himself is made worthy by his assistance, and, when made worthy by it, it is then taken by him; and the suppliant is he who is not a suppliant through his mouth, but through worthiness, and what is dear is that which is good about him.

12. This, too, that its being within the day till dawn (val aūsh)³ is taught by him—that is, he would make it as a signal (dakhshakō)³—who is in obeisance, so that he may not neglect till another day the duty and good works which it is requisite for him to perform within the day; even for this reason, because to cause the preservation of the dawn from debased incompatibility (hēr hanbêshth) of duties, it is made exalted by him over the duties. 13. This, too, that complete mindfulness is taught among the existences⁴ by him whose thought among the existences is that he shall perform that thing which is possible to remain good in the world, such as the provision of good sovereignty, orthodoxy, the law of virtuous usage, and others, through which the dwelling, preparation, and living of mankind in the world arise, and the appropriation of any complete mindfulness of that performer is the exaltation which is his owing to that great performance.

14. It is righteousness that is perfect excellence.

CHAPTER LXVI.

Bakō Nask.

1. In the twentieth fargard, Vohû-khshathrem¹, it is also stated by Aûharmazd to Zaratûst the Spîtâmân thus: ‘They who are now in sovereignty are privileged, the human being who is a wicked lying tyrant being not now in sovereignty; moreover, thou shouldst cause some one to thoroughly smite (barâ vânin-âê) him who is causing deception in the embodied world by lamentation (sîvan), and they cause the preservation of death, ruin, and falsehood because they would cause the preservation of his effects (mamanas var ae bôgînênd).’ 2. And this, too, namely: ‘When the sovereignty should be given by them unto him who is good², they would be preserved through that sovereignty of his; moreover, thou shouldst cause some one to thoroughly smite him who is made deceitful by lamentation, and so also death, ruin, and falsehood.’

3. This, too, that by him who shall provide complete mindfulness³ for his own, righteousness is produced; even for this reason, because, through complete mindfulness, the discerning eye of life, which is righteousness, is enlightened. 4. This, too, that the coveted thing (istō) which it is expedient for sovereignty to give away¹ is taught by him who shall provide sovereignty for him who is all-progressive (hamâk-rûbisnō); even for this reason, because the observation, consideration, and action of him who is an all-progressive ruler are about that which is coveted by the multitude and is an advantage for the sovereignty which it is expedient to produce.

5. This, too, that what is produced by the words of Vohûman² is taught by him who shall perform the ceremonial of the sacred beings with the thoughts of Vohûman; even for this reason, because, the mind being with the thoughts of Vohûman, the tongues of the faithful are habituated (khûkîniđakō) in the statements of Vohûman. 6. This, too, that innocence from discontinued (amând) good works is taught by him who remains in virtue; even for this reason, because they are atoned for by him even among important good works.

7. This, too, that the original causer of goodness³ is assisted in causing goodness by him whose fundamental gift (bûn dahisnō) among the existences is that he supplies that which it is requisite for him to give; even for this reason, because in a work, upon which one remains with a thousand men, when one man is bringing his own strength to the labour therein, the 999 other men are assisted by him in that work.

8. This, too, that the way of righteousness³ is not concealed, but taught, by him who is a good considerer as to righteousness; even for this reason, because the sap and root of his righteousness are owing to undiverted thought. 9. This, too, that its being unnecessary to provide repletion for those who are cattle¹ is taught by him who keeps cattle as a controller for beneficers; even for this reason, because they teach and command him.

10. This, too, that housewifery² being performed is taught by that wife who shall joyfully pay reverence to her husband; even for this reason, because her housewifery is for the satisfaction of the husband, the satisfaction is through her reverence, and the reverence arises through joy. 11. This, too, that to love the religion through knowledge³ is taught by him who is peaceful (padmânîk) and Vohûmanic to it; even for this reason, because Vohûmanic peacefulness is understood as religion. 12. And this, too, that the gratification of Aûhar-mazd⁴ is caused by him who teaches for Aûhar-mazd.

13. It is righteousness that is perfect excellence.

CHAPTER LXVII.

Bakš Nask.

1. In the twenty-first fargard, Vahistôisti⁵, it is proclaimed by the righteous Zaratûst, that the ceremonial is performed by him owing to whom our worship is good thinking. 2. This, too, that Vohûman and the liturgy are lodging in the body of him in whose body the religion is lodging; and so is the spirit of goodness, which is peace (paḍmân). 3. This, too, that the good religion is taught in word and deed by him who shall achieve the giving of thought (mînîsn-dahîh) to Vohûman in the ceremonial. 4. This, too, that the archangels become lodging in the body of him who loves Vohûman; even for this reason, because their lodging is in light, purity, and perfume, and the body is illuminated, purified, and perfumed by Vohûman.

5. This, too, that mankind are made diligent in the performance of good works by him who shall providê gifts for the doers of good works. 6. This, too, that by him who loves the beneficial way¹, even others are put in the same way and taught. 7. This, too, that he gives his daughter in daughterhood to his fatherhood², who teaches to the daughter reverence towards her father; even for this reason, because she is made steadfast in daughterhood by him. 8. This, too, that the authority of Vohûman is taught by him who keeps the talent which is hiš for virtue; even for this reason, because from the authority of goodness arise the advantage and freedom from strife of the sciences (hûnarânö).

9. This, too, that a daughter is given to a father for womanly service (nêšmanîh²), and so also a wife to another man, by him who teaches reverence, towards father and husband, to the daughter and the other woman; and so, too, by him who instructs the wife of a man in housewifery; because the advantageous womanly service of a woman for a man arises through reverence towards her husband and good training in housewifery. 10. This, too, that even the reverence of a wife towards a husband is produced by him who gives a woman unto a man; because the giver of possession (khûdîh) becomes praiseworthy even by the act of having given that possession.

² Ibid. 4 a. In § 9 (as in Chap. XLV, 4) there appears to be no confinement of the meaning to matrimony.

11. This, too, that origin and effect (bûn va-bar) are produced for Aûharmazd by him who gives what is necessary unto Aûharmazd and teaches perpetual preservation; what is properly necessary being the origin of the preservation which is the effect of what is properly necessary. 12. This, too, that dominion is acquired for the house of him who keeps the door of the house an opening for the wise; the house being the body, and the door of the house being the ear, eye, and mouth.

13. It is the excellence of righteousness that is perfect.

CHAPTER LXVIII.

Bakō Nask.

1. The beginning of the twenty-second fargard, the Airyaman¹, is the last question (frasnō) beyond the five Gâthas; it is taught for the dominion of Aûharmazd only by him—that is, it is making him ruler of himself—who shall do that which is declared by the passage:—Yâ erezegyôî dâhî drigaovê vahyô¹: who gives delights (vâyagânô) to him who is a right-living poor *man*²—preservation from the destroyer, and the consummation of every happiness.

2. It is perfect excellence that is righteousness.

CHAPTER LXIX.

1. About a selection from the whole Yast³ referring to the developer (vakhshîni⁴dâr-hômônd).

2. Those are beneficial who increase for the developer, that is, they shall occasion benefit (nê-vakîh) for him who would occasion that benefit which is for others⁴. 3. Thus the righteous man who produces perfect thought is he who comes upon it through Vohûman⁵, and the benefit of him who is an open annoyer⁶—the righteous man who is a smiter of the wicked, and who develops as to what is Aûhar⁷mazd's and as to what is Zaratûst's—is that he slays in moderation.

4. Regarding him who is an oppressive man who is righteous, the reply spoken is thus: 'The reward of the smiter and developer—that man of whom onê

³ The twenty-first Nask, or original Yasna (see Bk. VIII, Chap. XLVI, 1). It is not very clear, from this chapter and from what is stated about it in Chap. I, 2, whether this selection was compiled by the author of the Dînkard, or by some earlier writer. So far as its statements have yet been traced, nearly all of them originate in the Gâthas, or in the Yasna Haptanghâiti; but § 45 quotes a passage from the Bakô Nask (Yas. XIX).

knows the smiting and developing—is the very evil reward of him who is wicked; just as his smiting, as an evil reward for him from those two spirits, is that very evil practice loved by him who is wicked; even for this reason every righteous individual is Gâthic¹, because, when privileged (pâdôkhshâi), he who is wicked is thus he who is righteous, and also he who is privileged is unprivileged².

5. Zaratûst proceeded with the smiting at the wicked, and as to that proceeding Aûharmazd spoke thus: 'Thou shouldst thus proceed with smiting at the wicked by ordinance (dâd'istân), because thus they have thee and the righteous of every kind as ruler. 6. Also through my decree (pavan-iê man vigîr) one produces the ritual of ordeal, which realizes that which is real, so that one may make that which is dark fully light. 7. Thine, too, is so much the sovereignty of Aûharmazd, thus through worship, that its requisite (khvâstakô) privilege is thus maintained through virtue, because thou, who art thus, art more unconfined (anâkôsiðar) to the world through the furtherance and development of righteousness; great, indeed, is he who trusts the righteous man for righteousness, and great is he who trusts the wicked man for wickedness.'

8. As to that utterance (farmâyisnô) Zaratûst spoke thus: 'An open annoyer is the righteous man—the benefiter disclosed by Aûharmazd—that loves the embodied world of righteousness, and demands its reverence (tarsakâyîh) for the proportion of righteousness therein, that is, he knows the proportion of duty and good works.' 9. Regarding the worldly existence, the reply spoken is thus: 'That which is again contaminated (gûmîkht-êd) by the demons becomes abundant so long as that which is proper is again contaminated with the demons; and, so long as there is a developer, they subsist for their own substances, so that it is possible for them to seek benefit for their own, and they are smiters of the righteous.'

10. Regarding him who is a wise smiter, Sôshâns¹ spoke in reply. thus: 'It arises through his way when it is again contaminated.'

11. As to that mischief (drûgîsnö) Aûharmazd spoke thus: 'Happy is he from whom there is no mischief.' 12. Regarding² him who has come, the Yim of splendour³, he spoke thus: 'He attains his reward who is no smiter and no developer, not privileged and not unprivileged.'

13. As to that disclosure (hâkîsnö) Vohûman⁴ spoke thus: 'I aggrandize that spiritual lord and that priestly master who is my righteousness in person.'

14. As to that utterance Spendarmad⁴ spoke thus: 'So do thou perfect (barâ vadîdûn) him whose information subsists—a man that becomes wise—who is as an emblem of my religion; because he has worshipped that which is ours, so that he has retained property in our possession, through whose words there is a furtherance of the world of righteousness. 15. love that which thou fully understandest, that is, that arrangement which is righteousness; also whatever discourse and perfect performance, thou askest of us, O Zaratûst! in complete mindfulness, I now practise by the work of each hand; observe thoroughly that which I am performing, and thou, too, art accomplishing. 16. In worship thou, O Zaratûst! art liberal, who art liberal in ceremonial; for thee, whose body believes, controversy is not lavish (râd) for the sake of the wealth bestowed; the reward of Zaratûst the developer is for developing, the reward of Zaratûst the smiter is for smiting, and the reward of Zaratûst the smiter and developer is for smiting and developing. 17. At the bridge judgment of him whose name the fire calls for participation, as when they repeatedly pour the melted ore upon him in the throat, thou shouldst pray near him alive—him whose love is for virtue—so that he may perform duty and good works with fearlessness; with his desire, too, it is expedient to know that it is done by him on account of necessity.’

18. As to that utterance Aûharmazd spoke thus: ‘Such is the upward attraction (lâlâ-hangisnîh) of Shatraver¹ for him who is ours.’ 19. As to that question (frashnô) Aûharmazd spoke thus: ‘Such has happened to him who is ours through Vohûman; he ought to come to our religion through virtue. 20. Truly he, O Zaratûst! is privileged for the sovereignty, who confines his ears to this religion, that he may make it fully progressive; who is given immortality through this, and kind regard for the will of him who is the best of that religion of mine,

O Zaratûst! and who assists the furtherance of this world of mine in righteousness.'

21. As to those of that *other one*¹ Aûharmazd spoke thus: 'As regards that which is great evidence, when wicked they consider it as unattested for him who is wicked himself; and the thoughts² of him, whose deeds are those of that other one, are due to Akômanô³. 22. Owing also to this, when both Khûrdad' and Amûrdad'⁴ are given to thee, it is in that way—when thou art of the propitious spirit and the best thought—that what thou understandest thou shouldst be accomplishing, and what thou dost not understand thou askest again.'

23. Of him whose wisdom exists (aitô)—of Aûharmazd—he whose wisdom arises (yehevûnêd)—Zaratûst—enquired concerning him who is unreal (an-aitô) and who does not subsist (yehevûnêd) hereafter, who has thus never become a material existence for those on the side of virtue, and does not subsist for them henceforth.

24. As to that reverse description (padîrakô-nisânîsnîh) Aûharmazd spoke thus: 'Among men of every kind say unto the righteous who are smiting the wicked, that we improve the measure of any milk they propitiate, even by the holy-water which is the sustenance (barîsnô) of milk, in order to cause much happiness of life.'

25. As to that utterance Aûharmazd spoke thus: 'Happy is he from whom there is no complaint, and a life which is like this the text Gerezôî . . .

The talk of a man which is immoderate is false, everything immoderate is so for this reason, everything is not that which the good man possesses, because, when privileged, the wicked one is he who is righteous, and he who is privileged becomes unprivileged; he who is righteous is thus he who is wicked, and becomes him who is privileged and unprivileged, so that he is fully incriminated, and they shall carry off his possessions.'

² Yas. XLVI, 7; its Pahlavi version (Pahl. Yas. XLV, 7 a-e) may be translated as follows:—'Who is given to me (and mine, my disciples) as protector by thee, O Aûharmazd! when that wicked (Aharman) retains malice for me in possession (that is, maintains malice with me? Who shall provide me protection), other than thy fire and Vohûman? (Because I know that they would provide me protection for your sake) when I nourish righteousness through deeds for them, O Aûharmazd! (that is, should I perform duty and good works, who shall provide me protection?) Thou shouldst proclaim to me that high-priest of the religion; (this thou shouldst state thus: "Maintain the religion as high-priest").'

⁴ Compare Ibid. 14 a which is given in Pt4, Mf4, as follows:—Zarātûstô mûn lak aharûbô dôstô.

28. Regarding the benefitters the reply spoken is thus: 'They are owing to the reward of the smiter and developer; those are beneficial whose smiting and developing are those of the developer Aûharmazd, who understands smiting and development.'

29. When through smiting by Aûharmazd, on account of the wicked, a question (frashnō) about it arose, the reply spoken, as to the smiting of the present world by means of him who is ruler, was: 'The reward which the judgment that is perfect teaches is thus, that he who is the smiter and developer, Sôshâns¹, shall make the decision.' 30. Zaratûst spoke in reply thus: 'He gives a reward.' 31. And that wise smiter, Sôshâns, spoke in reply thus: 'He shall inflict punishment.'

32. Even he who is an ox of many cattle has openly and publicly wailed this complaint² on account of the righteous one: 'How long is it till the time when a developer arises, even he who is an irresolute ruler (akâmakō khûdâi)? How long is the time till he arises, until the wicked one who is a smiter and privileged corrupter is he who is unprivileged?' 33. Because, for the sake of producing resolution (kâmak-dahîh), he complains that, until the developer shall arise, even he who is irresolute is ruler, that is, until he who is the developer shall become privileged.

34. As to that complaint of his Aûharmazd spoke thus: 'Not so as by this complaint is the obtainment of spiritual lordship (ahûîkîh), for this reason, when they do not consider the ruler as a ruler, and there is no giving of priestly authority (radōîh) by any righteousness whatever¹, it is requisite, on account of the many righteous, to speak henceforth, until the time when the developer arises, even of him who is an irresolute ruler.'

35. On account of the many statements of the spirits, even as to thought, word, and deed, it is requisite to say that they shall always render an account until even some obtainment of a smiter and developer, privileged or unprivileged. 36. Some arise of whom it is requisite to ask this question (frashnō)² while he who is righteous and he who is wicked are two witnesses, and they make the righteous one manifest by his evidence, or they molest him who is righteous by smiting. 37. Some arise when it is requisite to speak this reply³ during the smiting of the maintainer of strife and of the kinsman. 38. And some arise while that individual⁴ is loved, though a righteous one and a developer arise, and it is requisite to produce a provider of benefit on account of the many, both wicked and righteous, so long as a wicked one of the smiting which is maintaining strife is privileged.

- 39. Because, regarding the production of resolution, it is proclaimed that it is so that they shall fully understand that Aûharmazd discriminates truly, and Aharman does not discriminate truly. 40. And that it is so that they shall fully understand that the punishment of the wicked is for teaching them that they will attain to the existence of darkness, that even to him who belongs to the ever-stationary they may give his reward, that they are for smiting the wicked one, that they are very powerful to give, that they should kill the apostate, that one has to be converted from vileness to goodness, that he who would be wicked is made to believe by the tongue, that for the sake of proper nurture of the creatures next-of-kin marriage is provided, that the demons are despised, that thus he who is evil-ruling is wicked, and that they are approaching the place where Aûharmazd shall provide for the account of sin and good works.

41. They shall become more diligent in the performance of duty and good works, and abstain more from sin, always until one attains even to some acquirement for those in life and those in a lifeless state¹. 42. And they shall not inflict their punishment completely in the embodied state, and the fiend does not pity the worldly existence; every individual is counted up, and every one is fully completed for the affairs of Aûharmazd, but the fiend is not smitten, and they shall not fully inflict the punishment.

43. No one thinks thou shouldst remain for the propitious Aûharmazd, and no one completely presents himself; they attack through the fiend, and arise for the foolish one. 44. No one arises for the goodness of him who is good, but for the vileness of the fiend they destroy what is good, and do not understand evil and good; they recite the revelation for a wicked one, they do not bestow friendship for labour, but are for the evil-doer.

FROM THE SELECTIONS

ZÂD-SPARAM¹.

1. About the three divisions of revelation there is a condensed medium, beneficial and small, of whose subdivision one category (*ragistak*ö) is collection together; that is, the Ahunavair² itself is a symbol of the Nask̄s.

2. First, the Ahunavair is apportioned into its three degrees (paďmân), as shown in another chapter; and by a like system (ragistak) the Gâthas³, too, are into three, which are the three-lined, four-lined, and five-lined⁴; even so the Nask̄s

² See Dk. VIII, Chap. I, 7.

⁴ The three-lined stanzas of the Gâthas are 100 in the Ahunavairi (Yas. XXVIII-XXXIV), 40 in the Yasna of seven hâs (Yas. XXXV-XLI), and 22 in the Vohû-khshathra (Yas. LI), altogether 162 three-lined stanzas; the four-lined are one in the Ustavairi (Yas. XLVI, 15), 41 in the Spentâ-mainyû (Yas. XLVII-L), and nine in the Vahistôisti (Yas. LIII), altogether 51 four-lined stanzas; are denominated Gâthic, Hadha-mâthric, and Law. 3. Then the Ahunavair is apportioned into six which they call half-lines (nêm-gâs); so, too, the Gâthas are into six, which are called the Ahunavaiti Gâtha, the Yasna, the Ustavaiti¹ Gâtha, the Spentâ-mainyû (Spetamatö) Gâtha, the Vohû-khshathra Gâtha, and the Vahistôisti Gâtha; even so the Nasks are into six, as the Gâthas are into two, which are called one the Gâthic creation—which is the Yast²—and one the rest of the Gâthic; also the Hadha-mâthric into two, one the Mâthra of the arranger—which is the Pâkîñö and Radö-dâdö-aitö³—and one the Mâthra full of good tokens, which is the rest of the Hadha-mâthra; and also the Law into two, one the law against the demons—which is the Vendîdâd⁴—and one the law of Zaratûst, which is the rest of the Law. 4. Then it is apportioned into twenty-one, such as the twenty-one words (mârîk) of the Ahunavair; also the Gâthas are into twenty-one, which are the Ahunavair, the praise of righteousness, the performance of the good, and from Yânîm-manô unto Airyaman⁵ which, being and the five-lined stanzas are the remaining 65 in the Ustavaiti (Yas. XLIII–XLVI); making the total of 278 stanzas mentioned in § 5. Yas. XLII is a later supplement to the Yasna of seven hâs, and, in the MSS. Pt₄, Mf₄, it is headed as follows:—Avar vaharakö-î haft hâdö Yastö yazisnîk bûn, ‘the beginning of worshipping as regards the portions of the Yasna of seven hâs.’

⁵ The three sacred formulas, Yathâ-ahû-vairyô, Ashem-vohû, accomplished (âkarđō), are twenty-one; and the Nasks are twenty-one.

5. Then the Gâthas are apportioned into 278¹ stanzas (vêkêstō); and the Nasks also into 278 categories, every single category having borne a form like a single verse², as regards how much and how anything good is indicated, such as the Patkâr-radistân³, in which what is legally disputable is reported (pêdâkō); the Zâkhmistân⁴, by which the penalty of assault (zâkhm) is reported; the Stôritân⁵, by which the sin and amount of penalty for a wound, as regard beasts of burden and cattle, are reported; the Aratêstârîstân⁶, by which battle is reported; the Pasûs-haûrvastân⁷, by which the customary keeping of sheep in control is reported; the Gûrdâi-zarîtunistân ('corn-sowing code')⁸, by which agriculture is reported; the Varîstân⁹, by which an ordeal being accomplished is reported; and others of a like description.

and Yêxhê-hâtâm, with the seventeen hâs of the five real Gâthas, and either the Yasna of seven hâs, counted as a single item, or the Airyaman, will make up the twenty-one divisions (compare the names applied to each fargard of the Sûdkar, Varstmânsar, and Bakō Nasks in Dk. IX).

6. Then the Gâthas are apportioned into 1016¹ metrical lines (gâs), and the Nasks into 1000 Hâs and Fargards², and, since the Hâdôkht³ is the priestly master (radô) of the Nasks, and the remedy⁴ (darmôn) which is a perfect statement about the master of the resurrection, the existence of its fargards about the other fargards is therefore 1000 remedies fully combined, being the corn and fodder that are shut up (bastakô) when, over that thousand, they supply one that is great, which in every way protects them from hail and rain, from the wind which is hot and that which is cold.

7. Then the Gâthas are apportioned into 6666 words (mârik)⁵, and as to the Nasks, too, their own 6666 ordinances (dâdistânô) are therein severed.
8. And the 6666 words, which are in the Gâthas, are

⁵ According to Sls. XIII, 50 the six Gâthas (including the Yasna of seven hâs) contain 5567 vâkâk, 9999 mârik, and 16,554 khûrâk; which enumeration makes the meaning of mârik doubtful. In our present text, however, it must have its usual meaning of 'word,' as the number of 6666 words in the six Gâthas can be obtained by including the customary repetition of the first stanza of each Hâ of the five real Gâthas, with the text of the Airyaman and of the introductions to Yas. XXVIII, XXXV, and probably the homage formula prefixed to each Gâtha; also by considering each component of a compound as a separate word, and all verbal prefixes as separable; and by counting all enclitics except -kâ, in accordance with the different modes of treating -kîd and -kâ in counting the words of the Ahunavair. If the three sacred formulas were included, and the Airyaman and five homage formulas were omitted, the total would be nearly the same.

an indicator of the period from the adversary having come to the creatures, as far as unto the end of the six millenniums¹—each millennium being ten centuries—which amount to 60 single centuries—a century being ten tens²—and up to the time when its³ cold and distress arrive, which become awful; the 600, including the excess as far as one ten⁴, are years of the 6000 years which are the words of the six Gâthas that are the first indicator of the six millenniums; therefore of the 60 centuries are then the 600 and those which are added to them (zak-i ghal).

9. And after those 6000, which are the 6000 years, are the Airyaman⁵ of Ashavahist and the accompanying sayings (ham-vâkô) which are at the end of the Gâthas; those are the 57 years of Sôshâns⁶, and for the sake of them, too, are the Airyaman and from the praise of righteousness at its end to the consecration of the Airyaman, originally 57 words (mârik), because the praise of righteousness for the Airyaman is 12, and the consecration of the Airyaman is 21, of the original 57⁷.

³ Assuming that mûnas, 'whose,' stands for amatas.

⁴ As the cipher for 'one' precedes that for 'ten,' it may possibly mean 'one less than ten,' as in the Roman IX. At any rate, 6609 years with the 57 accounted for in § 9 make up the requisite total of 6666; but the mode of making this number correspond with the six millenniums is not very clear.

⁶ See Dk. VIII, Chap. XIV, 14; Bd. XXX, 7.

⁷ The Airyaman contains 24 words, its Ashem-vohû 12, and its consecration (Yas. LIV, 2) 21 words, making altogether 57 words.

CHAPTER VII¹.

The ninth question.

1. Another apostate enquired thus: 'When there is Māthra that is said to be all in the words of Aûharmazd to Zaratûst, whether it be in the words of Frashôstar and Gâmâsp², or be in the words of Vohû-man³ and the sacred beings, or be in words of theirs published before the time of Zaratûst, or even after that of Sênô⁴, is it to be considered by us, as to that which is relating to us, that what is the utterance of Aûharmazd to Zaratûst is only the Gâthic, and the rest is composed by Zaratûst and his disciples from the world, even statements due to a good inclination for conversion (vastakîh)?'

2. The reply is that the other Māthra which is separate from the Gâthas, if it be apart from the Gâthas, is still owing to the composition of the Yathâ-ahû-vairyô⁵; and the same separate Māthra, which is from a witness about it, is the evidence with Aûharmazd himself in vigorous omniscience and composition, and not owing to the knowledge of mankind, which shall not attain even to an atom of the atoms thereof. 3. The arising of the Māthra, through the speaking of many voices, is not all the speaking of Aûharmazd to Zaratûst through those voices, but the speaking of several separately, through which the speaking of the voice would be evidently that of Aûharmazd; that is this Māthra. 4. And just as the speaking forth of Zaratûst and other good men, as well as evil ones, likewise of those who are demons, even as far as the evil spirit, is stated by Aûharmazd in public, that statement would become even that of the evil spirit and demons, and the Māthra and Law against the demons would likewise become spoken by the demons. 5. And the Māthra is all confided by Aûharmazd to Zaratûst through many voices, being an avowal of Aûharmazd to Zaratûst, and an existence which is not inconsistent (han-bêshin); just as the Gâthas, which even you admit to be, as a whole, confided by Aûharmazd to Zaratûst, are spoken through the voice of Zaratûst, be they through the voices of the archangels, be they through the voice of Gôs-aûrvan¹, or be they through the voices of other sacred beings, to all they are spoken by Aûharmazd to Zaratûst, and are not inconsistent. 6. But owing to the disposition of an apostate there is a longing scrutiny about his own statements, and evil-thinking scrutiny about the statements protecting the spiritual lord.

CHAPTER CLXI.

1. About one supremely² acquainted with the three³ codes (dâdō) of the Mazda-worshipping religion there is this:—One supremely acquainted with the three codes of the Mazda-worshipping religion is he of the primitive faith whose insight into the good religion is even such that he knows how to discriminate and announce the statements (vâkakö) of the Hadha-māthric and Gāthic from those of the Law, those of the Legal and Gāthic from those of the Hadha-māthric, and those of the Hadha-māthric and Legal from those of the Gāthas. 2. Also to the statements (vâkakö) in the Law—which is superior¹ knowledge about the worldly existences—is allotted (vakhtö) the worldliness of the Hadha-māthric and also of the Gāthic; to those in the Gāthas—which are superior knowledge about the spiritual existences—is allotted the spirituality of the Hadha-māthric and even that of the Law; and to those in the Hadha-māthra—which is superior knowledge about things intermediate between the spiritual and worldly existences—is allotted the intermediate matter (mīyânikih) of the Gāthic and also of the Legal².

CHAPTER CLXV.

1. About the purport of the evidence of the three codes of the Mazda-worshipping religion, one as regards the other, there is verbal evidence of the Gāthic from the Hadha-māthric and the Law, and about the Hadha-māthric and the Law from the Gāthas. 2. The purport, too, of the statement that occurs is this of a ruler putting aside the commands of an enemy—which are declared, in many passages (dīvâk) of the Hadha-māthric and even of the Legal, to be worthiness of death—the purport being in the words of a Gāthic phrase (nisang) that is even this :—‘ He who is a good ruler is a desire and bringing on of fortune for me (va/ām)¹.’ 3. All rulers also for the world have arisen for their own, and for maintaining him who is high-priest; they are submissive, and any one accomplishing their commands—which are putting aside the commands of their enemy—is, owing to their submissiveness, authorisedly maintaining his own person and wealth in the world thereby, and in the world there is no place, nor yet a share of anything therefrom, on account of which he becomes offended by the world.

4. The evidence of the Hadha-māthric and of the Legal about a Gāthic statement is the purport of these words in a Gāthic phrase, that ‘not for him who is rightly proceeding is there further ruin²;’ and the evidence from the Hadha-māthric is even this which states that ‘rectitude assists a man like a regiment a thousand strong³;’ also for the proportion of rectitude in his possession there is no disturbance whatever, and from the hurtful (vinâsîgânō) from without he is thus protected, because fully-worshipping (pûr-yazân) performance is freedom from danger from the want of freedom from wickedness (a-adarvandîh) of the enemy, as regards benefit, through the doing of injury by him.

5. And on account of the superior knowledge of the spiritual existence, moreover, for the Gāthas, above the intermediate Hadha-māthric and the lower knowledge of the Law, the purpose of the Gāthic was for the statements of the Legal and the Hadha-māthric, and the provision of the Hadha-māthric and the Legal was evidently for the statements of the Gâthas.

CHAPTER CXCVII.

6. One¹ is that, on account of him who gave the Legal, and is also the protector of a priestly master who is given over to the Hadha-mâthric, and the Gâthic, through which the purity of the good creations arises, one is more steadfastly to aggrandise and develope them.

DĪNKARD.—BOOK IV².

1. Obeisance to the Mazda-worshipping religion which is opposed to the demons and is the ordinance of Aûharmazd.

² This book commences with an account of the seven archangels, and, illustrative of the 'desirable dominion' personified in Shatraver, the fourth of them, a statement is made of the legendary history of the efforts made by the good rulers, from Vistâsp to Khûsrôî Anôsharavân, for the preservation of Avesta and Pahlavi

2. The fourth book is matter for instruction from the statements selected, from the instruction of the good religion, by the saintly (hû-fravardō) Âtûr-farnbag¹, son of Farukhō-zâd and leader of those of the good religion.

3. From the Selection of Customary Instruction² there is this:—Number one is the actual original evolution³, resembling only himself and not designed (êimîk). 4. Number two, the duplication of the first among those akin (khvêstîgân) owing to the consciousness of creation—which is the first—is Vohûman; but it is his origin, concealed from the destroyer, which is the reason of the creation.

10. Number three is the original creature Ashavahist⁴—due to development among those akin, one out of another—who possesses the third place among the archangels, for the reverence of the first.

12. Number four, the perfect sovereignty among literature. Most of this statement has been already translated at the end of Haug's Essay on Pahlavi, from a less perfect MS. than B, but, as some of the accompanying text is obscure, it has now been necessary to translate the whole of it to ascertain its connection clearly, although only so much of this translation is here given as will indicate this connection in a general way.

those akin, is named Shatraver¹, the necessity of the stored-up (avar-gûdô) nature of a spiritual lord arisen from the reverence of the perfectly just doer Ashavahist, who is the third in arising from him who is the second, Vohûman, who is the first creature. . . . 19. So, too, the sovereignty of the religion is ever specially good sovereignty and triumphant, and the true religion is confident; the will of the sacred beings in the world is progress, and the comprisal of every knowledge is in the Mazda-worshipping religion; the correct attainment of its good sovereignty and their joint statement are together really on account of their concealed good protection and progressive production, one for the other. 20. They strive for the powerful maintenance of the religious good monarchy of rulers, trusty in religion through practising Mazda-worship; the law of the rulers is custom, and their custom is religious.

21. Vistâsp², the king when he became relieved (pardakhtô) from the war with Ar'gâsp³, sent to the chief rulers about the acceptance of the religion, 'and the writings⁴ of the Mazda-worshipping religion, which are studded with all knowledge through resources and learning of many kinds, and also the tongue of a Magian man (Magôî-gabrâ), arisen in the very same instructed duty, it is expedient you should send (sedrûnêdô) therewith.' 22. Now

*Arezrâspô*¹, and others from outside of *Khvanîras*², came to Frashôstar for religious enquiry, with complete intelligence for the most who did so.

23. *Dârâi*³, son of Dârâi, ordered the preservation of two written copies of the whole Avesta and Zand, according to the receiving of it by Zaratûst from Aûharmazd; one in the treasury of *Shapîgân*⁴, and one in the fortress of written documents.

24. *Valkhas*⁵, descendant of Askân, in each district, just as he had come forth, ordered the careful preservation, and making of memoranda for the royal city (shatrô shahag), of the Avesta and Zand as it had purely come unto them, and also of whatever instruction (âmûkô-kê), due to it, had remained written about, as well as deliverable by the tongue through a high-priest, in a scattered state in the country of Irân, owing to the ravages and devastation of Alexander and the cavalry and infantry of the *Arûmans*⁶.

That (valman-1-î) Artakhshatar¹, king of kings, who was son of Pâpak, summoned Tôsar, and also all that scattered instruction (âmûkō), as true authority, to the capital; Tôsar having arrived, him alone he approved, and, dismissing the rest of the high-priests, he also gave this command, namely: 'For us every other exposition of the Mazda-worshipping religion becomes removed, because even now there is no information or knowledge of it below.'

26. Shahpûhar², king of kings and son of Artakhshatar, again brought together also the writings which were distinct from religion, about the investigation of medicine and astronomy, time, place, and quality, creation (dahisnō), existence, and destruction (vinâsisnō), the submission of a wild beast³, evidence, and other records and resources that were scattered among the Hindûs, and in Arûm⁴ and other lands; and he ordered their collocation again with the Avesta, and the presentation of a correct copy of each to the treasury of Shapîgân⁵; and the settlement (astinîdanō) of all the erring upon the Mazda-worshipping religion, for proper consideration, was effected.

and brought all statements to proper consideration and investigation; and after the preservation of Âtûrpâd¹, through the statement which he maintained (pasâkhtō) with all those of different sects, and the Nasks were enumerated, he also spoke this even to those who were heterodox, namely: 'Now, when the religion is recognised by us in the worldly existence, we do most diligently endeavour that they shall not allow the infidelity (agdênôih) of any one whatever;' and he acted accordingly.

28. This (le-denman-1-i²) Khûsrôit³, king of kings who is son of Kavâd, as apostasy and tyranny were fully antagonistically smitten by him⁴, and information and redoubled proper consideration were abundantly augmented—through a declaration from the religion unto every apostasy of the four classes (pîsakō)—also spoke even this as to winning the sacred beings (yazdân khariđih), namely: 'The truth of the Mazda-worshipping religion is fully understood, and the intelligent are steadfastly capable through proper consideration; but recognition by the worldly existence has mostly become exceedingly scattered, and the particulars are not possible through proper consideration, but through purity of thought,

29. 'We also call, each of those called by us, a priest of Aûharmazd, whose perception of the spiritual existence is manifested unto us; and our wide resources, the perception of the spiritual existence and the example of the worldly one, are likewise indications of both natures that are complete. 30. And we invite (bavîhûnêm) those invited¹, even with that excellence and efficiency which are due to them, on account of which the sacred beings are predominantly over Irân; the country of Irân having proceeded onwards through instruction from the Mazda-worshipping religion which the ancients celebrated. 31. The knowledge of the sociable ceremonial (ham-yazisnih)—for which, indeed, those of the intelligent of disunited Khvanîras are not in a dispute of antagonism—is, in that way, mostly the sonorous (aêvâzîk) Avesta, in the pure statement of the writing adornable by memoranda of particulars; and even the simple wordless (avâkîk) mode is maintained in the announcement of the statement.

32. 'Even then all the domestic (khânîk) knowledge of the Mazda-worshipping religion is really on this account, which is understood by us, that, when all are intellectual (vîr-hômônd), and the proper consideration of a stranger (bîgânakô) is owing to the world of the Mazda-worshipping religion, they arrive at this place. 33. But through the new possession and proper consideration of the stranger, owing to the Mazda-worshipping religion, they are not capable of bringing about so much acquirement and manifestation of knowledge, for the advantage and open duty of the worldly existence, as is in the recitation of a priestly master through much investigation, and is abundantly well-considered. 34. And if we command, with the utmost solicitude, the proper consideration of the Avesta and Zand of the primitive Magian statements (Magôî-gobisnô), which are more humbly observant, better disposed, good, and ever renewed uneffacedly, as well as an increase of acquirement worthily therefrom, for the knowledge of those of the world, there is no necessity of first acquiring the quality of creation from the creator, by those who are worldly existences, for understanding the creator and the marvellousness of the spiritual existences; or all necessity of acquiring is said to be longing through scanty knowledge.

35. 'They who are a counterpart (aêdûnôîh) of manifestation from the religion—and even through the resemblance there is a possibility of the existence of understanding—are mentioned as effecting proper consideration (hû-sikâl-gar); and he who has to exhibit enlightenment (rôshanô) through knowledge, has to maintain acquaintance with the religion. 36. And since the origin of every knowledge is the religion, alike through spiritual power, and alike through worldly manifestation¹, that which any one has wisely spoken—even though not considered by him as similarly beheld (ham-dîdô) by any Avesta declaration—is still then accounted as a manifestation from the religion, whose business is

² These extracts from the Persian Rivâyats are taken from MS. 29 belonging to the Bombay University Library, which is a copy, made A. D. 1679, from a long Rivâyat said to have been compiled by Baizû Kâmdîn. The same extracts are to be found in many other MSS.

II. FROM THE RIVÂYAT OF KÂMAH BAHRAH¹.

1. The name of the first of these books is Stôd-yast², and this is a book of thirty-three compilations (žûrat), that is, of thirty-three subdivisions (kardah). The sending down of this book was for the description of the Lord³ and his angels; and he made it an indispensable duty for the whole world that they learn this book by heart, and for this purpose they form an assembly. Of this total of twenty-one Nasks it is one Nask of the Avesta, and in that mode they recite this.

2. The name of the second is Stûdgar⁴, and this is of twenty-two subdivisions, which God, the praise-use 600 years ago, as we find that Rûstâm Mitrô-špân (the writer of the original from which K1 was copied A.D. 1324) considered the Vendîdâd as the nineteenth Nask, corresponding to the Avesta word drigubyô in the Ahunavair. In Olshausen and Mohl's Fragments relatifs à la religion de Zoroastre, a similar list of the Nasks is extracted from Anquetil's Great Rivâyât, in which the order and orthography of the names of the Nasks are the same as those adopted by the later writers of the Persian Rivâyats, beginning with the Stôd-yast and ending with the Hâdokht (which makes the Vendîdâd the twentieth Nask), and reversing the order of the Kîdrast and Spentah, as well as that of the Duvâsarôgîd and Hûspârâm.

¹ This writer is often quoted in the Rivâyats, but no particulars about him have been noticed. Another copy of this text occurs in MS. 225 of Ouseley's Collection (O225, fols. 15-19) in the Bodleian Library at Oxford; Olshausen and Mohl (OM) combine the information given in II and III; and MS. 10 of Haug's Collection in the State Library at Munich (MH10, fols. 55-57) combines II and IV.

worthy and exalted, sent down for prayer and virtue, authority and intercession, and giving union to kindred.

3. The name of the third is Vahist-mânthrah¹, and that is of twenty-two subdivisions, which God, the praiseworthy and exalted, sent down for faith and heedfulness in religion. One is reminded, in this book, about the intention and character of Zaratust; also the goodness of the creation, and the good actions before Zaratust; and the narrative of this book extends in this manner up to the resurrection.

4. The name of the fourth is Bagh²; this book is of twenty-one parts (pârah) or subdivisions, and its explanation is about whatever is in the religion; also a declaration of God, the praiseworthy and exalted, and of whatever the Lord has made incumbent on mankind as to devotion and heedfulness, as to justice and virtue, and as to good actions, closing the path of Satan to oneself, and approaching the last abode, that is, the other world.

5. The name of the fifth is Dvâzdah-hâmâst³, and the commentary of this book is for assistance⁴. This book is of thirty-two subdivisions, which God, the praiseworthy and exalted, sent down in remembrance of the beginning of the creatures of the upper world and lower world. Also a description of the whole of them, and of whatever the Most Just, the praiseworthy and exalted, has made mention in the lawful, which is lawful and which unlawful, and how they slaughter them; which it is and how it is necessary to slaughter it for the sake of a season-festival, and whatever is about a season-festival; how it is necessary to celebrate it, and the person who takes the things¹; the expense of a season-festival and how much the reward is; how it is necessary to give to the priests, controllers (radân), and high-priests, and to any persons who are without doubts, who in speech, action, and intention are virtuous, and any persons who recite the season-festival liturgy. And everything wise is in this book; and this is incumbent on all people that they learn this, and it is the same for all till the days of the guardian spirits; and every one who possesses knowledge seeks for this, and causes intercession by mankind, for the sake of the worthy, such as clothing for a righteous gift, so that one obtains recompense in the end from heaven; and it is necessary to give this clothing for a righteous gift to relations and the worthy.

• 7. The name of the seventh is Pâgam⁴, and this is a book of twenty-two subdivisions, which God, the praiseworthy and exalted, sent down about quadrupeds and how it is necessary to render them

8. The name of the eighth is Ratustâyî², and this is of fifty subdivisions, but when, after the time of Alexander, they held an enquiry, they found no more than thirteen subdivisions. And these are about the affairs of the king and obedience, judges and whatever becomes important in holding enquiries, philosophers and devotees; about the edifices of cities, constructed and made magnificent, birds and species of animals, fish and whatever is Ormazd's, the fowls of Ormazd besides the creatures of Aharman; likewise mountains, rivers, and land, and the like of these.

9. The name of the ninth is *Baris*¹, and this is a book of sixty subdivisions, but after the time of Alexander they found again no more than twelve subdivisions. And these are about descriptions of kings and judges, and an investigation of their authority and their sufficiency; also the relations of a peasant with peasants, of a king with the kingdom, of judges with a judge, and whatever remains therein. Any actions that are for every nation, how they are ordered, and the option as to their species and nature; also whatever the people know, and the advantage that arises therefrom; besides the sins of people, deceit, telling lies, and whatever remains therein.

10. The name of the tenth is *Kaskasirah*², and this is a book of sixty subdivisions, but after the calamity of Alexander they found again no more than fifteen. Its explanation is about the distinction (faḡl) of natural wisdom and knowledge³ from acquired knowledge, that is, the knowledge born from the mother, and the knowledge and instruction they learn; one learned in purity and truthful speaking, and anything that has brought mankind with virtue out of evil, and with purity out of defilement, and this keeps the doctrine praised and great, and whoever is in the vicinity of a king, and is a peasant, becomes greater in honour and dignity; and, in like manner, any things from which advantage arises for mankind; and, as to those who tell lies, how it occurs in the vicinity of kings and peasants.

11. The eleventh is the Vistâsp-shâh¹, and that is of sixty compilations, but after the calamity of Alexander they found again no more than ten subdivisions. It is about Gustâsp's acceptance of the sovereignty, and as to the religion of Zaratust—who was skilful in reciting the religion, and maintaining it and making it current in the world—he chose the religion of Zaratust.

12. The name of the twelfth is 'Hast², and this is of twenty-two subdivisions, which are sent down in six portions (guzû). The first is about knowing the Lord, may he be honoured and glorified! and faith on account of Zaratust. The second portion is about the obedience of kings, the truth of the religion, complying with commands and resisting them, and restraining one's hand from bad actions. The third portion is about the promise to benefactors and their recompense, evildoers and punishment, and escaping hell. The fourth portion is about the mansions of the world, agriculture, trimming trees, such as the date tree, and whatever remains thereof; the trouble and power of mankind and quadrupeds therefrom, and the obedience they exercise; they are the people to whom heedfulness is attributed, and whatever remains thereof; and the high-priests perform their duty by the law of the religion. The fifth portion is about the ranks of mankind, and those are four ranks: the first is to maintain the king grandly, and, next, the judges and the learned in religion; the second rank is to keep watch over the cities, and to annihilate the enemy; of the third rank are writers and, secondarily, cultivators and the society of cities; of the fourth rank are the people of trade, artizans, market-dealers, and tax-gatherers, in war they appear excited, and it is requisite to give a tithe to the high-priests and king; they keep on foot the obeisances and good works of which we have spoken, and, when they act thus, they obtain great rewards in the end¹.

13. The name of the thirteenth is Sfind², and that is of sixty subdivisions which are sent down for the information of people who are in want of it, and for the knowledge of those persons who become covetous of virtuous actions, and act after the proceedings of the learned and people of religion, and receive advantage therefrom; also as reminders that there is advantage from the daily practice of them. And this book is our reminder about the accounts of the apostle Zaratust by religious people, and whatever is the allotment of God, the exalted; about the false speaking of the people of the world, and about the goodness of the condition of the people of the world. Also whatever becomes manifest in ten years, about the miracles of Zaratust, by the seven reports that they recite.

14. The name of the fourteenth is Girast³, and this is of twenty-two subdivisions sent down for the understanding of the causes of mankind, which have made people manifest in the mother's womb, and afterwards those who come out of the womb, some of whom are apostles, some kings, and some peasants; and whatever remains therein.

15. The name of the fifteenth is Baghân-yast¹, and it is of seventeen subdivisions in praise of the creations of God, the praiseworthy and exalted, and the angels admitted to him; also thanksgiving for his favours, and that which he makes expedient in the religion, augments the thanksgiving for his favour, until one obtains it back in the end; likewise the appearance of the angels, and this is noble. Praise be to the sacred being, the exalted!

16. The name of the sixteenth is Niyâram², and that is of fifty-four subdivisions, about decrees as to riches, introducing inmates among outsiders, and whatever is made lawful by the exalted Lord; obtaining deliverance from hell, performing service, slavery, and the nature of wayfarers, and every one who performs service and produces remembrance for mankind; whatever is in the thoughts of mankind, and whatever is in the bodies of mankind.

17. The seventeenth is Aspâram³, and this is of sixty-four subdivisions which are sent down about rituals, those which are in the book of the people of the religion, and an examination of the people's expense they know of, for the safety and punishment they order in the world until they obtain deliverance in the end; and whatever they do lawfully and do unlawfully they know; also decrees as to inheritances and the limits of faith, about anything which they sow and whatever they grow, and about regulating nativity; whatever one makes incumbent on memory, and whatever one makes incumbent on mêmoranda prepared; also how it is necessary to produce whatever tokens there are at the time of childbirth.

18. The name of the eighteenth is Duvâsarôni-gad¹, and it is of sixty-five subdivisions; robbers of human beings and quadrupeds, whatever one makes incumbent that they shall give, and an enumeration of what one makes incumbent on each one of them, owing to theft and terror, obstructing the roads, the dread of the wayfarers, and the disturbance of prisons; and whatever remains therein.

19. The name of the nineteenth is Askâram², and it is of fifty-two subdivisions, about judges and philosophers, the method of examining decrees, the knowledge of definitions, and an opinion of those in other matters.

20. The name of the twentieth is Vendîdâd³, and that is of twenty-two subdivisions, for causing the abstinence of mankind from bad actions, from the devil and disgrace, foreign magicians and those who act after their proceedings and become committers of crime; and we are told of their crime among the whole of the goodness and purity, and the whole of the wickedness and defilement, and the explanation of them.

³ Ibid. Chap. XLIV.

21. The name of the twenty-first is Hâdokht¹, and this is a book of thirty subdivisions, about the manner of bringing together and the abundance of miracles, also the excellence and connections of them. And the accursed devil goes far from every one who recites this book together with the Yast², and this person is near to the rank (pâtgâh) of a sacred being, and his sins become pure; also in this book the accursed devil becomes cursed, and God knows it.

III. FROM THE RIVÂYAT OF NARÊMÂN HÔSHANG³.

1. Again, that which is in Pahlavi characters is clear in that manner, that in the Yathâ-ahû-vairyô there are twenty-one vocables, that is, twenty-one words, and beneath each word there is an equivalent meaning; it is also known to the devout that there are twenty-one Nasks of the Avesta.

2. The first Nask is of thirty-three subdivisions, that is, it is of thirty-three compilations, and its name is Stôd-yast, that is, 'producing the praise of the sacred beings;' and the words of the book have come down for the majesty of the sacred beings and angels, and they recite them in that manner; and in the presence of every high-priest of the pure ritual, who rightly understands its Avesta and Zand, as he recites them correctly on three occasions, the angels come down ; of this there is no doubt.

3. The name of the second is Istûdgar, and it is of twenty-two subdivisions ; its statements are for the admonition of the people.

4. The name of the third Nask is Vahist-mânthrah, and it is of twenty-two subdivisions ; its purport is to bring confirmation of the religion.

5. The name of the fourth is Bagh, and this is of twenty-one subdivisions ; its explanation is about heedfulness.

6. The name of the fifth is Dvâzdah-hâmâst, and it is of thirty-two subdivisions ; its explanation is in remembrance of the upper world, and about the lower world.

7. The name of the sixth is Nâdar, and that is of thirty-five compilations ; its explanation is about the interpretation of the world of the stars, the planets and constellations, and understanding the arrangement of the sky.

8. The seventh is the Pâgam ; this Nask is of twenty-two subdivisions, and its explanation is with regard to lawful and unlawful animals, whenever they slaughter them for the sake of solemnizing a season-festival ; and, again, whatever is manifold reward and good work ; also about the reason of the five days of the guardian spirits, which they call the select, and wherefore they are appointed.

9. The name of the eighth is Ratustâyî, and it is of fifty subdivisions, of which, after the time of Alexander, they preserved and found no more than thirteen subdivisions ; its explanation is about maintaining devotion, and of obedience to kings, high-priests, and governors.

10. The name of the ninth is Baris, and this Nask was of sixty subdivisions, but after the time of Alexander they found no more than twelve subdivisions; its explanation is of those who are kings and high-priests, leaders and princes, judges and messengers, what is the nature of the authority of peasants and princes, and what kind of towns they possess.

11. The name of the tenth is Kassrôb, and this Nask has been of sixty subdivisions, but after the time of Alexander they found again no more than fifteen subdivisions; its explanation is about the distinction of natural wisdom and knowledge from acquired knowledge; that which makes mankind pure from defilement, and the usage that maintains the proceedings of mankind.

12. The eleventh is the Nask of Vistâsp-shâh, and it has been of sixty subdivisions, but after the time of Alexander they found again no more than ten subdivisions, and their statements are with regard to king Gustâsp making the religion current.

13. The name of the twelfth is 'Hast, and it is of twenty-two subdivisions; its explanation is about enquiry of wisdom, maintaining devotion in the world, and the punishment for every sin such as they supply it.

14. The name of the thirteenth is Sfind, and it is of sixty subdivisions; its explanation is of that which they demonstrate as miracles from this Nask, that every requirement comes to pass which every high-priest—who shall recite this Nask for several days with sevenfold voice, according to that which has been written—shall solicit for the world.

15. The name of the fourteenth is Girast, and this is of twenty-two subdivisions, its explanation is about the creation of the people of mankind in the day of the Eternal, until the last day of the resurrection occurs; their becoming manifest in the mother's womb, and why some die in the womb and some are born, some are kings and some are peasants.

16. The name of the fifteenth is Baghân-yast, and this is of seventeen subdivisions; its explanation is about the praise of the angels admitted, and, as to the servants of the Most Glorious, at what period they each become manifest, and what duty they perform, till the resurrection.

17. The name of the sixteenth is Niyâram, and this is of fifty-four subdivisions; its explanation is about decrees as to traders, covenants and decisions, that is, awards with regard to the creatures and how they act.

18. The name of the seventeenth is Aspâram, and this is of sixty-four subdivisions; its explanation in these is well-directed and a good thing; and whatever remains therein.

19. The eighteenth is the Duvâsarôgad, and it is of sixty-five subdivisions; its explanation is that which is a statement on the subject of Khêdyôdath, that is, forming a union with each other by relations and those next one another.

20. The name of the nineteenth is Askâram, and it is of fifty-two subdivisions; its explanation is about the occurrence of the production of the renovation of the universe, up to the resurrection and future existence which are the converting of the dead alive, Aharman and the demons becoming extinct, and the circumstances of those events.

21. The name of the twentieth is *Gud-dêv-dâd*¹, and that is of twenty-two subdivisions; its explanation is of causing the abstinence of mankind from pollution, that is, from defilement, and the assault of evil peculiarly owing to the great; from the sight of a menstruous woman, and the like of these, whenever harm and injury happen to the creation.

22. The name of the twenty-first is Hâdokht, and this is a book of thirty subdivisions; its explanation is such that the accursed devil goes far from every one who shall recite this book together with the Yast, and this person becomes near unto the sacred being, the praiseworthy and exalted, and in such manner as he is near the sacred being in like manner he obtains rank.

23. And the purpose of this being written is so, that it is known to these humble individuals² in this manner, that these books are of those tendencies, and it has been written by those devout *ones*³ in such manner that 'among us no one is able to read the Pahlavi characters, and the interpretation of these Nasks is in Pahlavi; any one who does not know the Pahlavi characters is high-priest and is not able to demonstrate the miracles of the religion, nor that which was written with regard to the commentary of these Nasks.'

IV. FROM THE RIVÂYAT OF DASTÛR BARZÛ
QIYÂMU-D-DÎN¹.

1. The reply about the Nasks of the Avesta. The Yathâ-ahû-vairyô is of twenty-one words, and the Avesta is similarly of twenty-one Nasks.

2. The name of the first Nask is Stôd-yast, and that book is of thirty-three compilations, that is, it is of thirty-three subdivisions, and the description of the Lord and the angels is in it.

3. The name of the second Nask is Stûdgar, and that is of twenty-two subdivisions; its description is about prayer, virtuous authority, and intercession.

4. The third Nask is the Vahist-mânthrah, and that is of twenty-two subdivisions about faith and heedfulness; and one is reminded [&c., very nearly the same as in II, 3].

5. The fourth Nask is the Bagh, and that is of twenty-one subdivisions; its explanation is about the religion and its intention, and whatever the Lord has made incumbent on mankind as to devotion and heedfulness; also about closing the path of Satan to oneself, and approaching the last abode.

6. The name of the fifth book is Dvâzdah-hâmâst, and that is of thirty-two subdivisions in remembrance of the beginning [&c., very nearly the same as in II, 5].

7. The name of the sixth Nask is Nâdar, and that is of thirty-five compilations about the stars and the disposition and life of the sky. [&c., very nearly the same as in II, 6 to] Bavaftâl, and in Persian the name of that book is Favâmsa'hân, that is, instruction arises therefrom for the moderns.

8. The name of the seventh Nask is Pâgam, and that is of twenty-two subdivisions; its description is about quadrupeds and how they are made lawful, which is lawful [&c., as in II, 7, to] for the sake of a season-festival, and how it is necessary to perform whatever is in a season-festival; the expense of a season-festival [&c., as in II, 7, to] high-priests, and a description of the clothing for a righteous gift, so that they may obtain recompense in the end from heaven.

9. The eighth Nask is the Ratustâyî, and that is of fifty subdivisions; its purport is about the affairs of the king and obedience, cities constructed and made magnificent, birds, animals, and fish, and whatever is Ormazd's, besides the creatures of Aharman; [&c., as in II, 8].

10. The name of the ninth book is Baris, and that is of sixty subdivisions, and about descriptions of kings and judges, and an investigation of their authority; also the relations of a peasant [&c., as in II, 9, to] deceit, and telling lies.

11. The name of the tenth book is Kaskanîz, and that is of sixty subdivisions, about the advantage (faïl) of natural wisdom and knowledge as distinguished from acquired knowledge, that is, the knowledge born from the mother, and the knowledge which they learn by instruction; doctrine about purity and truth, and anything [&c., as in II, 10, to] how it occurs.

12. The name of the eleventh Nask is Vistâsp, and that is of sixty compilations, but after the calamity of Alexander, when they sought them again, they found no more than eight subdivisions, and those are about Gustâsp's acceptance [&c., as in II, 11].

13. The name of the twelfth book is 'Hast, and that is of twenty-two fargards in six portions. The first portion is about knowing the Lord, may he be honoured and glorified! and faith in the mission of Zaratust and any duties which are ordered in a book of the religion. The second portion is about the obedience of kings, the truth of the religion, and complying with commands. The third portion is about the promise to benefactors and their recompense, the punishment of evildoers, and escaping from hell. The fourth portion is about the mansions of the world, agriculture and trimming trees, the power of mankind and quadrupeds arisen therefrom, the obedience they exercise, and whatever duty they perform for the high-priests of the religion. The fifth portion [&c., as in II, 12, to] the obeisances, so that they obtain great rewards in the end.

- 14. The name of the thirteenth book is Sfend, and that is of sixty subdivisions, for the information of people who are in want of it, and for their knowledge; also for any persons who become covetous as to virtuous actions, and proceed after the footsteps of the learned and people of religion, and receive advantage therefrom; and as reminders of the celestial sphere that there is advantage from the daily practice of them. Also about the accounts of the evil of mankind, by the apostle Zaratust, about the false speaking [&c., as in II, 13].

15. The fourteenth Nask is the Girast, and that is of twenty-two subdivisions, for the understanding of the causes of mankind [&c., as in II, 14].

16. The name of the fifteenth book is Baghân-yast, and that is of seventeen subdivisions, in praise of the Lord, the praiseworthy and exalted, and the admitted angels; also thanksgiving for the favours due to that which he makes expedient in the religion, and the thanksgiving for his favour lasts until one obtains it back in the end; likewise the appearance of the angels, and these are nobles for the praise of the sacred being.

17. The name of the sixteenth book is Niyâram, and that is of fifty-four subdivisions, about decrees as to riches, bringing abroad, and whatever is made lawful; obtaining deliverance from hell, performing service, slavery, and the nature of wayfarers; whatever is in the thoughts of mankind, and whatever is in the bodies of mankind.

18. The name of the seventeenth book is Aspâram, and that is of sixty subdivisions about rituals [&c., very nearly the same as in II, 17].

19. The name of the eighteenth Nask is Duvâsrôb, and that is of sixty-five subdivisions, about robbers (duvâyân?) of human beings [&c., very nearly the same as in II, 18].

20. The name of the nineteenth Nask is Askâram, and that is of fifty-two fargards [&c., very nearly the same as in II, 19].

21. The name of the twentieth Nask is Vîndâd, and that is of twenty-two subdivisions [&c., very nearly the same as in II, 20]. And as to this book Vîndâd, which is the twentieth book of the Nasks, out of the twenty-one Nasks of the Avesta, we and you are now using it in the ceremonial, and when, after the calamity of Alexander, they sought for the books again, they found a portion of each Nask, but did not find any Nask in completeness except the Vîndâd which they found complete.

22. The name of the twenty-first Nask is Hâdokht, and that is of thirty subdivisions, about the manner of bringing together and the many miracles, and their excellences and connections; and in this book the accursed devil becomes cursed and becomes annihilated.

23. At present, since the Nasks have not remained perfect in the midst of us, it is not possible to solemnize them, because Alexander the Rûman¹ carried off a rough draft, in Rûman characters, of those of the twenty-one Nasks of the Avesta which were about the stars and medicine, and repeatedly burnt the books of the Avesta, so that the soul of Alexander burns in hell; and after his calamity, every one of the high-priests, in council together, preserved something of the Avesta in his mind, and the aggregate has disclosed the books of the Yasna (yast), Vîsperad, Vendîdâd, Fravash, Khûrdah Avesta, Darûn, Âfrîngân, Kîdah Vagarkardan, and Bundahis, which they wrote correctly; as to the remainder (tatammah) which they did not write, it was on this account, that they did not preserve it correctly in their minds. And the expectation, descended from the midst of them in the court of Ormazd and the archangels, is thus, that Vargâvand, Peshôtan, and Hushêdar² will arrive in haste for the manifestation of the religion, and the goodness of the religion again assumes splendour from a new head; the good and those of the good religion become cheerful and happy, and the bad and wicked become extinct and disappearing. Amen.

FROM THE DÎN-VIGIRGARD¹.

In the name and for the propitiation of the creator Aûharmazd these several commentaries (zand) are published from revelation (dênô).

The names of the twenty-one Nasks.

1. One is this that is Yathâ, that is, the Stôd-yast, and the subdivisions of this Stôd-yast are thirty-three. In that Nask are the blessing and propitiation of Aûharmazd and the archangels, and they are for the utterance of praise. Aûharmazd sends this Nask into the world, which is suitable for every one, and whoever has committed this Nask to memory recites it. And to every one who, being a high-priest, becomes a reciter of both the Avesta and Zand, and shall recite that Nask three times with correctness, the archangels will come near; as to this they know it without doubt.

2. The second Nask is that which is Ahû, the Stûdgar, and the subdivisions of that Nask are twenty-two. In it are the giving of advice to mankind, the performance of prayer and virtue, the doing of good actions, intercession, producing union among relations, and such-like topics.

3. The third is Vairyô, the Vahist-mânsar, and the subdivisions of this Nask are twenty-two. In this is the topic of those who are becoming without doubt as to the religion of Mazda-worship, causing heedfulness, and thinking about the religion; also the production of the benediction and attributes (sîfât) of the blessedness of Zaratûst, every action which was declared virtuous before Zaratûst, and all actions which have to occur after Zaratûst until the future existence; the benefit of his world, and such-like topics.

4. The fourth Nask is this which is Athâ, the Bagh, and the subdivisions of that Nask are twenty-one. In this the topic is this which is the purpose of the religion of Mazda-worship, and the ideas which Aûharmazd caused to be taught unto mankind; the exercise of reverence, heedfulness, adjudication, and justice; the performance of the proper duty of decision, doing good actions (kâr-î khvaîr), closing the way of Aharman into oneself, attaining unto the spiritual existence for oneself, and such as are like these.

5. The fifth Nask is Ratus, the Dvâzda-khômâst, and the subdivisions of that Nask are thirty-two. In that Nask are all the topics of the spiritual existence and the heavenly state, virtue and vileness, the material existence of this worldly state, about the sky and about the earth, and everything which Aûharmazd produced and which exists in the water, fire, and plants; human beings and quadrupeds, grazing animals and birds, and everything which is similarly produced from any (aeḱ) of them, and the characteristics of all things. Secondly, that which is the production of the resurrection and future existence, and the coming together and separation at the Kinvad pass; the recompense for the doers of good works and the punishment for sinners occur through the future existence, and such-like topics as these are.

6. The sixth Nask is Ashâd, the Nâdûr, and the subdivisions of that are thirty-five. In this Nask are the purposes of the stars (nugûm), the zodiac, and the planets, the goodness and evil of each constellation, and the movement of all the planets in the signs of the zodiac (bûrg) and lunar mansions (mahîgân nugûm). They have translated it into Arabic and Persian, and the name they have adopted for this book is Bûtâl, and in Persian the name which is appointed for it is Kapâmâgân.

7. The seventh is this which is Kîd, and is the Pâgam, and its subdivisions are twenty-two. In this Pâgam Nask is the topic of the slaughtering of quadrupeds and sheep, how they are to be slaughtered, of which among the quadrupeds the command is that it is allowable to eat, and of which kind the eating is not allowable; how he who slaughters shall strike at the time of the expiring of the sheep. The more expenditure (saraf) one makes upon a season-festival, so much the more is the reward; how much it is expedient to bestow upon the Dastûrs, Môbads, and Hêrbads, and upon the unwavering practisers of good works in the good religion; what merit accrues to every one who celebrates a season-festival and consecrates clothing for a soul, and who, for that reason, is in the supreme heaven in the last times; and it is necessary to give clothing to relations and the righteous as a righteous gift, and to exercise mediation on the part of the righteous; the five greater and lesser days of the guardian spirits, and the practice of good works on these ten days is enjoined in this Nask. It is requisite for all people that they shall read this book with good and wise understanding, that all may become aware of its topics.

8. The eighth Nask is that which is Hakâ, the Ratustâih, and the subdivisions of that Nask were fifty when the accursed Alexander had the Nasks burnt up, but after that, as they sought out this Nask, only thirteen of those subdivisions came to hand, and no more remained of those previously existing. In this Nask are the reasons of performing service, giving orders, and remaining at the command of kings and at the command of high-priests and judges; the adornment-preserving¹ purpose of cities is declared, the command of religion, and things made magnificently (agîzîhâ), grazing animals, birds, cattle, and fish; everything which is a production of Aûharmazd or Aharman; all the purposes of all the seas, mountains, and lands; and matters similar to such as are mentioned.

9. The ninth Nask is this which is Vangheus, and is the Baris; the subdivisions of that Nask were first sixty, but after the accursed Alexander only twelve remained. As to the information in this Nask, just as there is the sovereignty for those who are kings, so there is the usage which it is necessary for them to practise, and the command of the sentence of judges of the religion such as is necessary to be executed; the custody and protection for the world, and making each new city flourishing; also the reasons of people, who are false-speaking, sinners, and such-like, are mentioned in this Nask.

10. The tenth Nask is that which is Dazdâ, the Kassrôb, and the subdivisions of that Nask were formerly sixty, but after the accursed Alexander only fifteen subdivisions remained. In that Nask the topic is that which is wisdom and knowledge, the reason of its being brought forth from the mother, and the teaching of wisdom by demonstration, the performance of purification and the speaking of truth; bringing people from vileness unto virtue, and bringing them from defilement and pollution unto purity; greatness and good progeny arise for people near kings, and how the habit of people telling lies, to others and to kings, arises; and such-like as these.

11. The eleventh Nask was Mananghô, the Vîstâspâd, and the subdivisions of that Nask were sixty, but after the accursed Alexander only ten remained. In this Nask is the topic of the sovereignty of Gûstâsp, and Zaratûst the Spîtâmân, having brought the religion from Aûharmazd, king Gustâsp accepted it, and made it current in the world; and such-like as these.

12. The twelfth is Shyaothananãm, the Khûst, and the subdivisions of that Nask were first twenty-two, but after the accursed Alexander only six remained. Among those six, which are the first portions (zizp = Ar. gizb), the topics in one portion are the attributes (sifât) of the creator Aûharmazd, and the understanding of them; also being without doubt about the religion of Zaratûst, the Spîtâmân, all the duty and good works which are prescribed in the religion, and such-like. In the second portion is the reason of service for kings, the truth of the religion, submission to all its commands, and withholding one's hand from evil actions, so that it has become far from mischief. In the third portion is that which is the debt for performers of virtuous position, the advantage of good works, the final release from hell, and such-like. The fourth is the reason of the creation of the world, the practice of agriculture, the cultivation of trees, the date-tree and every fruit-tree; whence arises most strength for people and animals; being under the command of the practisers of good works and the virtuous, and being under the command of the high-priests, and such-like as they are. In the fifth portion all the specimens of mankind are mentioned: they who are of great knowledge, who are kings, judges, and the sages of the religion; in the second specimen are they that have to keep watch over all the cities, and to make the enemy confounded; in the third specimen are these whose object one mentions in the term 'husbandmen;' the fourth specimen which one mentions are these who are the greatly-skilled and sitters in the market, grandiloquent to repel loss, giving one-tenth to the high-priest and king, and offering praise on hardened knees, the last reward of which is that one obtains in the spiritual existence.

13. The thirteenth Nask is that which is Anghêus, the Spend; its subdivisions are sixty which are precious unto people of pedigrees (mâyagân) and those who possess much avidity for virtuous actions and have to proceed in the footsteps (pâî-rapîh) of the great and religious; also accounts of Zaratûst, who is born from the womb of Dûghdâvô, till ten years of age. Every Dastûr and Môbad shall recite this Nask in purity, and with ease and the proper words, for several days, and shall obtain every desire of his own, or any wish which he claims on account of (barâ râî-î) others.

14. The fourteenth Nask is that which is Mazdâi; the name Zirast is appointed for it, and the subdivisions of that Nask are twenty-two. In like manner this Nask is sent by Aûharmazd, which is to make manifest to the people what is the purpose of that science through which mankind are born from the womb of a mother, how many individuals among them will die away from the womb, and how many individuals will live; how many persons and people among them become kings, and how many, meanwhile (fîmâ), exercise apostleship, that is, the high-priesthood; how many are the grandest of people, and how many are the meanest of mankind, and in what mode this occurs; from first to last, the time people are born and all those topics are in this Nask.

15. The fifteenth is Khshathremkâ, and the name of that Nask is Baghân-yast, and its subdivisions are seventeen. In it are the topics of Aûharmazd the lord and the archangels, the knowledge of their attributes, and the service and sublimity of Aûharmazd; at what time every Gâh occurs until the future existence, and what duty is performed; offering praise for every benefit from Aûharmazd, and obtaining benefit from him; the appearance of the archangels, and knowing what is such-and-such an appearance of such-and-such an archangel in the future existence. This Nask used in the service of Aûharmazd and the archangels is very excellent.

16. The sixteenth is Ahurâi, and they have appointed it the name Niyârâm; the subdivisions of that Nask are fifty-four, about the reason of preserving wealth and placing it out, agreement and measure by the cubit and handful; everything the creator Aûharmazd has ordained as uncontaminated, release from hell, and how to walk in the path of reverence and worship; what is in the mind of man, and what is everything in the body of man; and such-like as these that are mentioned.

17. The seventeenth Nask is that which is Â, and the name they have appointed for it is Aspârûm; one mentions sixty-five subdivisions of it, and in this Nask is every religious topic which all persons well understand, and the punishment suffered by sinners, which they receive in their last career; everything which is uncontaminated is allowable, and what is not uncontaminated is not allowable; the stars preside over the destiny of mankind; and such-like as these.

18. The eighteenth Nask is that which is Yim, that has the name Duvâsarôzad appointed for it, and the subdivisions of it are likewise sixty-five. In this Nask are the reasons of next-of-kin marriage, forming connections among relations, and such-like as these.

19. The nineteenth Nask is Drigubyô, the name of which is Askâram, and is of fifty-two stanzas (vêkastihâ), about the giving of orders, exercise of authority, and practising wisdom in everything; producing the resurrection, by which every person passed away is made living again, and the malformations of Aharman and the demons are withered away; and such-like.

20. The twentieth Nask is that which is Dadad, that they call by its name of Vendîdâd, where the meaning of this is 'the law against the demons,' which is of twenty-two fargards. The topic of it is what preserves mankind from evil and pollution, and will restrain them from the menstuous, dead matter, pestilence, and running sores. Of all the twenty-one Nasks the Nask of 'the law against the demons' has alone remained entire; while several remain scattered by the wickedness (sûmîh) of the accursed Alexander, this Nask of the Vendîdâd remained in hand, and owing to its elucidation the religion of Mazda-worship exists now.

21. The twenty-first Nask is Vâstârem, whose name one calls Hâdôkht, and its fargards are said to be thirty. In it are much excellence and many miracles, and the vile Aharman becomes far from every one who recites this Hâdôkht, and it makes him extinct, and the reciter comes near unto Aûhar-mazd and becomes purified from sin.

22. Now, alas! if all these Nasks do not remain, so that one is not able to solemnize them, that is for this reason, that the accursed Alexander, the Arûman, took several transcripts—in the Arûman language and characters (hurûfö)—of any among those twenty-one Nasks which were about the stars and medicine, and burnt up the other Nasks; and the soul of the accursed Alexander, the Rûman, will remain wretched and burnt in gloomy hell till the resurrection, owing to his own vileness which injured the religion of Zaratûst.

23. After the villany of Alexander, an assemblage of several high-priests, who were sages of the religion, brought the Avesta of all of them from various places, and made a collection of so much Avesta and Zand as the sacred (yastô) Yasna, Visperad, Vendidâd, Ardâ-fravard, and other scraps of the Avesta, the Darûn, Âfrîngân, and the Commands of the religion; all these were written, and the Bûndahis book was correctly written; and all such, among them, as were not written, which did not come into the thoughts of the sages, departed, on that account, from the midst of the many topics of revelation.

24. Just as it is said that there were twenty-one Nasks, there are first, in seven Nasks, the topics of the religion of Mazda-worship, in the second seven Nasks are the topics of medical practice, and in the third seven Nasks the topics and capabilities
• of the stars are mentioned.

EXTANT FRAGMENTS¹.

I. SÛDKAR NASK².

Dk. IX, Chap. II, 3-15, referring to the useful effect of reciting the Yathâ-ahû-vairyô as a spell, on various occasions, is quoted in Sls. XIX, 1-14, and also in the Persian Rivâyat of Bahman Pûngyah³, with some slight variations.

Dk. IX, Chap. VI, 2, refers to the passage thus mentioned in Sls. IX, 2, 3:—‘The priest who passes away in an out-district (aûzdehîkîh) thou hast considered as desolate (vîrân); and there is a high-priest who is of a different opinion, there is one who says it is as a non-Irânian (anâîrân) country. It is declared that, when a supreme high-priest (zaratûstrotûm) passes away in an out-district, an apostate will be born in that dwelling, and this calamity is only (aêvâk) mentioned as to the supreme high-priest⁴.’

Dk. IX, Chap. VIII, 1-6, refers to Zaratûst’s

² The detailed account of this Nask, in Dk. IX, contains about 5,400 Pahlavi words, and, if these represent the same proportion of original text as those in the accounts of the first three fargard’s of the Bakö Nask do, they would indicate about 4,700 words of Avesta text and 10,500 of Pahlavi version as the original extent of this Nask.

prophetic vision of the golden, silver, steel, and mingled-iron periods of his millennium, quoted at length in Byt. I, 1-5, with variations indicative of the date of the Bahman Yast being later than that of this Nask.

Dk. IX, Chap. X, 3, refers to the detailed account of the seven most heinous evil-doers, quoted in Dd. LXXII, 3-9.

Dk. IX, Chap. XV, refers to the supplication of the soul of Keresâsp for admittance into heaven, on account of his heroic deeds, quoted at length in the Dâdistân Pahlavi Rivâyat and the Persian Sad-dar-band-i Hûsh (see S. B. E., vol. xviii, pp. 373-381).

Dk. IX, Chap. XVIII, 2, refers to the passage thus quoted in Sls. X, 8 :—‘For in the Stûdgar it is said, concerning those who have unlawfully slaughtered animals, the punishment is such that each hair of those animals becomes like a sharp dagger (têkh), and he who is unlawfully a slaughterer is slain.’

No allusion has been noticed in Dk. IX to another passage which is thus quoted in Sls. XII, 32 :—‘In the Stûdgar it says thus: “What prepares sneezing? that is, through what process (kâr) does it come?” And Aûhar Mazda spoke thus: “Hungry living, O Zaratûst! moreover, the remedy for its existence is the Ahunavair, O Zaratûst! and the Ashem (aharâyih).”’

III. BAKÖ NASK¹.

Dk. IX, Chaps. XLVII—XLIX, describe the contents of the first three fargard's of this Nask, which are still extant in the Avesta text of Yas. XIX—XXI, whose Pahlavi version may be translated as follows :—

Pahl. Yas. XIX = Bakö I.

The beginning of the Ahunavair of the Bakân².

1. Zaratûst enquired of Aûharmazd thus: 'O Aûharmazd,³ propitious spirit, creator of the world of embodied existences, and righteous⁴! (2) which were those words, O Aûharmazd! that were spoken by thee for me, (3) before the sky, before the water, before the earth, before the (well-yielding) cattle, before the plants, before the fire which is Aûhar-

9,600 Pahlavi words, and, if these represent the same proportion of original text as those in the accounts of the first three fargard's of the Bakö Nask do, they would indicate about 8,300 words of Avesta text and 18,500 of Pahlavi version as the original extent of this Nask.

- ¹ As the detailed account of the first three fargard's of this Nask, in Dk. IX, contains about 840 Pahlavi words, and represents about 730 words of the original Avesta text in Yas. XIX—XXI, with 1630 in its Pahlavi version, it may be assumed that the detailed account of the whole Nask, extending to nearly 11,000 words, indicates about 9,500 words of Avesta text and 21,200 of Pahlavi version as the total extent of this Nask.

mazd's son, before the righteous man (Gâyômarđ), before the demons, (who remain) noxious creatures¹, and mankind, before all embodied existence (the creation of sovereignty), and before all the excellence created by Aûharmazd, (which is owing to) the manifestation of righteousness?'

4. And Aûharmazd spoke thus: 'They were the apportionment of the Ahunavair, O Spîtâmân Zaratûst! (that spirit who would make the religion current, who has formed that religion from the Ahunavair) which was spoken out by me for thee; (5) (that is,) before the sky, (&c., as in § 3).

6. 'Whoever chants that apportionment of the Ahunavair, O Spîtâmân Zaratûst! without talking (that is, he does not speak out in the middle of any of its difficult Avesta²) and not without anxiety (that he may slumber), (7) it is like a hundred above any other authority of those of the Gâthas, when one chants them without talking, or not without anxiety³; (thus it becomes fit for the ceremonial).

8. Whoever chants it while talking, or without anxiety, (thus it becomes fit for the ceremonial,) it is like ten above any other authority of those of the Gâthas.

9. 'Whoever in that embodied existence of mine, O Spîtâmân Zaratûst! recalls the apportionment of

² So in Pt₄, Mf₄; but Sp., J₂ may mean 'he strictly does not speak out in the middle of its Avesta.'

³ All the MSS. have 'while talking, or without anxiety,' as in § 8; but this does not correspond with the Avesta text. The repetition of the parenthetical clause, about the ceremonial, which also occurs in § 8, is likewise suspicious.

the Ahunavair, (that is, seeks for it,) and, further, mutters that which he recalls, (that is, shall accomplish it easily,) and, further, chants that which he mutters, (that is, fully understands its ritual,) and, further, reverences that which is chanted, (that is, shall celebrate the ceremony,) (10) his soul I pass on to the best existence, three times over the Kinvad bridge, I who am Aûharmazd, (that is, on that day in which he shall faithfully¹ provide the ceremony, it shall² lead his soul three times unto the world yonder, and shall² cause its happiness therein,) (11) to the best existence, the best righteousness, and the best light. 12. Also whoever in that embodied existence of mine, O Spîtâmân Zaratûst! mutters the apportionment of the Ahunavair, (that is, shall accomplish it easily,) and drops³, (that is, cuts off⁴), (13) either⁵ as much as a half, or as much as a third, or as much as a fourth, or as much as a fifth, (at a fifth the foundation of the sin is laid, at a half it becomes quite complete, and when he shall cut off the whole it is a *Tanâpûhar*⁶ sin), (14) I twirl⁷ away the soul of him, I who am Aûharmazd, sessing an Ahu and possessing a Ratu, (from which this is manifest, namely, the possession of a ruler and high-priest. 17. This, too, is said, that it was) before that sky was created, before the water, before the earth, before the plants, (18) before the creation of the four-legged ox (which was the sole-created ox), (19) before the creation of the two-legged righteous man (who was Gâyômarđ), (20) and before that sun of definite form (the body of the sun) was created as an acquirement of the archangels. 21. It was (likewise) proclaimed to me by the spirituality of propitiousness, (it likewise became possible for the spirituality of propitiousness to say (22) what was said¹ to Zaratûst,) concerning the whole material existence of the righteous who are, who have been, and who will arise, (23) as to the progress of work, (that is, while they shall perform for it that which is specified by it, and good works shall arise through them,) that this work, among the living, is for Aûharmazđ, (that is, that which they may perform, suitable for Aûharmazđ, they shall so perform as is declared by this fargard).

24. This, too, is the most expressive (most in effect) of those statements which were ever spoken forth (till now), or which one speaks forth (at present)², or shall speak forth³ (even henceforth); (25) for it is through such a statement (such in effect) as that, if the whole embodied existence (26) learnt it and, having learnt⁴, (that is, they shall accomplish it easily,) they retain it, (that is, they should rely upon it,) abstinence from passing away would be quite masterful, (that is, they become immortal). 27. This, too, is our saying spoken forth, (preserved¹ among the revelation mentioned in this² fargard,) which is learnt, (that is, they shall accomplish it easily,) and one recites, (that is, he utters it in a ceremonial,) thus for any one whatever of the beings whose righteousness is best, (that is, should he do it for a ceremonial, he becomes fit for it; it is when he utters this in a ceremonial that his soul becomes immortal).

28. As it is here spoken forth, (that a ruler and high-priest are to be maintained; as these things are so spoken, and as this law is so,) (29) even when it gives him an Ahu and a Ratu, (that is, it gives up his person to the priestly assembly,) so it is thereby taught to him that the thought of Aûharmazd is the creature with the first thinking, (that is, the Gâthic lore is set going by him;) (30) whatever teaches³ this (is the person of him who is king of kings, who) is the greatest (of men) of every description⁴, (that is, it possesses³ a person in the king of kings;) and so it is taught that the creatures⁵ are for him, (where the Gâthic lore is set going by him).

31. Whatever is a good emanation for³ Aûharmazd, (that is, has an origin in his personality,) is through the word vangheus, (which in the division becomes the beginning of) the third assertion here, whose recital is 'he gives through Vohûman,' (that is, the recitation which he utters properly is accomplished by him,) and, besides, here is that which

Vohûman has taught, (that is, the reward and recompense which they give Vohûman, they attribute also to him;) (32) whatever¹ is a further indication by Vohûman, (that is, anything which he may accomplish¹ properly as a token, and is performed by him,) became so through this summing up (that is, its end occurred) in shyaothanānām; (33) here among the existences was the summing up², (that is, it was its end).

34. What it teaches to the creatures³ of him who is Aûharmazd, is thus: he who is like him is he who is his own creature³, (that is, even these people it tells something so, and thus¹ they attain again, through purity, to the possession of Aûharmazd, just as Aûharmazd produced them through purity).

35. By 'the dominion is for Aûharmazd' it has taught, that he has made Aûharmazd his ruler⁴, over his own person, (who shall perform that which is revealed by the Avesta;) and this is taught, that through him is the ministration of the poor, (that is, happiness is thereby caused by him,) (36) which is friendship for the Spîtâmân; (and the religion of the Spîtâmân became) these five assertions, (that is, the decrees in it were five,) (37) which were the whole enunciation of the saying, and the whole saying was that of Aûharmazd¹.

38. For the sake of development Aûharmazd, (for cherishing the creatures,) pronounced the Ahunavair, and in its development there was a summing up, (that is, its end occurred). 39. Quickly, when² destruction arose, (that is³, the destroyer,) and rushed in, even among the wicked he uttered (as resistance) (40) this interdict:—(41) ‘Neither our thoughts, nor³ teachings, (as I have not taught that which thou hast taught,) nor wisdoms, (for I consider wisdom as virtuousness, and thou considerest it as viciousness,) (42) nor wills, (for my will is a virtuous wish, and thine a vicious one,) nor words, (for I speak that which is virtuous, and thou speakest that which is vicious,) nor actions, (for my actions are virtuous, and thine are vicious,) (43) nor religions, (for my religion is the Gâthic lore, and thine is witchcraft,) nor souls are themselves in unison, (for as to those who rely upon my things, and those who rely upon thy things, their souls are not in one place;’ he who said this, that even their souls exist, must thus say that they are not souls in unison with ours).

44. Also this saying, which Aûharmazd uttered, has the three degrees, the four classes, (priest, warrior, husbandman, and artisan,) the five chieftainships, (house-ruler, village-ruler, tribe-ruler, province-ruler, and supreme Zaratûst,) and its summing up is with liberality, (thus it is possible to make it completely for their own, when they deliver themselves up to the priests). 45. Which are the degrees of it? Good thoughts, good words, and good deeds; (they are¹, indeed, virtuous among the degrees of religion). 46. Which are the classes? The priest, warrior, husbandman, and artisan, (47) who are the whole day and night with a righteous man, who are thinking rightly, speaking rightly, and acting rightly, (48) who have recognised a priestly authority, (that is, possess a high-priest,) who have taught the religion, (that is, have provided a ceremony,) (49) and who, through their actions, are a furtherance of the world of righteousness, (owing to the work they accomplish). 50. Which are the chiefs? The house-ruler, village-ruler, tribe-ruler, province-ruler, and the Zaratûst is the fifth (51) in those provinces which are other than the Ragha² of Zaratûst; with four chieftainships is the Ragha of Zaratûst. 52. Which are the chiefs of that? The house-ruler, village-ruler, tribe-ruler, and the Zaratûst is the fourth; (that is, when he was in his own province, he also produced its period of prosperity, who arises fourth).

53. How was it when through good thought, (that is, the religion remained in the degree of good thought)? When it arose first in a righteous thinker, (it arose in Gâyômarđ, and he thought for it). 54. How, when through good words? When it was the bounteous text, (doing good). 55. How, when through good deeds? When it was the praise even of righteousness by the first creature, (that is, they shall perform the ceremonial, and also other good works, through the Gâtha lore).

56. Aûharmazd proclaimed; for what was it proclaimed by him? For the righteous spiritual and worldly existence, (for the benefit of the spiritual and worldly existence). 57. Owing to what desire (owing to what necessity) was the said announcement proclaimed¹ by him? (So that he shall become) the privileged developer, (he who is a resolute ruler). 58. For how many righteous (is it requisite to utter it)? (So that one may become) a developer, (even he who may be) an irresolute ruler², (to whom they reveal these words. The beginning of the third subdivision ¹.

1. A saying of the righteous Zaratûst, to be revered, was: 'Whoever of those existing is thus in worship as regards the good ².' Here what is taught by it is the worship of Aûharmazd, (that it is that which one should provide for,) which is the law of Aûharmazd, (that is, his virtuous law,) whereby the reverence of existence is taught, (that is, that which he would most occasion, which is the ever-asking for progeny by mankind; and he mentions that thing to them,) through which it is possible for them to live well. 2. Here, besides, the reverence of those males and females of the righteous, through complete devotion ³ who was the first, is taught by it, (3) which is the obeisance for the archangels, (that is, it would occasion the propitiation of the archangels). These were the three assertions, (that is, three decrees were in it,) and it was in every way a saying to be revered. Unto whom was the reverence? Unto the archangels in that worship.

4. And Aûharmazd spoke thus: 'Happy is he

What reply did he speak through that utterance of words, (what was the thing he spoke about²)? 7. He spoke the reply of happy progress, the happy progress of the righteous of every kind, who are, who have been, and who will arise. 8. The developer told (that man, as) the development, in reply; and (the reward as) the development that Aûharmazd mentioned in reply was: 'That development³ (I call) righteous, (which) is a development for the righteous.'

Dk. IX, Chap. XLVII, 11, refers to Pahl. Yas. XIX, 12-15, which is thus quoted in Sls. X, 26, in a shorter and altered form:—'As it says in the Bak thus: "Whoever shall mutter, O Zaratûst! my apportionment of the Ahunavair, (that is, shall softly take it inwardly,) and shall let it escape⁴ again, (that is, shall utter it aloud,) so much as a half, or a third, or a fourth, or a fifth, his soul will I shield⁵, I who am Aûharmazd, from the best existence, (that is, I will keep it away,) by such an extent as the width of this earth."'

³ So in Pt₄, Mf₄.

⁴ Pahl. rahôînêd, or rânînêd, 'reject.' It is the alteration in this verb that changes the meaning of the original text; as the preceding and following verbs, vakhdûnêd and gôyêd, do not differ in Pahlavi writing from the vadîdûnêd and yangêd of Pahl. Yas. XIX, 12.

IV. DÂMDÂD NASK¹.

From the very short account of this Nask, given in Dk. VIII, Chap. V, it appears that its contents were very similar to those of the original Bundahis, so far as we find them in the imperfect Indian Bd. I-XXX. And this connection between the two works is further testified by Zs. IX, 1, 16-23, which attributes to the Dâmdâd many statements, regarding plants and animals, which are detailed in Bd. XIV, 1, 2, 14-18, 21-24.

Owing to the brief character of the account in Dk. VIII, Chap. V, it is impossible to trace any allusion to two passages quoted from the Dâmdâd as follows:—

In Sls. X, 22, XII, 15, it is said that ‘in the Dâmdâd it is revealed thus: “Likewise, too, the good works, in like measure (or manner), which come into the father’s possession (or to the father as his own).”’

In Sls. XII, 5, it is said that ‘in the Dâmdâd it is revealed that when they sever the consciousness of men it goes out to the nearest fire, then out to the stars, then out to the moon, and then out to the sun;

¹ The very short account of this Nask, in Dk. VIII, contains 75 Pahlavi words, and, if these represent the same proportion of original text as those in the very short accounts of Nasks I, II, III, XXI in the same book, they would indicate about 8,900 words of Avesta text. But, as this is a Hadha-mâthric Nask, the proportion of its Pahlavi text is best ascertained from that of Nask X, belonging to the same division, which indicates about 29,300 words for the Pahlavi version. The actual original extent of the Irânian Bundahis (which may be considered as a descendant of the Dâmdâd) appears to have been about 28,000 Pahlavi words.

and it is needful that the nearest fire, that to which it has come out, should become stronger.'

V. NÂDAR NASK¹.

No quotation from this Nask has yet been noticed.

VI. PÂGAG NASK².

Dk. VIII, Chap. VII, 4, or 5, probably refers to the passage which contained the statement thus quoted in Sls. IX, 9, 10 :—' In a passage of the fifth fargard of the Pâgôn it is declared that one mentions these characteristics of four kinds of worship of the sacred beings :—one is that whose Avesta is correct, but the man is bad ; the second is that whose Avesta is faulty, but the man is good ; the third is that whose Avesta is correct, and the man is good ; and the fourth is that whose Avesta is faulty, and the man is bad. That whose Avesta is correct, but the man bad, the archangels will approach and will listen to,

² The account of this Nask in Dk. VIII (like those of Nasks VIII, XII, XIII, XX), though four or five times as long as the very short accounts, is still short, and the data for estimating the original extent of these five Nasks are very inadequate. We may, perhaps, guess that the two Nasks VI, VIII were together equal to half the length of the four other Hadha-mâthric Nasks IV, VII, IX, X, and then proceed to apportion the extent, thus guessed, between the two in proportion to the number of Pahlavi words in the short account of each. In this way we shall find that the 505 Pahlavi words in the short account of the Pâgag may indicate about 9,100 words of Avesta text and 29,800 of Pahlavi version.

but do not accept; that whose Avesta is faulty, but the man good, the archangels and sacred being will approach, but do not listen to, and will accept; that whose Avesta is correct, and the man good, the archangels and sacred being will approach, will come to, will listen to, and will accept; and that whose Avesta is faulty, and the man bad, they do not approach, do not listen to, and do not accept.'

VII. RADÖ-DÂD-AÎTAG NASK¹.

Dk. VIII, Chap. VIII, 4, probably refers to the passage containing the statement thus mentioned in Sls. X, 29:—'In the Radö-dâd-aîtîh many harsh things are said about the severe punishment of the unhelpful ones (avigîdâr-dahîsnânö)² in the spiritual existence.'

VIII, IX. BARIS³ AND KASKÎSRÔBÔ⁴ NASKS.

No quotation from these Nasks has yet been noticed.

³ The short account of this Nask, in Dk. VIII, contains 248 Pahlavi words, from which the extent of its original text may be guessed (in the same way as in the case of Nask VI) at about 4,400 Avesta and 14,600 Pahlavi words.

⁴ The very short account of this Nask, in Dk. VIII, contains 46 Pahlavi words, from which the extent of its original text may be estimated (in the same way as in the case of Nask IV) at about 5,500 Avesta and 17,900 Pahlavi words.

X. VISTÂSP-SÂSTÔ NASK ¹.

The first half of this Nask (as described in Dk. VIII, Chap. XI, 1, 2) appears to be still extant in the Vistâsp Yast, 1-44; but the remainder of that Yast does not correspond with the description of the latter half of the Nask.

XI. VASTAG NASK ².

No quotation from this Nask has yet been noticed.

XII. KĪTRADÂD NASK ³.

Dk. VIII, Chap. XIII, 10, probably refers to the passage that contained the statement thus quoted in Sls. X, 28 :—' Even so it is revealed in the Kĭtradâd that Spendar^{mad} spoke to Mânûs'êihar thus : " Even the swiftest horse requires the whip, the sharpest

² As there is no account of this Nask in Dk. VIII, we can only guess that its extent was about the average length of the other Gâthic Nasks, or about 8,900 words of Avesta text and 18,400 of Pahlavi version.

³ The short account of this Nask, in Dk. VIII, contains 396 Pahlavi words, which may be guessed to represent the same proportion of Pahlavi version as in Nasks VI, VIII, the accounts of which are also short. And, as this is a Legal Nask, it may be assumed that the proportion of Avesta text to Pahlavi version would be the same as in the other Legal Nasks, which is the proportion still extant in the Nîrangistân section of Nask XVII. Based upon these assumptions, the probable extent of the Kĭtradâd would be about 2,600 words of Avesta text and 23,400 of Pahlavi version.

steel knife requires the whetstone, and the wisest man requires counsel.”’

XIII. SPEND NASK¹.

Dk. VIII, Chap. XIV, 1, probably refers to the passage that contained the statement thus quoted in Sls. X, 4, XII, 11:—‘It is revealed in the Spend that towards Dûkdâv, the mother of Zaratûst, when she was pregnant with Zaratûst, every night for three nights a leader with a hundred and fifty demons rushed (or came) for the destruction of Zaratûst, yet, owing to the existence of the fire in the dwelling, they knew no means of accomplishing it.’

Dk. VIII, Chap. XIV, 8, probably refers to the passage that contained the statement alluded to in AV. XXXII and thus quoted in Sls. XII, 29:—‘As in the Spend it was shown to Zaratûst about one man, that all his limbs were in torment, but one foot was outside; and Zaratûst enquired of Aûharmazd about the cause of it; and Aûharmazd said that he was a man, Davâns² by name; he was a ruler over thirty-three districts, and no good work was ever practised by him, except one time when fodder was conveyed by him to a sheep with that one foot.’

¹ The short account of this Nask, in Dk. VIII, contains 347 Pahlavi words, which would represent about 20,500 words of Pahlavi version, according to the proportion guessed in the case of Nask XII. But, this being a Gâthic Nask, the proportion of Avesta to Pahlavi ought to be that calculated for the Gâthic Nasks I, II, III, XXI, which would give about 9,900 words of Avesta text for this Nask. The seventh book of the Dînkard, whose contents are very similar to those attributed to the Spend Nask, contains about 16,000 Pahlavi words.

No allusion to the following two passages, quoted from the Spend, has been noticed in Dk. VIII, Chap. XIV:—

In Sls. XII, 3, it is said that ‘in the Spend it is revealed that a fire, when they shall make it quite clean from its chilled charcoal, has as much comfort as a man whose clothing they shall make clean.’

In Sls. XII, 15, it is said that ‘in the Spend and Nihādūm the high-priests have taught that the duty and good works which a son performs become as much the father’s as though they had been done by his own hand.’

XIV. BAKÂN-YAST NASK¹.

No allusion to the following three passages, quoted from this Nask, could be expected in the very short account of it, given in Dk. VIII, Chap. XV; and they can hardly be traced, with any certainty, in the Avesta texts of the Yasts themselves:—

It is just possible that a commentary on Yt. I, 17 may have contained the Av.-Pahl. passage thus quoted in Vig.² pp. 160, 161:—‘By the Avesta of the Baghân-yast it is declared : Yad aêtê yô mazdayasnô aperenâyûkô avi hê hapta saredha fragasâiti, stehr-paêsanghô aiwyaunghânô paitis hê maidhyâi bûgyamanô, avi hê nara paskaiti nemanghenti : Whoever of those Mazda-worshippers is a child who attains unto the age of seven years, and ties the thread-girdle on his waist, upon that man there is thenceforth the maintenance of the obeisances.'

A Pahlavi commentary on Yt. VI, 2 may have formerly contained the passage thus mentioned in Sls. XII, 17 :—'As in the Bâg-yasnô notice is given about the uncleanness of well-water at night.'

Perhaps one of the five Yasts, XI, XII, XIII, XV, XVIII, respectively dedicated to Srôsh, Rashnû, the guardian spirits, the good Vâê, and Âstâd—the sacred beings specially propitiated by the ceremonies after a death—may have included a commentary containing the passage thus quoted in Vig. pp. 157–158, about the necessity of appointing some one to provide such ceremonies for a man who dies without a son, and to administer his estate :—'By the Avesta of the Baghân-yast it is declared : Yêzi narô pankadasanghô saredhô irîraithyâd avi hê urvânem bûgyânem thrâyô ayara uzayarana rathwô hangamanem fragasôid, âad hê aputhra anghad puthra fradadhâiti yathaka nara irista vîspanâm avaretanâm shaêtavaitanâm avi hê frazaintîm fragasôid, paskaiti nemanguhaiti baoidhyêitaka urvâsnayau.'

XV. NÎKÂDÛM NASK¹.

Dk. VIII, Chap. XVIII, 3, refers to the passage which, no doubt, contained the statement thus quoted

¹ The very long account of this Nask, in Dk. VIII, contains in Farh. Oīm, pp. 6, l. 11-7, l. 13 :—‘Aêdha is the skin of the head, and there is part of it which is large and part which is small, as it says in the Nihâdûm :—“Kaya henti masyanghô aêdha, which are those parts with the larger skin? Yô aparaya paiti mastraghnaya, whatever is behind the skull; (*Afarg*¹ said, from the ear backwards). Kaya kasyanghô, which are those with the smaller? Yô paouruya paiti mastraghnaya, whatever is before *the skull*². Vaghdhanem is the head, and one says nars vaghdhanem, &c., this is: Sinful are they who penetrate (sûmbênd) a man’s head, astem aêvô mastravanãm, or one bone of the skull; vispaķa yô mastraghnãm amãsta, all those are to be smitten who have penetrated into the skull, and to be given up as outcast³; hvarô-kithanãm⁴ aêteê anyê ķikayatô, the penalties of a Khôr⁵ sin chastise those who hurt other parts, (such as the brain which is in the skull of the head, and the marrow of the other members that are to be mentioned, just as it mentions this :—Sinful are they who strike through the bone, or flesh, or marrow of a leg, and every one of those is to be smitten who strikes

4,876 Pahlavi words, from which the extent of its original text may be estimated (in the same way as in the case of Nask XVII) at about 62,600 Avesta and 562,900 Pahlavi words. . *

² Perhaps the quotation ends at this point; but Dk. VIII, Chap. XVIII, 3, is equally applicable to what follows.

through the bone of one fleshy part, and he is to be given up as outcast; while the penalties of a Khôr *sin*¹ chastise those who hurt other parts).”’

Dk. VIII, Chap. XX, 116, probably refers to the passage which contained the statement thus quoted in Pahl. Vend. IV, 35 :—‘ That is, this is the account of the number of years, according to that which is in the Hûspârûm as regards the account of the number; and according to that which is in the Nihâdûm it is the account of the number of men.’

Dk. VIII, Chap. XX, 124, possibly refers to the passage which contained the statement thus quoted in Sls. X, 3 :—‘ In the exposition of the Nihâdûm Nask it says that a man is going to commit robbery, and a wall falls in upon him, it is his destroyer; when a man strikes at him he is his adversary, and both are in sinfulness; when he is going to perform the ceremonial of the sacred beings both are in innocence towards him.’

No allusion to the following six passages, quoted from this Nask, has been noticed in Dk. VIII, Chaps. XVI–XX :—

In Sls. X, 22, XII, 15, it is said as in the last fragment of the Spend Nask, already quoted.

In Sls. X, 23, XII, 16, it is said that ‘in the Nihâdûm the high-priests have taught thus :—“A man gives a hungry one bread, and it is too much, yet (or when a man gives bread to a man, even though that man has too much bread) all the good works, which he shall perform through that superabundance, become as much his who gave it as though they had been done by his own hand.”’

In Pahl. Vend. V, 73, it is said ‘like unto this earth and that (sky) which would also cover over it (ever in all places; there is some one who says this is as to dead matter, that in the Nihâdûm says it is as to decision and judgment, and that in the Hûspârûm says it is as to the ritual of the ceremonial).’

In Vig. p. 136, it is said that ‘it is declared by the Avesta of the Nihâdûm thus:—“Âad yad draonô Vanantô stârô mazdadhâtô frâyazyâd, kathwârô draonô frakerententi aiwi-hvarenti, yad aêshô nâ yô yaozdâthryô:—So when he, who is that man who is a purifier, shall consecrate the sacred cake of Vanand¹, the star produced by Aûharmazd, they cut up and shall eat up four sacred cakes.”’

In Vig. pp. 180, 181, it is said that ‘in the Nihâdûm it is stated:—Âad aokhta Ahurô Mazdau: “Yad aêtê yô mazdayasna aêtem srîrem vastrem stehr-paêsanghem hvãm tanûm bâdha paoirîm vanghanemka hadha varanô paitanemka, paskaiti aiwyaunghânô ava hê maidhyânem bûgyamanô.” Aêtem zî srîrem vastrem mainyutâstem haêa mainyavanãm dâmanãm avi mê fradadhâd Ahurô Mazdau ashava. “Yatha hê varanô paitanem asti mănayen hvare-khshaêtahê, adhâd hadha hê vastranãm yaozdâthranãm frâyaza vâ nizbaya vâ Ahurâi Mazdâi ameshanãm spentanãm, Spitama Zarathustra!”—Thus spoke Aûharmazd: “When for him, of those who are Mazda-worshippers, there is this beneficial, star-spangled (that is, wrought) garment², always (after seven years of age, that is, after seven years of age) first he covers up (that is, clothes) his own body in it, and with (that he is properly) a preserver of faith (that is, a preserver of attachment, and) he afterwards ties¹ (that) girdle (over that starry garment) at the waist (as a waist-belt).” That, even this well-looking garment, spiritually formed by the creatures of the spirits, is really (that which) the righteous Aûharmazd granted me (who am Zaratûst). “Since it is his preserver of faith, (that is, preserver of attachment), he is like (him who is as) the sun, (a preserver of beneficial faith, an implorer of the splendid heaven, and is one who is an acceptor of the religion); therefore, with that garment, which is purified (that is, pure), do thou worship, or practise invocation, as regards Aûharmazd and as regards the archangels, O Spîtâmân Zaratûst!”’

In Vig. pp. 184, 185, it is said that ‘it is declared by the Avesta of the Nihâdûm thus:—Âad aêtahê panka ayara hamaspathmaidhem paiti ratûm spen-tayau ârmatôis mâunghô nôid frasrâvayôid:—So one does not chant forth (that is, does not invoke) the month of (the completely mindful) Spendarmad² (that is, the Spendarmad month) in the reign of those five Hamaspadmêdêm days³; (for if one invokes it, owing to forgetfulness, the Avesta is not accepted).’

² The last month of the Parsi year, named after the archangel Spendarmad (see Dk. VIII, Chap. IX, 3).

³ The five intercalary days that follow the last month, in order to make the twelve months, of thirty days each, correspond with a year of 365 days. They coincide with the Hamaspadmêdêm season-festival, originally intended to celebrate the vernal equinox.

XVI. GANABÂ-SAR-NIGAD NASK¹.

Dk. VIII, Chap. XXII, 2, probably refers to the passage which contained the statement thus quoted in Sls. X, 13:—'It is revealed in the Ganabâ-sar-nigêd, where a day in the year is indicated, that the sacred thread-girdle of every one who shall be one day more than fourteen years and three months old² is to be tied on—it is better so than when he remains unto fifteen years, and then ties on the girdle—who is more cared for, that way, than those of five (or nine) months in the womb of the mother, on whom they should put it.'

XVII. HÛSPÂRAM NASK³.

A small portion of this Nask is still preserved and known by the name of Nîrangistân. The last seven-eighths of this text corresponds with the description of the Nîrangistân section of the Hûspâram, given in Dk. VIII, Chap. XXIX, 1-17, although a few folios of its commencement are probably lost. And the earlier portion of the text begins with a fragment of a passage; which appears to correspond with part of the description of the Aêrpatistân section, given in Chap. XXVIII, 1; but also contains passages that are difficult to trace in any part of that description. The Nîrangistân portion of this text is divided into three fargards, and Dd. LXVI, 1 mentions 'five fargards of the Avesta of the correct law of the Nîrangistân, which are easy through the Zand;' so that the missing portion of this section of the Nask, described in Chap. XXIX, 18-25, must have contained two fargards. With regard to the unidentified passages, preceding the Nîrangistân portion of the extant text, it may be remarked that they include several of the statements about 'unseasonable chatter' contained in Sls. V, 3-6, where they are differently arranged.

Dk. VIII, Chap. XXIX, 2, refers to a passage which may have contained the statement thus mentioned in Sls. XII, 1:—'Of the merit of a threefold consecration of the sacred cake the high-priests have specially taught in the Hûspâram that it is as much as that of a lesser form of worship.'

Dk. VIII, Chap. XXIX, 8, refers to the passage which probably contained the statement thus quoted in Sls. XII, 31:—'Of the ceremonies which go to the bridge as sin it says this in the Hûspâram, that they are the non-celebration of the rites of the season-festivals, the Râpîtvîn, the three nights after a death, the days of the guardian spirits, and the sun and moon.'

Dk. VIII, Chap. XXXII, 1, refers to the passage which must have contained the statement thus mentioned in Sls. XIII, 17:—'The six hot ordeals which, in the Hûspâram, are effected by *kāthrayâim âthraiām*¹.

Dk. VIII, Chap. XXXIII, 4, refers to the passage which must have contained the statement thus mentioned in Pahl. Vend. XV, 67:—‘What is as to the sick dog in the Hûspâram is, “when several doors are together, it is just if the nourishment at each one be only for three nights, and then, when opulence is manifest, the delivery be unto that opulent one, and when not, the delivery be unto him who is good.”’

Dk. VIII, Chap. XXXV, 2, probably refers to the passage which contained the statement thus mentioned in Sls. XII, 7:—‘In the twentieth² of the Hûspâram it is shown that over the soul of him who works in the dark there is more predominance of the evil spirit.’

Dk. VIII, Chap. XXXVI, 7, or 13, probably refers to the passage thus mentioned in Dd. LXI, 3:—‘Nearer details of the family guardianship which is proper and which is not proper for an adopted son’s duty, of the child of the good religion with whose business it is connected, and of the fathers for whom a family guardian is to be appointed, are in the recital of five fargard³s of the Hûspâram.’

Dk. VIII, Chap. XXXVI, 8–12, probably refers to the passage which contained the statement thus quoted in Sls. X, 21, XII, 14:—‘In the fourteenth⁴

³ See Dk. VIII, Chap. XXXVI, 1 n.

of the Hûspâram Nask the high-priests have taught thus: "My son is suitable even as thy son, but my daughter is not suitable even as thy daughter."

No allusion has been noticed in Dk. VIII, Chaps. XXVIII–XXXVII, to the two passages in Pahl. Vend. IV, 35, V, 73, referring to this Nask, which have been already quoted as also referring to Nask XV.

XVIII. SAKÂDÛM NASK¹.

Dk. VIII, Chap. XXXVIII, 1, 2, refer to passages, one of which may possibly have contained the statement thus quoted in Sls. XII, 2 :—'It says in the Sakâdûm that no one of them, that is an inattentive man who has no high-priest, attains to the best existence, not though his recitation should be so much that it has made his duty and good works as much as the verdure of the plants when it shoots forth in spring, the verdure which is given abundantly by Aûharmazd.'

Dk. VIII, Chap. XXXVIII, 3, refers to a passage which is thus quoted in Sls. X, 25 :—'When an action or an opinion comes forward, and one does not know whether it be a sin or a good work, when possible it is to be abandoned and not carried out by him, as it says in the Sakâdûm that Zaratûst has not provided about anything whatever as regards everything, but three times it has been done by Zaratûst about this duty, that is, so that the Avesta and Zand, when made quite easy by any one, are for recitation, but are not to be mumbled, for, in mumbling, the portions of the Ahunavair are more chattering.'

Dk. VIII, Chap. XXXVIII, 6, refers to the passage thus mentioned in Sls. XII, 12 :—'Where a child is born, during three days, for protection from demons, wizards, and witches, a fire is to be made at night until daylight, and is to be maintained there by day, and pure incense is to be put upon it, as is revealed in the thirtieth¹ of the Sakâdûm.'

Dk. VIII, Chaps. XXXVIII, 13, XLI, 19, refer to passages which seem both to be partially quoted in Farh. Oîm, p. 38, ll. 4-10, thus :—'The period is eagerly proclaimed in another place, as it says in the Sakâdûm thus :—"Thripithwô zi asti âtars Ahurahê Mazdau hama, bipithwô aiwi-gâmê, atha narô asha-vanô :—For thrice-supplied is the fire of Aûharmazd in summer², twice in winter; so is the righteous man. XIX. VENDÎDÂD NASK³.

The whole of this Nask (as described in Dk. VIII, up. XLIV) is still extant, and is considered by writers of the Persian Rivâyats to be a complete k. Its fragmentary character, which is obvious ough to European scholars, must, therefore, be

The last twenty-two (see Dk. VIII, Chap. XLI, 1).

The extent of this Nask appears to be the same now as it was asanian times, and may be estimated at about 23,000 Avesta 48,000 Pahlavi words. The moderately long account of it in VIII, contains 1,272 Pahlavi words.

attributed, in all probability, to losses it sustained before the revival of Mazda-worship by the Sasanian dynasty. It is remarkable that the compiler of the account in the Dīnkarā makes no allusion to the twelfth fargard of the Vendidad, which is also omitted in all old MSS. of the Vendidad with Pahlavi that have been examined, although the copyists appear to have been aware of the existence of a twelfth fargard.

XX. HÂDÔKHT NASK¹.

It is doubtful how much of this Nask is still extant. Traditionally, the two fragments published by Westergaard as Yt. XXI, XXII (excepting XXII, 37-42), and by Haug as Hn. I, II, III, are said to belong to this Nask; but no allusion to Hn. II, III can be found in the account given in Dk. VIII, Chap. XLV, and Hn. I can be traced in that account only by assuming that the Ahunavair is therein mentioned (in § 1) instead of its accompanying Ashem-vohû, as it appears to be in Hn. I, 4. In Yt. XI we also appear to have a form of the Srôsh Yast derived from the Hâdôkht Nask, or used in the liturgy when that Nask was recited, and this Yast likewise refers (in § 3) to the Ahunavair in similar terms to those used in Hn. I, 4.

Dk. VIII, Chap. XLV, 1, refers to the passage which contained the statement about the Ahunavair already mentioned and also thus quoted in Sls.

XII, 19:—‘It says in the Hâdôkht that of the sayings which are spoken out the Ahunavair is that which is most triumphant.’

Dk. VIII, Chap. XLV, 4, refers to the passage which probably contained the statements thus quoted in the Âfrîn-i Gahanbâr, 14-19 (Sp.), concerning the righteous gifts to be given away, for the sake of the soul, at each of the six season-festivals:—‘There is an Avesta witness manifest in the Hâdôkht from the passage (in the case of the Maidhyô-zaremaya festival): “Hazangrem maêshinâm daênunâm paiti-puthranâm narâm ashaonâm ashaya vanghuya urunê para-daithyâd, aêvahê hâtâm ênmânahê yad ashahe vahistahê.”’ During the other five festivals the gifts, instead of ewes, are to be cows, mares, camels, and all kinds of herds and seeds, respectively, as appears from the corresponding passages. All six passages, mingled with further Avesta text, occur in several MSS. of the Âfrîngân-i Gahanbâr (see the earlier part of each section of Âf. Gah. 7-12, ed. Geldner).

Dk. VIII, Chap. XLV, 9, probably refers to the passage which contained the statement thus quoted in Sd. XL, 4:—‘In the commentary of the Hâdôkht it says:—“Mâ âzârayôis, Zarathustra! mâ Pourushaspem, mâ Dughdhovâm¹, mâ aêthrapaitis:—It is not desirable that thou, O Zaratûst! shouldst distress thy father, or mother, or priest.”’

Dk. VIII, Chap. XLV, 10, may possibly refer to the passage which contained a statement that is often partially quoted in Pahlavi colophons, and the Avesta text of which constitutes Yas. LXXII, 11 (Gld.); the first part of the statement, with a translation of its Pahlavi version, is here quoted from Mitro-âpân's colophon to a volume of miscellaneous Pahlavi texts, usually called the Vistâsp-shâhnâmak from the subject of its first text, and written A.D. 1322, in which the writer mentions the source from which he quotes; and the second part is taken from the same writer's colophon to the Yasna MS. K5, written thirteen months later, which is the only known authority for this part of the text:—'In one passage of the Hâdôkht it is declared that Aûharmazd spoke to Zaratûst thus:—"Aêvô pantau yô ashahê vispê anyaêshâm apantâm:—one only is the way of righteousness, all those are no ways:—angrahê mainyeus nasistâm¹ daênâm daêvayasnanâm parâgîtîm masîyânâm² frâkereitîm:—which the evil spirit of the heretical demon-worshippers, the wizard, has forced on to mankind."'

Dk. VIII, Chap. XLV, 13, must refer to the passage which contained the statement thus mentioned in Sls. XIII, 10:—'The fifteen stanzas of Yâ-sîyaothanâ³ are for this reason, because it is given for the destruction of those fifteen fiends who are declared in the medical part of the Hâdôkht.'

No allusion to the following seven passages, quoted from this Nask, has been noticed in Dk. VIII, Chap. XLV:—

In Sls. XII, 30, it is stated that 'in the Hâdôkht it says that a woman who shall be reverent is to be considered as much as she who is suitable.'

In Sls. XIII, 6, it is said that 'the twenty-two stanzas of Tâ-ve-urvâtâ¹ are the twenty-two judgments of which it speaks in the Hâdôkht thus: "Anaomô mananghê daya vîspâi kva, kva parô?—Lodging in the judge, that while he has twenty-two judgments he may be more just."'

In Sd. XXII, 3, 4, it is stated that 'in the commentary of the Hâdôkht it says, that every one who performs intercession, and extracts anything from a person on their account, and conveys it to them is as much without dishonesty towards them, as he who may have given to them out of his own property. And in the spiritual existence they take account of that profit for him, and just as they make out the account of the good work of that person who may have given it, even so much is his good work.'

In Vig. p. 12, it is said, with reference to Aharman, 'that he is a creature of Aûharmazd is manifest from the Avesta of the Hâdôkht: "Dâta, Ahura spenta! Mazdau."'

In Vig. pp. 23-25, it is said that, 'if any one passes away from the bodily existence, as much of his wealth comes to his son, wife, and daughter as is declared by the Avesta of the Hâdôkht²:—"Âad yêzi avi hê anguhê astvainti, Spitama Zarathustra!—So if in that bodily existence, O Spîtâmân Zaratûst! —narãm vâ nâirinãm vâ para-irithyâd,—of males or

In Vig. p. 83, it is said that ‘hair from an ox or a horse is suitable, as it is declared by the Hâdôkht: “Gəus vâ aspahê vâ varesa.”’

In Vig. pp. 144, 145, it is said, with reference to announcing the name of the deceased during the celebration of the Srôsh Yast after a death, that ‘it is declared by the Avesta of the Hâdôkht:— “Yêzi narô mazdayasnô hača gaêthâbyô para-irithyêiti, âad hê nâma hadha pitô frageurvayâd; yêzi nâirika para-irithyêiti, âad yad hê nâma hadha pathanô uzgeurvayâd, Spitama Zarathustra! aêtem vâkem nî antare mazdayasnanâm frasastayâd:— If a man who is a Mazda-worshipper passes away from the worldly existence, in such a case one holds out his name with that of his father; and if it be a woman who passes away, in such a case one upholds whatever is her name with that of her husband, O Spitâmân Zaratûst! one shall further bless this statement (that is, its being revered is important) among the Mazda-worshippers, (do thou proclaim and further bless this statement).”’

XXI. STÔD-YAST NASK¹.

It has been already shown, in Dk. VIII, Chap. XLVI, 1 n, that the whole of this Nask is probably still extant in the Yasna and Vîspêrad. About half of the present Yasna appears to consist of five-sixths of this Stôd-yast, to which have been added three fargard's of the Bakö (Nask III), with the Hôṃ and Srôsh Yasts, extracted probably from the Bakân-yast (Nask XIV), and the greater part of the Âtas and Âbân Nyâyises; the whole collection being provided with an introductory and concluding ritual, compiled from other sources, to form the complete ceremonial liturgy of the present Yasna.

There appears to be no sufficient evidence, either internal or external, for ascribing this collection of the liturgy to so late a date as the end of the ninth century, when the compilation of the Dînkard was completed. It is therefore safer, for the present, to assume that the Stôd-yast existed for a long period as a separate Nask (the form described by the Dînkard), even after the greater part of its text had been incorporated with others to form the collected liturgy now known as the Yasna.

Besides the fragments which are specially attributed to particular Nasks, there are also a few writings which closely resemble the Nasks, or their fragments, in general character, but which can hardly be traced to their actual source by means of the accounts given in the Dînkard. Thus, the Aogema-daêkâ might perhaps be supposed to have been extracted from the Baris (see Dk. VIII, Chap. IX, 18), if it did not contain a few Avesta quotations from the Yasna, Vendîdâd, and Yasts. While the quotations from the Ashem-staota, given in Vig. pp. 89, 90, 125-129, 177, 178, are difficult to trace, owing to the name of their source.
